Free Hides Will Help Local Shoe Manufacturing

A Washington dispatch to the Weymouth Gazette and Transcript is of local interest, as it will affect the cost of manufacturing shoes. Congressman Frothingham wires: Washington, June 2 "It is understood here that the Ways and Means Committee of Congress has decided to have hides on the free list, and it is probable this will apply to leather and leather products."

If it is the intention to place shoes on the free lists (under leather products) that would be quite another story.

Mr. Heald of the Stetson Shoe Co. would be pleased to have leather on the free list, but thought shoes should be protected, especially the cheaper grade. Fine shoes would not be affected.

Mr. Drinkwater of the Edwin Clapp & Sons Co. said every shoe manufacturer and tanner welcomed free hides as it would bring more leather from South America into this country. On the other hand it might be a calamity to allow free shoes. At present our shoe industry is safe, as the manufacturing here has been brought to a high state of efficiency, but recently perfected machinery had been shipped all over the world, and operators had gone with it, so that it is possible that with free shoes cheap labor abroad might compete with us seriously and possibly close the factories in the United States. Would not want to see shoes on free list.

G. C. Fletcher, the general manager of the Whitmore-Tirrell Co., would certainly like to see hides on the free list; did not think tanner could control prices. A majority of hides were now imported and there is a duty on shoes there is now a high duty, but at the same time come competition yet not on the finished product. With

MILITARY FUNERAL WORLD WAR VETERAN

Although the weather was anything but pleasant, hundreds of people gathered at the G. A. R. hall on Friday afternoon to pay their last respects to one of the World War heroes, Arthur B. Hurley, formerly of North Weymouth and son of Mr. and Mrs. Simon Hurley, who served with Co. M., 9th Infantry, U. S. A. and was killed in June, 1918.

The service was held under the auspices of the Weymouth post of the American Legion, in charge of Roland H. Haviland, vice commander, and Pasquale Santacroce, adjutant, with Rev. P. J. Dawson of the Immaculate Conception church of the officiating clergy. Joseph Ecker, baritone, and Miss Elva R. Boynton, contralto, sang "Calvary" and "Gathering Home", and the Weymouth Legion band furnished music.

After the services in the hall, a line was formed with the Weymouth Legion band, in charge of drum major John Easton, followed by 200 members of the American Legion in charge of Roland Haviland, vice commander, which escorted the body from G. A. R. hall through Cottage street and down Broad street to Commercial square, with two Grand Army veterans in the front rank, where they entered autos and the funeral party proceeded to St. Paul's cemetery, Hingham. At the entrance the line was again formed, and the body escorted to its last resting place.

Rev. P. J. Dawson read over the grave and a firing squad in charge of Thomas McDonald, fired three volleys and Sumner Peers bugled sounded taps.

In Monday morning Rev. P. J. Dawson said a requiem mass at the St. Jerome church at North Weymouth, which was attended by a delegation from the Weymouth Legion and many friends of the late soldier.

CARPENTERS ACCEPT LESS

A representative of the Carpenters Union of Weymouth informs the Gazette-Transcript that the Union has accepted a reduction of 10% in their wages. The present rate is 20 cents per hour.

DOUBLE WEDDING

June was ushered in by a pretty double wedding at St. Jerome's church North Weymouth, when two daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Stephen Delorey of 133 North street became brides, the ceremony being performed at 3 A. M. Wednesday by Rev. C. I. Riondon of the Church of the Immaculate Conception. Miss Adeline Jane Delorey became the wife of Augustus DeCoste of Quincy, and Miss Mary Catherine Delorey became the wife of Lester Edward Richards of East Weymouth. They were unaccompanied. Mrs. Charles Tobin presided at the organ, and played Lohengrin's "Wedding March." Duets were sung by Mrs. Tobin and Miss O'Rourke. The blessing was by Rev. Joseph Dunn.

Both brides were gowned in white canton crepe with beaded trimmings, their veils caught up with orange blossoms, and they carried bridal roses.

A wedding breakfast followed at the home of the bride's parent, which was decorated with potted plants. Both brides have been showered with many gifts.

Mr. and Mrs. DeCoste went to Nova Scotia for their wedding tour and on their return will reside for the present at 133 North street. After a short wedding trip Mr. and Mrs. Richards will reside on Riley avenue, East Weymouth.

O'LEARY-MILLER

A pretty wedding was solemnized at the Church of the Immaculate Conception on Wednesday afternoon by Rev. C. I. Riondon, when Frances Marguerite Miller, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Miller, became the bride of Eugene O'Leary, son of Mrs. M. O'Leary. The bride wore a handsome gown of white georgette and a tulle veil held in place with orange blossoms. She carried a shower bouquet of bride roses. She was attended by Miss Lottie Lonergan, who wore an orchid georgette gown and black mulline hat and carried sweet peas. John Miller, a brother of the bride, acted as best man. A reception was held at the home of the bride on Commercial street from 7 until 10:30. The couple were assisted in receiving by the bridesmaid and best man. They received many handsome as well as useful presents. The bride's traveling costume was a brown satin dress with coat and hat to match. They left on a late train for a honeymoon to New York and on their return will reside in Watertown.

Smaller Sum Wanted By the Street Railway

The Selectmen expected this week the report of the conference held by Chairman A. C. Heald of the Weymouth Home Rule Committee and Town Counsel Holbrook with the Trustees of the Eastern Massachusetts Street Railway Company, relative to town aid to the street railway during the ensuing year, and will probably issue next week a warrant for a special town meeting.

Last year the town appropriated $28,000 or as much thereof as may be necessary for the year ending June 2, 1921, and raised the full amount. At the present time Town Accountant Dizer reports a balance on this item in the town treasury of $16,507.36. But nothing has been paid since Oct. 1, 1920, and no bill has been presented since that date.

It is said that as a result of the recent conference about $15,000 will be recommended to meet the deficit for the ensuing year.

This year the town meeting business will be translated by the Town Council or Town Meeting Members recently elected, and it is problematical what the result of the deliberations will be.

MEETING OF SELECTMEN
As a result of the petition received from J. Gibbs and others favorable to Sam Beer, it was voted that a junk license be issued to Mr. Beer.

Donald Duval and Thomas McKenna were appointed special police.

Permit was granted to hold dances at Lake View Park; to the A. O. H.

GERMAN WAGES AND PRICES.

German wages at the present time are reported to be about $5 in gold weekly, or roughly one-half of the prewar normal. German prices in terms of gold seem to be on the average around 20 per cent above the prewar normal. The German industrial interests seem to have been able to deceive the German workmen with the depreciated German mark, says Wallace's Farmer. In terms of marks, the German workmen may be getting five or six times what they were before the war, but in terms of what the money will buy, they are getting far less. It is a strange thing that people have come so to worship money that they will allow themselves to be deceived. As long as German money has a fluctuating gold value, it is likely that the United States will find Germany a very hard competitor to beat. With a currency of uncertain value, it is possible to make labor do more work for less return than would otherwise be the case. Germany will eventually pay for the war by the self-denial of her laboring people, a self-denial enforced by a manipulated currency system.

The cause of oyster poisoning, like that of clam poisoning, is still in doubt. Fresh oysters in season are always safe. According to Gardet, all oysters are diseased during the summer. The nature of the disease was not determined, but it was found that diseased oysters possess a characteristic milky appearance and that the liver is enlarged and gray and soft, according to George H. Glover of the Colorado Agricultural college. The sale of oysters is prohibited from May to August and poisoning by oysters may occur in September and October. It is better not to take a chance on oysters that do not smell fresh, and this is most likely to occur in the first oysters that appear in the market early in the fall.

The secretary of agriculture says there is a surplus of onions in the country and urges people to eat more onions. Consumption depends largely upon price. The country's onion trouble is, the speculators store the late crop and sell at high prices, using the fall surplus to depress the spring crop and the spring surplus to depress the fall crop, says Houston Post. They are the hellions who gouge the producer and the consumer.

Put down as another fruitless occupation, that men would rather pursue than work, the telling of adventures that never occurred and the repetition of advice given by successful politicians who never followed it.

It must be a great relief to Germany to know what it will be required to pay for the war. Probably, too, the amount will deter any other nation from engaging in a similar pastime for at least 42 years.

Statistics show that there is at present one motorcar for every two families. But if reckless and drunken drivers speed up a bit in their efforts at depopulation there will in time be one car per family.

Experts now tell us that the United States has enough coal to last 3,000 years. The real question right now is, have we got enough to last till it's safe to let the furnace fire go out for the summer?

And now abideth aspiration, inspiration and perspiration, these three, but the greatest and most necessary of these in this world right now is perspiration properly superinduced.

Turkey will compel men above twenty-four years of age to marry, the assumption being that if a man can't support a wife by that time, the wife will be able to support him.

War is a great enemy to human life, of course, but strike generation averages and it will be found that ignorance and negligence are the greater twin enemies of humanity.

—A man may never have been made a fool of by any woman, but somewhere there is always a woman who could do it.

ONE OF THE BEST ASSETS OF A TOWN

Editor Gazette-Transcript:

I think this is a good time for me to express my appreciation of the great improvement recently made in the appearance of the Gazette. You remember that some time ago I offered some criticisms, (not voluntary, however, but at your request) but my opinion at the present time is wholly unsolicited, and I take pleasure in saying that I believe there is no need today for criticism. Not that I think the paper is perfect, and I hope the time will never come when you think that, for the only way to succeed is to strive for better results, and I think it is evident that you are trying to make each issue superior to its predecessor, and I wish you good luck in your endeavors.

The mechanical makeup of your paper is vastly superior to that of a year ago, and the news columns have improved wonderfully. The feature sections are of high grade and worthy of comment.

I am in position to know somewhat of the requirements in the publishing of a newspaper. It is a common thing to see on exhibition articles like quilts, rugs, tables and chairs composed of a thousand pieces which have taken the makers years to produce, and they are thought to be wonderful examples of handicraft and are highly praised. But think of the thousands upon thousands of pieces of type, rules etc., which a newspaper is composed of. Every letter, dot and dash represents many motions of the operator and every one must be fitted with equal exactness of the finest mosaic. Yet the slightest error is criticized and much adverse comment is the result.

So when your readers notice some little inaccuracy in the Gazette let them remember the thousands of perfectly placed and spaced types and look with kindly disposition on such errors. Think of the work which the editor is compelled to do. Remember the thousands of readers—no two alike—what will please one will be considered utterly worthless by others, and realize, if you can, what a wide variety of subjects must be treated in order that each may find something of interest.

If I should attempt to describe what I thought a perfect paper should be like, I think I should find that I had undertaken too much, but I will say that I think the Gazette has good material and is using it in a satisfactory manner; a few hundred more subscriptions would help wonderfully. A paper can't be run without money, and if a goodly number of our people would send in their subscriptions I will predict a paper that will be a credit to the town, and a good newspaper is one of the best assets any town can have.

HOWARD H. JOY

Tracing British Names.

The word Scot, as applied to those living north of the Tweed, is said to have an interesting history. The word is the same as "Scythian" in etymology; the root of both is "set." The Greeks had no "c" in their alphabet, and would change "t" into "th," so that the root became "ekth," by adding a phonetic vowel we get "skuth-al" (Scythians) and "Scoth-al" (Scots). The Welsh disliked "s" at the beginning of a word and would change it to "ys;" they would also change "c" or "k" into "g;" and "th" into "d." Therefore the Welsh root became "Ysgod," and "Skoth" would become "Ysgod." Now the Saxons would change the "g" back to "c" and the "d" to "t;" and would cut off the Welsh "y;" whence the word became "Scot." Before the Third century Scotland was called Caledonia or Alban; England, of course, is Albion.

The Jungle of Ceylon.

The jungle is as terrible as an army with banners. Sleeping in the little resthouse, when the night has fallen, it comes close up to you, creeping, leaning over you, calling, whispering, vibrating with secret life. A word more—only one—a movement, and you would know the meaning and be gathered into the heart of it; but always there is something fine, impalpable, between, and you catch but a breath of the whisper. Very wonderful is the jungle! In the moonlight of a small clearing I saw the huge bulk of three wild elephants feeding. They vanished like wraiths into the depths. The fireflies were hosting in the air like flitting diamonds. Stealthy life and movement were about me; the jungle, wide awake and aware, moving on its own occasion.—L. Adams Beck, in the Atlantic Monthly.

Gambetta's Eye Preserved.

Very few of the hundreds of spectators who have seen Gambetta's heart carried in procession through Paris know that another portion of his body is above ground. Long before his death one of his eyes was so badly damaged by a blow that it had to be removed, says the continental edition of the London Mail. The doctor who performed the operation caused the eye to be specially treated to preserve it. It was placed in a small glass phial, which the doctor gave to one of his pupils, now practicing as an oculist in Paris. Its owner has expressed the intention of giving the eye either to the Gambetta family or to the state.

Making It Easy for Grandma.

Bobbie was invited to visit his grandmother for two weeks, and his mother had equipped him with plenty of pretty clothes. After trying them all on, he remarked: "You better let me wear them to show in. I can get acquainted with grandma."

Attractive Kurdish Women.

Kurdish women in Persia are particularly attractive. They go unveiled, and they have the straight, direct look of men. If you smile at them the direct look breaks into the most alluring of answering smiles. There is something about the Kurdish women graceful and delicious and sweet. They make one think of grapes and perfumed flowers and first love. They won't always let their men take a second wife, settling the matter by promising to murder Number Two or otherwise upset family peace. Not many of them accepted the change in dress from their old free-moving robes ordered by the Shah Nasser-ed-Din, some four decades ago.

Dachshund a Hunting Dog.

The dachshund is a true hound and is used for hunting in Europe, especially for getting foxes and other such animals out of holes, as it is a great digger, and its peculiar build enables it to go down a relatively small hole. It has an excellent nose, and will trail rabbits, foxes and other game with great tenacity, but it is little used for hunting in this country because it is hard to train and manage, paying little attention to orders, and doing as it pleases. If the game goes to earth, it is almost impossible to get the dachshund away until it has been dug out. This breed is of great antiquity, one of its kind being painted on an Egyptian monument of 2000 B. C.

The Birds at Play.

Resting on the rail under the hawthorn for a minute or two in early spring, when it was too chilly to stay long, I watched a flock of rooks and jackdaws soaring in the sky. Round and round and ever upward they circled, the jackdaws, of course, betraying their presence by their call; up toward the blue, as if in the joy of their hearts they held a festival, happy in the genial weather and the approach of the nesting time. This soaring and wheeling is evidently done for recreation, like a dance.—Christian Science Monitor.

Economy rides on U.S. Tires—

If you could get together all the car owners you know, you'd probably find that their tire experiences had been much the same.

Most of them have taken their fling at "job lots," "discontinued lines" and "surplus stocks." Soon or late, nearly all settled back on quality first as the one sound assurance of tire value.

As soon as a man forgets the cut-price tag, and comes to the dealer who concentrates on a full, completely sized stock of U. S. Tires—he learns what it means to get fresh, live tires—not once in a while but every time.

Not merely in the big cities, but in his own home town.

Not merely for the heavy car, but for the medium and light-weight car—a full selection of size, tread and type.

Your U. S. Tire dealer can give you this service because of the service he gets from his neighboring U. S. Factory Branch. There are 92 of these Branches. Each gets its share of U. S. Tires, so that the dealer is always supplied with fresh, live stock.

U. S. Tires sell as fast as they are made. There is no over production. No surplus piled up waiting for a "market."

Wherever you buy a U. S. Tire—you buy a tire of current production, as full of life and value as the day it left the makers.

HANDLE NEW CAR WITH MUCH CARE

After First Trip Go Over Nuts and Bolts and Make Sure They Are All Tight.

MAKE FREQUENT INSPECTIONS

Driver Should Scrutinize Lubrication
Chart and Familiarize Himself With Location of Every Grease Cup and Oil Hole.

It is of prime importance to handle the new car carefully. After the first trip take a wrench and go over every nut and bolt to make certain they are all tight. The engine parts should receive especial attention, for the slightest defect will result in misfiring and poor carburetion, writes William H. Stewart in New York Times. Make your inspections frequently for the first 1,000 miles until the car has worn in somewhat, then you can relax your vigilance a bit.

Make a thorough study of your instruction book. Look at the lubrication chart and familiarize yourself with the location of every grease cup and oil hole, then see that they are kept filled properly. This will insure you against worn parts or scored bearings and, incidentally, allow you to learn the lubrication system thoroughly.

New Car Is Stiff.

When an automobile is built the engine has been run but little and every part is fitted tight to make them snug after the roughness has worn off. Consequently the car is very stiff and will not show much speed until those parts wear in. So don't exceed twenty-five miles an hour until the speedometer registers 1,000 miles. By so doing each part will "find itself" and you will be perfectly safe in exceeding thirty miles per hour. If you force a car before it has obtained the 1,000 miles it will result in a noisy engine and premature repairs.

Drain off the oil every 500 miles and replace it with fresh. The quantity of grit and dirt that comes from the crank-case is usually surprising.

The bearings and pistons throw off small particles of metal which if not removed with the old oil will work into the bearings and cause trouble. Perhaps the motor will show a tendency to overheat when new. Don't let this worry you for it is merely the friction caused in wearing off the rough surface of the engine. Drive intelligently and use plenty of oil and water and soon this trouble will disappear.

Clean Body Carefully.

The body cleaning should be done very carefully for the first month or so. Use a simple flow of water, without spray or force, otherwise the finish will be marred. The longer you drive without unnecessary cleaning, the harder the varnish will become.

Do not allow the engine to race or to run when the car is standing. Self-starters are made to be used and it is good for the battery to be operated intelligently.

Keep the tires fully inflated—soft tires consume power as well as destroy themselves.

Keep the carburetor adjusted at the leanest possible mixture—a lean mixture reduces carbon deposits.

Don't try to economize by purchasing the "just as good" oil. Buy the best grade and change the supply about every 500 miles. This will be most economical in the long run.

If you follow the car driven by an expert you will notice that he maintains a constant speed; that he does not loaf along and then suddenly jump to forty miles an hour. More gasoline is used when you accelerate. Select a safe driving speed, making only gradual speed changes when it is necessary.

Strong Spring Set Into Cement Floor

Weight of Machine Passes

The plan of having an electric automobile horn placed in the entrance of a garage to notify pedestrians that a car is about to cross the sidewalk is not a new one, but the operation of the horn usually depends on the memory of an employee. Link motions for doing this automatically can, of course, be built in many different ways, but are likely to give trouble from being too complicated, from failure to work at the right time, or a possibility of working at the wrong time.

In the illustration, a long lever is set into the cement floor across the garage exit, having underneath it a strong spring, so that it cannot be depressed by the weight of a man anywhere upon it, or by the weight of a car, except as a wheel crosses its outer end. The end near the hinge is sunk flush with the door. A simple link motion pushes a button which connects the horn either to a battery of dry cells, or to the six-volt testing mains, which are available in many garages.—Popular Mechanics Magazine.

Do not clutch the wheel with a vise-like grip. It is not strength which guides the car, but sureness of hand.

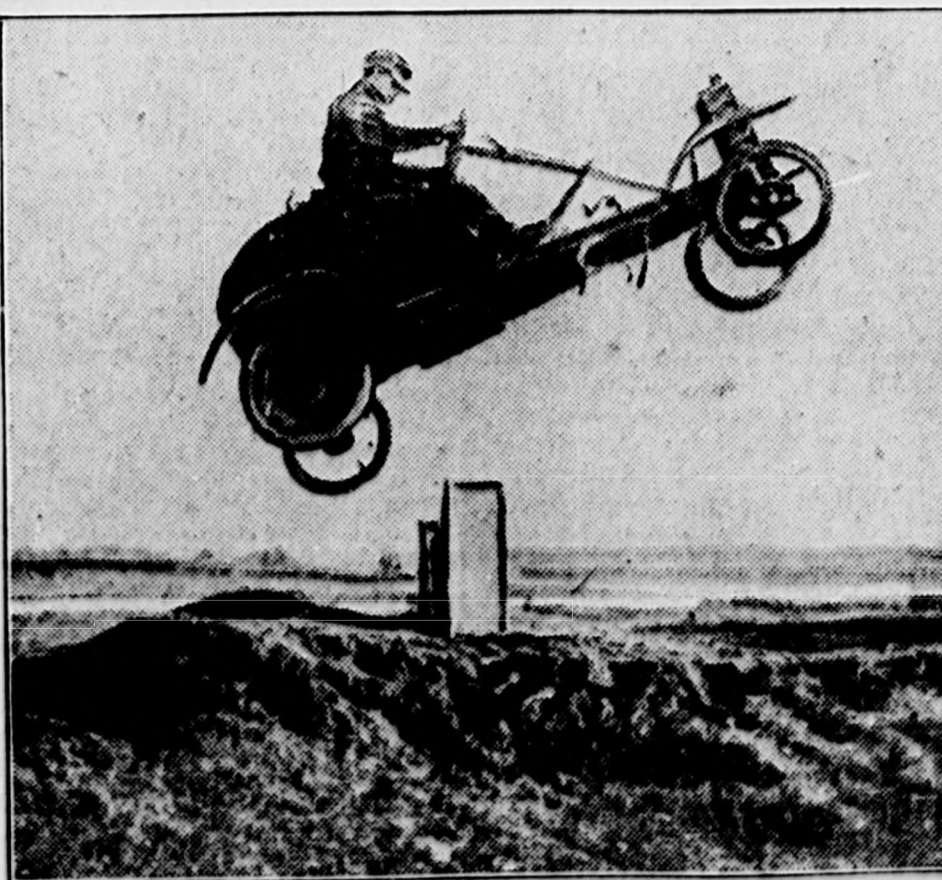

Colorado, with a registration of 128,951 motor vehicles, averaged a consumption of 399 gallons of gasoline per car last year.

Saskatchewan, with a total of 60,352 automobiles and 424 motorcycles, now stands second in Canada, in regard to the number of registered motor vehicles.

While the Automobile Club of Rochester, N. Y., is one of the largest motor clubs in the country, plans of a membership campaign are under way to boost the roll to 10,000 members.

Because of perfect year-round conditions, motor vehicles in Florida consumed on an average of 942.7 gallons of gasoline last year. The average consumption in the United States is 450 gallons.

CAR LEAPS OVER OBSTRUCTIONS

A new invention by M. Gauthier, a well-known French automobile engineer, makes it possible for any light car to leap through the air over obstructions. The device in the rear of the machine does the trick. The photo shows a test car, equipped with the Gauthier device, making a high leap in Paris recently. The device is controlled from the chauffeur's seat.

It Pays to Be Safe

Don't wait until it is too late. Remember Lightning strikes and destroys millions of dollars worth of property and kills hundreds of people every year.

You have no assurance that this season it may not be your turn to be struck—unless you get Shinn-Flat protection now.

Protect
Now—Before Lightning Strikes!

Shinn-Flat

Prevents Lightning Losses

Shinn-Flat is superior to any other form of rod or conductor, for these reasons:

- 1—It is woven in a flat cable, with greater carrying capacity for electricity.
- 2—The weave of Shinn-Flat allows for expansion and contraction.
- 3—The flat form permits each wire to come in contact with moist earth, giving good grounding.
- 4—The Shinn patented four-legged brace, with self-locking feature, holds top always in place.
- 5—Shinn-Flat is always installed by our licensed Dealer, whom we have instructed.
- 6—A cash Bond issued by a large Bonding Company insures your money back if damage by Lightning occurs.

Telephone us and we will gladly send you our book, "Cause and Control of Lightning," and estimate of cost.

PIANOS BOUGHT AND SOLD

Thieves entered the store of L. Vallas & Co., newsdealers in Bates Opera House block sometime last night and carried off cigars and cigarettes valued at $125, and $75 in silver. The thieves gained entrance by breaking the glass in a door in the rear of the store. The break was committed by parties who evidently were well acquainted with the methods of Mr. Vallas, as the $75 in silver was hid away in a place supposed to be known only to the proprietor and clerks.

A Beautiful Weymouth

To the People of Weymouth:

It has been my pleasure to establish in Weymouth a new system, a novel type of service. In order that all may understand this service more thoroughly I feel it must be explained in detail.

Everything that tends toward the creation of "A More Beautiful Weymouth" is undertaken by this service.

High-class help is furnished to care for lawns, estates or gardens, large or small, by the hour, job or season.

Only the finest trees, shrubs or plants are used in new work, and these are supplied to anyone who desires them.

Drives are made, trellises, arbors and ornamental fences built, garden furniture supplied, mason work figured, blue-prints furnished for home grounds, all types of gardens designed and planted to your satisfaction. It is for the benefit of all, for you to inquire concerning this fine, new type of service. No charge for first visit.

I wish to thank the people of Weymouth for the fine reception they have already accorded this new service.

Respectfully yours,
JAMES D. LOEFFLER.

FASCINATION IN AIR FLIGHT

Various Reasons Advanced Why People Will Pay High Price for Short Trip Through Space.

Why do people fly? Would you care for a spin in the air so much as to spend $15 for a 20 minutes' flight? If so, what is your motive?

Interviewing a half dozen commercial aviators along Miami's water front on this subject brought the following facts to light:

About 60 per cent of all passengers carried on the short 20 minutes' sight-seeing flights are women.

According to aviators the types to whom scraping the clouds appeals are:

The wealthy man—the business man. He wants to see what flying is like. He sees the future of commercial aviation. The short flight offers also a novel method of entertaining friends.

The "sport." He flies for the excitement of the thing. He usually insists on stunt flying. Then, too, an occasional flight provides a way of demonstrating to his friends his sporting self.

The average man. He finds in the short flight at $15 for himself or $25 for himself and a companion a method of realizing the thrill and pleasures of the air. He is presented with an opportunity of realizing an overwhelming desire at a minimum expense.

The large percentage of women passengers is considered something of a slap at those reveling in the thought that women were too timid to fly. According to pilots, in most cases women accept an offer of an aerial spin on the direct dare of their masculine companion.—Miami (Fla.) Herald.

TRAINING WAIFS OF CAIRO

Government of Egyptian City Has Instituted School Where Stray Boys Will Be Educated.

It looks as if the problem of the waifs and strays of Cairo was going to receive at last serious attention.

After much insistence on the part of some public-spirited officials a special school for boys of this class has been opened in the environs of Cairo, where they will be looked after and trained by the government without their having committed some crime to admit them into the reformatory, previously the only institution of the kind.

Nothing so far has been done for the girl children, though another home is promised for this purpose. It is therefore satisfactory to hear of the formation of an organization called the "Brotherhood Federation," ostensibly nonsectarian and international, with the object of looking after and improving the lot of the child waifs generally.

A meeting recently held in support of this movement was given much prominence in the local English papers, but in spite of its intimate bearing on a purely Egyptian problem none of the Arabic papers appears to have given the matter any publicity.—Christian Science Monitor.

Progressed by Slow Stages.

Thirty years ago the men of Hartshay, a hamlet of Derbyshire, England, were accustomed to meet at a bridge on the edge of the town, where they would read the papers and discuss events. This was all right in summer time, but in the winter it was different and they would occasionally adjourn to a sheltered spot under the bridge. From this they moved into a vacated pigsty and later annexed another pigsty. This rude building was improved by their own efforts until it was a fairly comfortable place. From this humble origin there is now a rather pretentious library, with the best papers and magazines and a stock of good books.

Will'd Everything Away.

A lawyer in Chicago was retained by a contractor to draw up his will. The task was accomplished apparently to the satisfaction of the client; the lawyer's fee was paid, and the latter supposed, of course, that the matter had been concluded. To his great surprise, therefore, he received another call from his client the next day, who expressed his conviction that the affair had not been properly adjusted.

"Why, what's the trouble?" asked the legal light.

"Trouble enough," said the man. "I didn't sleep the whole night through for thinkin' of that will! You've fixed it so I've not left myself a chair to sit on!"—Philadelphia Ledger.

Comparisons Are Sometimes Odious.

Johnny was attending his first grade school, after graduating from kindergarten, where he greatly adored his teacher, a pretty young woman in her teens. His mother noticed his lack of enthusiasm in his new studies, and that he never mentioned his teacher.

Finally, one night when she was putting him to bed, she asked: "Johnny, don't you like your new teacher?"

"Oh, I like her well enough," he replied, "but, mother, she looks just like a potato chip."

Chinese Railways.

Of 6,836 miles of railway in China in 1918, more than 4,000 miles of main and branch lines were owned and operated by the government, these comprising 14 railways in 14 out of the 18 provinces. In addition there were 11 provincial and private railways (some owned by mining companies) aggregating 425 miles and five concession lines aggregating near 2,300 miles.

THE WOODS

By DOUGLAS MALLOCH

THE SPORT.

MY BOY, it's the end of the season—
Your campstake you've got in your clothes;

It isn't much use fer to reason
With you, I suppose.
I know how the dollars are burnin'
A hole in your pocket right now;
You'll blow 'em—what use to be learnin'
A lumberjack how?

They're waitin' down there fer you, brother:
The barkeep is loadin' the gin;
Each guy has some game er another Fer takin' you in.
The dames that are plastered an' painted

Are puttin' on powder fer fair—
The ladies whose kisses are talented
Are waitin' your there.

I've been through the mill, an' I know it—
I know jest the fool that you are;
Oh, you'll be a sport, an' you'll throw it

In gobs on the bar.
It's "Drinks fer the house!" you'll be yellin';

The bums will be there to partake.
They'll laugh at the stories you're tellin',
An' gobble your stake.

While you have been pullin' a briar,
With beans an' sow-belly to chew,
The grafters have set by the fire
A waitin' fer you—

The streak up their backs it is yellah,
An' life without work is the rule;
They'll say you're a prince of a fellow
An' think you're a fool.

So work like a dog in the winter,
An' act like an ass in the spring;
Some guy with a jack-knife an' splinter

Will say you're a king.
It's blood, an' it's bone, an' it's muscle,
You're throwin' up there on the bar;
Next week fer a job you kin rustle,
The fool that you are.

Oh, yes, they all think he's the candy,
A sport, a good fellow, who spends;
I hope, when they say you're a dandy,
You're proud of your friends.

When you know jest how little there's in it,
Will you hand out your good money still?
When you know they're but friends fer a minute?

You probably will.

EVERYDAY LUNCHEONS.

A GOOD all-round substantial dish which will do for a main dish is Potato Soup.

Cook one-half dozen good sized potatoes, one-half dozen onions together in boiling salted water until tender. Then press them through a puree sieve, add butter, milk, salt and pepper, and serve piping hot.

Luncheon Eggs.

Cut in slices three or four hard-cooked eggs. Prepare a rich white sauce, using two tablespoonfuls each of flour and butter, and when well blended add one cupful of rich milk; cook until smooth and thick, season with salt and pepper and stir in the eggs. Prepare small pieces of buttered bread, pour over the sauce and bake until hot in a moderate oven.

Potato Salad.

Cut in cubes three cold cooked potatoes, add three hard-cooked eggs, cut in bits, one-half cupful of walnuts and a dozen olives cut in small pieces. Pour over a French dressing made by using one tablespoonful of vinegar to three of oil, salt, cayenne pepper and a dash of catsup and onion juice.

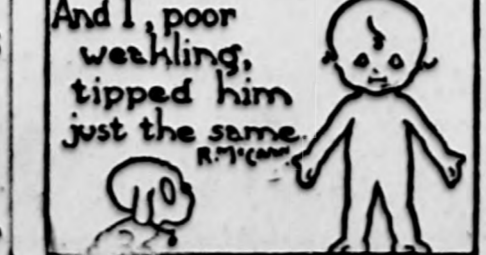

Custard Pie.

Prepare a pastry-lined pie plate and fill with the following: One pint of milk mixed with four tablespoonfuls of sugar, creamed with a teaspoonful of butter; add three beaten eggs, a half teaspoonful of grated nutmeg and bake in a hot oven at first to brown the crust, then lower the heat until the custard seems firm to the center.

Something to Think About

By F. A. WALKER

BLONDES AND BRAINS

A LEARNED judge was recently quoted as announcing from his bench that he would not approve of blonde ladies as members of a jury which was about to hear a case under his jurisdiction.

"Blondes are fickle," were the words attributed to the justice, intimating that fickleness is a bar to what the law is supposed to assure the person on trial.

A year or so ago a big Western employer in advertising for office help announced that he would not receive the applications of blondes, giving as a reason that he had found them inattentive to work and temperamental in disposition.

There has always been a good deal of discussion regarding the relative attractiveness of blondes and brunettes despite the fact that in the long ago when the caveman was the highest type of civilization, we were all blonde, or at least red hair was the darkest tint.

The reason why nature covered primeval men and women with blonde or red hair was twofold; that it served the same purposes of low visibility which is gained by the animals whose fur coats blend with the surroundings in which they live and the fact that those colors better protected the skin from the effects of direct sunlight.

We know that these colors of hair prevailed because in the discovery of almost every burial place of people of that time light or reddish tinged hair has been found.

It is interesting to note that the three parts of the body which longest resist the disintegration which follows death are the teeth, the finger nails and the hair, and of these the last two are very nearly of the same character.

Which is getting some little way distant from the contention that blonde women are not fit for jury duty because they are fickle.

Dido, queen of Carthage, of whom Virgil writes in the Aeneid, was not fickle, although she was a blonde. She stuck to her hero through thick and thin and killed herself with a sword that he furnished.

Cleopatra, who had red hair, a shade darker than the real blonde, was not what one might call absolutely constant in her devotions, but in modern society she might not be listed as extremely fickle.

But the analyzing of society, ancient or modern, according to the color of the hair, would not furnish very substantial basis for judging either women or men, blondes or brunettes.

It is what is just under their hair that establishes the real qualifications for any sort of duty.

Brains are all one color. If the color of hair determined ability what would become of the unfortunates who haven't any hair at all?

Never mind about your hair, young lady readers. Don't bother about its color, and don't spend too much time "fixing" it.

If you are to be anxious about anything, be anxious about the inside of your head instead of the outside. That's the side that counts.

THE GIRL ON THE JOB

How to Succeed—How to Get Ahead—How to Make Good

By JESSIE ROBERTS

LIBRARY WORK

LIBRARY work has a great appeal to many women. A girl is sure of a good deal of liberty in such work, can add to its value and interest if she be so minded, and can feel fairly certain of permanent employment.

But the salaries are small, very small. Like the teacher, the librarian must struggle to make both ends meet and keep up appearances. She has usually had a thorough education and a special training that has cost money. Sometimes she begins her work with a debt to pay off. She often injures her health in the attempt to do this.

This is wrong. I know one young woman who is librarian in a technical library. Everything about the work is attractive and interesting; the girl loves it. But she could not afford to keep the position were it not that she has a small private income to help, and no one dependent upon her. She gets only $1,300 a year, with a short vacation.

Libraries and library positions are to see a great increase in the next few years. Clever and well-bred women will be in demand. But how can such women afford, with living expenses what they are, to take positions so poorly paid?

There must be a change in these things.

The community must recognize that positions of this kind, which are an asset to the whole neighborhood, should receive a fair return. A good library cannot be good unless the librarians who work in it are well trained and first-class. Such cannot go on forever making sacrifices because they wish to serve the community, and love the labor they do.

It is high time to insist on a proper increase in library salaries.

THE ROMANCE OF WORDS

"BUMPER."

USED in the sense of a "bumper" of wine, and therefore belonging to the malt, vinous and dead languages—this word harks back to the days of the Restoration when the drinking was deep and the shouting long and when, as penance for any slip of the tongue or forgetfulness of manners, the culprit was sentenced to drink a "bumper" without spilling a drop.

As this feat did not depend so much upon the liquid capacity of the drinker as upon the steadiness of his nerves, it was no light task—particularly well along toward morning. A large goblet or a small bowl was filled to the brim with wine and then a few additional drops were carefully added, so that the liquid would not overflow but would actually rise a fraction of an inch over the top of the containing vessel. The surface, being convex, was said to be "bumped up" and it was then accepted as a true "bumper." It is in this sense of "more than full" that we still refer to a "bumper crop" or a "bumper audience."

Modena Cathedral.

The cathedral at Modena, Italy, consecrated in 1184, is a well-designed Romanesque structure. The west facade is one of the best of its date in Italy. It has three round-arched portals, a gallery of graceful triple arcades which is continued around the church, a large wheel window and much interesting sculpture. There are two sculptured porches on the south side. The three-aisled interior contains sculpture and tombs. The Ghirlandina tower, the campanile of the cathedral, finished to the spire in 1315, is 315 feet high. The massive square lower stage, about 200 feet high, bears the slender spire, which springs from an octagon of two arched tiers and is pierced with flower-like openings. Other objects of interest are the art academy, university, picture gallery, library and the ducal palace. Modena became a Roman colony about 183 B. C. It was situated on the Aemilian way, and was a flourishing Roman city.

Work.

If the busy rich people watched and rebuked the idle rich people, all would be right among them; and if the busy poor people watched and rebuked the idle poor people, all would be right among them. But each looks for the fault of the other. A hard-working man of property is particularly offended by an idle beggar; and an orderly but poor workman is naturally intolerant of the licentious luxury of the rich. And what is severe judgment in the minds of the just men of either class becomes fierce enmity in the unjust—but among the unjust only. None but the dissolute among the poor look upon the rich as their natural enemies or desire to pillage their homes and divide their property. None but the dissolute among the rich speak in opprobrious terms of the vices and follies of the poor.—John Ruskin.

Changing Colors of Gems.

Experiments have proved that it is possible to change the color of certain precious and semi-precious stones by exposing them to the action of radium. A scientist put a number of sapphires of different kinds into a bag that contained a small quantity of radium. A month later the white sapphires had become yellow, the blue sapphires, green; the wine-colored sapphires, red, and the dark blue sapphires, violet.

Read this: Benj. W. Hewitt, 97 Broad street, Weymouth, says: "I had kidney trouble and I could hardly straighten up. I had backache and was annoyed with frequent action of my kidneys. I heard of Doan's Kidney Pills and used two boxes and the trouble disappeared. At my work I have to bend over constantly. I have had no return of the trouble and am glad to recommend Doan's to others." (Statement given March 24, 1913.)

On February 10, 1921, Mr. Hewitt said: "I still think Doan's Kidney Pills are the best ever. I use them whenever my back or kidneys bother me and they never fail to relieve the trouble in a short time."

WEYMOUTH 8 ROCKLAND 7

Weymouth High school baseball team defeated Rockland High team at Clapp's field on Tuesday afternoon 8 to 7. Although McPherson, pitcher for Weymouth, was hit harder than Gibson of Randolph, Weymouth bunched hits and fielder better than Rockland, which accounts for their win. Score: Weymouth 2 1 1 0 0 1 2 *—8
Rockland 0 0 1 0 3 0 9 3 0—7
Batteries—McPherson and Higgins; Gibson and Mahoney.

DIAMOND PICK-UPS

By Charlie Horse
Phil Cullen, who owns up to nearly 25 years in "semi-pro" baseball, must be drinking at the fountain of perpetual youth. Last year he had an eventful season with the K. of C. team, except his final appearance of the season when he met defeat at the hands of the Weymouth All-Stars. They pounded him hard for 4 innings, when Phil voluntarily walked out of the box in disgust. The other evening he took a team down to Hingham, which included Bill Keyser, another who refuses to grow old, and pitched his team to a 12 to 9 victory over the Marines.

There is some agitation among the Knights of Columbus for a baseball team, now that Connie Condrick is back, although there are other candidates in the field, including Ray Condrick, who is said to have been a crackerjack back in his high school days. William Nolan, a recent graduate of the High school, is another who is desirous of showing his wares. There seems to be enough Condricks in Weymouth to make up a formidable baseball team, not forgetting the catcher, Eddie Condrick, who is also teamed with the chin music, keeping the crowd in roars by his ludicrous remarks.

The Crescent lodge of Odd Fellows will fight hard this season to keep the magnificent league cup in their possession. Paul Humphrey is undoubtedly the best hitter and all-round player they have, and their chances of repeating their success of last season depends on whether he plays with them again this year. The Eagle A. C. of East Weymouth have not put their team into the field as yet. They sustained a big loss when Melvin Knight moved to Brockton since the close of last season. Knight pitched them to 12 victories out of 14 games during 1920. Anderson, the High school pitcher, may play with them when school closes.

Dan Howley of Broad street, with Ty Cobb and the rest of the Detroit baseball club, will be in Boston on June 17. His fellow townsmen should make an effort to do him the honor that is becoming to a successful citizen.

Being the same premises conveyed to me by the Weymouth and Braintree Realty Company by deed of even date, to be recorded aforesaid, and subject to restrictions as set forth in said deed.
Said premises will be sold subject to taxes and restrictions of record. Terms will be announced at time of sale.

NECKTIE HALTED A ROMANCE

Lovers Who Had Been Apart for Forty Years Made Up When Man Wore Woman's Present.

Forty years ago John Emmons and Charity Timmons of Bishopville, Del., were twenty years old and sweethearts. With her own hands Miss Timmons made a necktie as a gift for her young gallant. The evening of the day he received it Emmons put it on. He didn't like the colors and replaced it.

As usual, he visited Miss Timmons that evening, according to a Selbyville (Del.) dispatch to the Philadelphia Ledger. It was a nice summer night. The moon revealed that he was not wearing love's token and Miss Timmons demanded the reason.

"It's too loud," replied the youth.

"Do you mean you will never wear it? Then you don't love me," sobbed the girl, and she went into the house.

That apparently was the end of the romance. Emmons went to Portland, Ore., and prospered. As the owner of a big department store in the far Northwestern city, he returned to Bishopville last Christmas for a visit. It was inevitable that he should meet his former sweetheart in the village. Soon each learned that the old love would not die; that each had considered the other the only mate and that neither had married.

Of course, Emmons proposed. Miss Timmons did not refuse him, but she bought a tie as nearly like the one that started all the trouble as she could find. Then, when he wore it without flinching, she coyly murmured "yes." And so they were married the other evening.

PREPARING TURF FOR FUEL

New Method, Said to Have Originated in Russia, May Result in Relieving Shortage.

A new method of drying turf to relieve the serious fuel shortage in Finland has been put in operation in various Scandinavian countries. The new method was invented by engineers working under orders from the Russian soviet government, to find a more labor-saving method of preparing turf as fuel for the great central power station near Moscow, the process being made known in Finland through an escaping engineer. The fundamental principle of the process is quite simple. The raw turf in the swamp, by a powerful jet of water under a pressure of 20 atmospheres, is freed from all old roots and changed to thin mud. This is pumped out on a drying field and spread in layers. When sufficiently dry it is cut into bricks of uniform size by means of a tractor. The turf pump is constructed like an ordinary water turbine, is reversible with aid of electric motor, is equipped with a cutting apparatus which completes the work of the water jet, and can be raised or lowered as the surface of the mud varies. The entire equipment is mounted on a car which can be pushed forward or backward on rails along the line of work.—Scientific American.

HINGHAM 7, WEYMOUTH 3

At Clapp's field yesterday Weymouth High lost to Hingham High 7 to 3. Weymouth secured more hits, but at the same time made more errors.

Matter-of-Fact Genius.

You can best approach genius by adding value to whatever you touch. No task should be allowed to pass your hands without receiving benefit from contact with you. Pains-taking fidelity and plodding accuracy never fail to bless whatever they touch. Men who work for the pay may slight things. Men who take pride in their output have regard to the product, knowing that the pay is bound to come when the job reflects the character of the man behind it. The fact is that men who really bear the stamp of genius think nothing about it. They are busy writing their names into well-done tasks.—Exchange.

Never Go Back.

After you have started something good keep it going. It's far easier to keep up momentum than it is to gain it. Yet just there is where so many fail. You may even have to slow up at times. Slow up when the signal tells you to, but keep moving. The fact that you are moving is the chance to start quickly when the sign says "go on." The wise man never lets his hold go.

Reynolds Post Parades With 42 of 46 Members

Rain or shine, the veterans of the Grand Army of the Republic gathered on Memorial Day to perform their sacred duty of decorating the graves of their old comrades of 61-65. Early Monday morning rain was falling and the indications were that the day would be unfavorable, but the rain ceased and the sun dispelled the clouds, and soon ideal weather prevailed.

The Grand Army exercises for the day were carried out as per general orders of Commander Francis A. Bicknell of Reynolds Post. Assembling at Thomas' Corner the veterans were decorated by members of the Daughters of Veterans. Again Carter's Band was engaged for the day and contributed much to the program with band concerts in the public squares, hymns and appropriate selections at the cemeteries, and at the church services in the afternoon.

Escorted by the band, the Sons of Veterans, the American Legion, the Boy Scouts, the Girl Scouts, and the school children the veterans visited the Old North cemetery, the Village cemetery, St. Francis Xavier cemetery, also Highland, Lakeview, Elmwood, Mt. Hope and Fairmount, at each of which the services were much the same. After a selection by the band taps were sounded, and plants were deposited at each soldier's grave either by a member of the Sons of Veterans, the American Legion, the Boy Scouts, the Girl Scouts, or school children.

En route Carter's band gave concerts at Washington Square and Columbian Square.

The command reached Grand Army hall at East Weymouth at noon, and soon the veterans and guests were enjoying a dinner served by the Women's Relief Corps, Sons of Veterans Auxiliary and the Daughters of Veterans. At the head table were the Selectmen of Weymouth, the clergy, the press and other guests.

Mrs. Caroline Sewall was chairman of the dinner committee and was assisted by Mrs. Marcia Belcher, Mrs. Jennie Keene, Mrs. Annie Pratt, Mrs. Mary White and Mrs. Mary Woodbury of the W. R. C.; Mrs. Hannah Abbott, Mrs. Marion Hunt, Mrs. Annie Bachelder, Mrs. Mary Flint and Mrs. Emma Hawes of the Sons of Veterans Auxiliary; and Mrs. Ida Farrington, Mrs. Helen Lewis, Mrs. Georgette Hunt, Mrs. Emma Kilbourn, Mrs. Stella Whelan, and Miss Una Carlton.

The band concert in front of G. A. R. hall was altogether too short to please many.

Escorted by the band, the various organizations marched from the hall to the Congregational church, there being at least 25 flags in line.

Afternoon Exercises

The exercises in the afternoon at the Congregational church at East Weymouth were largely attended by the public. Commander F. A. Bicknell presided and the program included:

America Band and Audience Prayer Rev. Earl E. Story
Welcome Commander Bicknell
"Departed Days" Carter's Band
Lincoln's Gettysburg Address
Adjutant Waldo Turner
Orders for First Memorial Day
Chaplain Bradford Hawes
Hymn Band
Address, "Our National Heroes" Rev. Frank Kingdon Trooping of colors by color bearers, Assisted by Miss Aina Leinonen, soloist and Carter's Band
Benediction Rev. Frank Kingdon

Commander Bicknell in his welcome also returned thanks to all who had assisted Reynolds Post in the observance of Memorial Day. During the year he said nine members had passed away, viz:

JOB T. FERRIS
GILBERT M. SHAW
PATRICK HOWLEY
CORNELIUS SMITH
APPLETON H. TORREY
JAMES W. RAND
JAMES RYAN
S. WALDO JONES
NELSON W. GARDNER

It was unusual to have the same orator two years in succession, but last year the veterans were so much pleased with Rev. Frank Kingdon that they wanted to hear him again. They were not disappointed, as he had something new for them, speaking on: "Our National Heroes." While Charlie Chaplin, Babe Ruth, Franklin Grant and Dewey were for awhile popular with the people, he considered Lincoln the great gift of the Civil War. He dreamed a dream and kept the faith. He believed in the common man; he believed in God. A man of destiny; a dreamer who became a prophet.

When Officer of the Day David Dunbar is directing, the "Trooping of the Colors" is always a success, and was a pretty part of the exercises.

POULTRY CACKLES

RIGHT FOWLS FOR BREEDING

Hens Are Preferable to Pullets as They Lay Larger Eggs—Free Range Is Favored.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture)

If cockerels or pullets are used in the breeding flock they should be well matured, poultry specialists in the United States Department of Agriculture advise. Hens are better than pullets. They lay larger eggs, which produce stronger chicks. Yearling and two-year-old hens are better than older ones. Pullets used as breeders should be mated with a cock rather than with a cockerel. If a cockerel is used he should be mated with hens rather than with pullets. As a rule, well-matured cockerels will give better fertility than cocks.

When possible, free range should be provided for the breeding stock. It is better to provide it during the entire fall and winter before the breeding season, but, if this is not possible, free range just preceding and during the breeding season will be of great value. Birds on free range will get more exercise and, therefore, will be in better health and will give higher fertility, better hatches, and stronger chicks.

The breeding flock needs careful supervision to make sure that the fowls keep in good breeding condition. The birds and the houses should be examined often to see that they are not infested with lice or mites. Either of these pests in any numbers will seriously affect or totally destroy fertility. Care must be exercised also to see that the male does not frost his comb or wattles. If these are frosted his ability to fertilize eggs will be impaired and may not be recovered for several weeks. On very cold nights when there is danger of the combs being frosted the males to be used as breeders must be put in a warm place, such as a box or crate of suitable size partly covered by a bag or cloth. The breeding male should be examined occasionally after feeding to see that his crop is full and that he is not growing thin. Some males will allow the hens to eat all the feed, with the result that they get out of condition. If this happens the male must be fed separately from the hens at least once a day.

Provide the breeding stock with comfortable quarters. The house must be draft proof, yet well ventilated and dry. The birds should not be crowded. If the birds are yarded, 4 square feet of floor space per bird should be allowed, but on free range from 3 to 3½ square feet per bird will be enough.

The breeders must be fed so as to keep them in such condition that they will produce eggs. Any good laying ration is suitable for this purpose. Beef scrap should not run above 10 or 15 per cent of the total ration. The birds should be kept in good flesh but should not be allowed to become excessively fat. All whole or cracked grain should be fed in litter. This forces the fowls to exercise by scratching for it. As a supply of green feed is usually lacking late in the winter or early in the spring, sprouted oats, cabbage, mangels, or cut clover or alfalfa should be fed.

GIVE CHICKS SKIMMED MILK

Considered Desirable for Youngsters During First Week, According to Specialists.

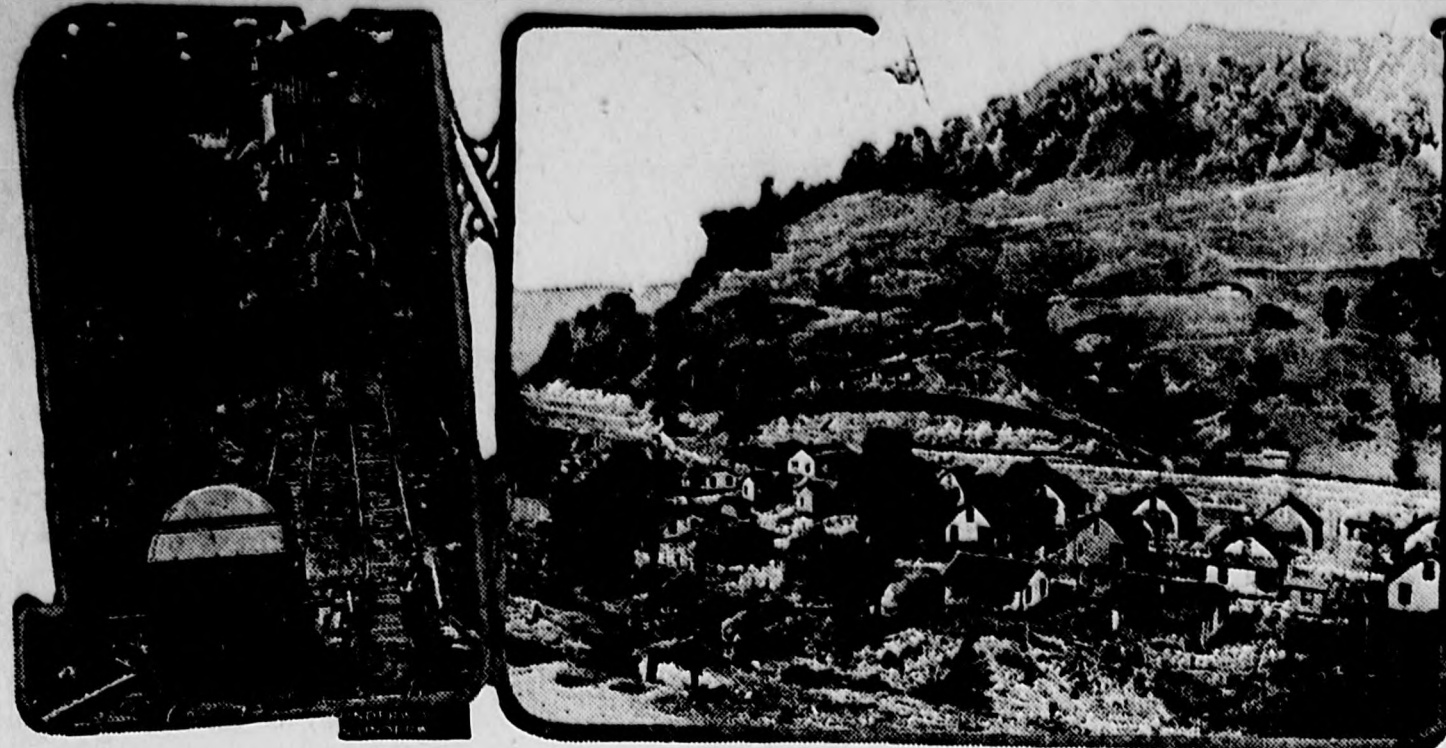

Skimmed milk is considered by specialists of the United States Department of Agriculture very desirable for chicks during the first week. In order to insure that all chicks get the milk it is advisable to dip the chick's beak in milk before it gets any other food. (This can best be done when removing chicks from the incubator.) Give milk to drink as long as it is advisable.

MUCH LOSS IS PREVENTABLE

Farmers Lose $15,000,000 Every Year by Selling Fertile Eggs—Rooster Is Cause.

Selling fertile eggs for market purposes during warm weather cost farmers $15,000,000 a year, say specialists of the United States Department of Agriculture. This loss is preventable. The rooster makes the egg fertile. The fertile egg makes the blood ring, which spoils the egg for food and market.

New Way to Tag New Born Babies

If this method of tagging new born babies had been in vogue centuries ago perhaps we would never have heard of the tale of Solomon and the babe. For this is a sure way of preventing Mrs. Riley from getting Mrs. Wilhelm's baby. Such mistakes have happened in large hospitals but now under the system pictured each and every new baby has a piece of adhesive tape stuck on its little back and on the tape is written the name of the babe's mother, the ward and bed number.

The Individual's Rights.

The sole end for which mankind is warranted individually or collectively, in interfering with the liberty of action of any of their number, is self-protection. That is the only purpose for which power can be rightly exercised over any member of a civilized community against his will, to prevent harm to others. His own good, either physical or moral, is not a sufficient warrant. He cannot rightly be compelled to do or forbear because it will be better for him to do so, because it will make him happier, because, in the opinion of others, to do so would be wise or even right. These are good reasons for remonstrating with him, but not for compelling him or visiting evil in case he does otherwise. To justify that the conduct from which it is desired to deter him must be calculated to do harm to someone else,—John Stuart Mill.

SUMMER IS GAY WITH ORGANDY

WHEN the blithe shopper, seeking midsummer frocks, brings up at the organdy display, she is in a fair way to grow reckless. The daintiness of this fabric and the lovely colors shown in it, have resulted in a tremendous vogue for organdy dresses; besides it is easy to make up and comparatively inexpensive. It is used for hats and bonnets, for trimmings and flowers and combined with other materials in numberless adorably pretty and simple gowns. Sometimes it finds itself in the company of gingham and sometimes with silk, fitting in with one as well as with the other. But often two colors in organdy are made up together. The frock at the right of the two pictured here, is an example of the two-color combination in which a light amethyst color is set off by pipings and vestee in pale yellow. The dress has a plain underskirt and long tunic, the tunic having side panels of four tiers set together with pipings. In this dress as in nearly all others of organdy, there is a sash of the material. The hat is also made to match.

The dress at the left is a pretty combination of red, white, dotted with white, and white organdy. The underskirt, sash, collar and sleeve ruffles, are of the organdy, and it is used as a piping to outline the tunic which is cut in four deep petals.

Ginghams in checks showing a color and white, as brown and white, blue and white and so on, are made up with plain organdies chosen to match the colored check, the organdie serving for tunics and over-blouses.

When in Quest of Hats

IN selecting headwear becomingness is, above all things, the most essential factor to be considered. It is the intangible thing that makes the simplest hat a success, and without it the most elaborate and exquisite is a failure. There are as many types of hats as there are of women, so that we may go forth confidently, and painstakingly, to be rewarded by millinery that flatters, and sometimes almost transforms us.

The becoming midsummer dress hat is not hard to find, as a rule, because it is made in such great variety. A little study of the group of model hats shown above reveals them suited to wearers that differ greatly in expression and personality, and who might differ much in age, except that nearly all hats are posed on young women. The dignified and pensive-looking maid at the left and top of the group, wears a hat with flower crown and droopy

VEGETABLES ARE CHEAP FOR FOOD

Particularly Valuable Are Those Available During Spring and Summer Seasons.

SMALL PLOT IS SUFFICIENT

Garden Truck as Source of Mineral Matter and Proteins Is Much More Important Than Many People Fully Realize.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

The old adage, "an apple a day keeps the doctor away," might quite as well have read "a carrot or an onion a day," and probably the result would be about the same as regards reducing the doctor's bill. Vegetables of all kinds are necessary in the diet, but particularly valuable are those available in the spring and summer, say specialists of the United States Department of Agriculture.

Value of Vegetables in Diet. Without going into definite figures it may be stated that the food value of vegetables, such as beans, peas, potatoes, sweet corn, beets and carrots, is very high. When considered from the standpoint of the food value of the crop that may be produced on a given area of land, beans, beets and carrots are ahead of almost any other garden crop. One-tenth acre planted entirely to carrots will yield about a ton, and in energy this would be equal to about 370 pounds of average beef. One-tenth acre of beets would also yield about a ton and be equal to 380 pounds of average beef. One-tenth acre of lima beans would yield about 120 pounds of dry beans, equal to about 220 pounds of beef.

As sources of mineral matter and proteins needed by the body, vegetables are much more valuable than many people realize. Also they supply roughage, which is believed to keep the body in good working order. In the course of nature, human beings as well as some animals seem to have so developed that they need a certain amount of roughage, which is best supplied by the coarser vegetable foods. During recent years there has been a growing tendency to reduce the roughage in cereals and some other foods, and in order to offset this, an extra effort should be made to supply plenty of vegetables and fruits. In addition, fresh vegetables are among the best sources of what, for lack of a better name, have been called vitamins.

Nobody has ever been able to stand a vitamin up by itself, or a group of them by themselves, so that we could look at them, but it is known that they are present just the same, because of the action that they have upon the human body.

Eat More Vegetables. Too much cannot be said in favor of a larger proportion of vegetables in the diet of the American people. The English are considered a nation of meat eaters, but it has been shown that Americans eat more meat per capita than do the English. A certain amount of meat in the diet is highly desirable, but this should always be balanced by a sufficient supply of vegetables.

One of the reasons that many people have to a great extent cut vegetables from their diet is that they have been unable to get fresh vegetables and do not relish stale ones. The individual home vegetable garden planted either in the back yard, or a convenient piece of land, not only solves the problem of supplying the family with vegetables at low cost and in abundance, but guarantees their freshness.

CARE OF HEATER IN SUMMER

Avoid Danger of Rust by Cleaning in Spring and Storing in Thoroughly Dry Place.

There is danger of rust when a stove or furnace stands unused for some time. Smokepipes should be taken down in the spring, cleaned and stored in a dry place. The doors should be left open to keep the interior dry. A lump of unslaked lime on the grate will collect the moisture and thus prevent rust, home economic specialists in the United States Department of Agriculture say. Leave the boiler of a steam or hot-water heater filled with water up to the safety valve, during the summer.

SAVE FAT OBTAINED IN PREPARING MEAT

Obviates Necessity of Buying Butter and Lard.

Outline of Old-Fashioned Method of Clarifying Fats So That It May Be Used in Kitchen—Ice Chest Is Quite Handy.

Care used in saving and caring for all fat obtained from cooking meat in the home will save many a dollar which otherwise would have to be spent for butter, lard or other cooking fats. Fats derived from the cooking of bacon, ham, chicken, beef and other meats, should be kept, each in its own receptacle, to be used for different purposes.

Household specialists in the United States Department of Agriculture say an old-fashioned method of clarifying fat from the soup kettle, or from cooked meats, so that it may be used in the kitchen, is to add the cold fat to a liberal quantity of cold water, then heat slowly and let cook for an hour or more. When cold, the cake of fat is removed and the lower portion, which will contain the small particles of meat, should be scraped away and the white, clean fat saved. If the flavor or color, or both, are not satisfactory the process may be repeated several times. Another method, often recommended, is to cook a number of slices of raw potato in the boiling fat. When an ice chest is used, fat in small quantities may easily be kept sweet for cooking purposes. If lard is rendered at home in quantity sufficient for a long time, it should be kept covered in tins or earthen jars, in a cool, dry place, as in a cellar or storeroom.

GOOD SUPPER TOMATO SAUCE

New and Appetizing Ways of Preparing Eggs While Cheap Add Variety to Menu.

Eggs are at their cheapest now, and new and appetizing ways of preparing them add variety to the menu. Here is a recipe recommended by the experimental kitchen of the United States Department of Agriculture:

2 cups tomato pulp ½ teaspoonful celery and juice (put try salt through a sieve). ¼ teaspoonful pepper. 2 tablespoonful butter. 1½ teaspoonful salt flour.

Make a sauce of the ingredients. Put one-half of the sauce in a baking dish, break six eggs, one at a time, into a saucer and slide each egg into the sauce, taking care not to break the yolk. Cover with the remaining sauce and sprinkle three tablespoonfuls of grated cheese over the top. Put in the oven and bake until the eggs are set. Serve hot on toasted bread or with boiled rice.

PEACHES MAKE FINE BUTTER

Found Quite Useful by Housekeeper in Spring When Jams and Jellies Are Running Low.

Springtime often finds the housekeeper's supply of jelly and jams in a depleted condition. When this is the case, peach butter made from canned and dried peaches may well come to the aid.

The following recipe recommended by the United States Department of Agriculture food specialists is delicious:

To each four pounds of dried peaches use two quarts of canned peaches. Soak the dried peaches in water several hours and cook until tender. Add the canned peaches and rub the pulp through a colander or wire sieve. Stir 2½ pounds of sugar into this pulp and cook slowly, stirring often, for two hours, or until of the right thickness. Pack while hot and sterilize like peach butter.

GIVE ATTENTION TO CLOTHES

Washing and Pressing of Linen and Cotton Suits Can Be Done Quite Nicely at Home.

Cotton and linen suits can be pressed and laundered at home. Dust can generally be shaken from them, for they do not hold it as wool and silk do. Brushing tends to rub the dirt into cotton and linen fibers. Heavy cotton and linen suits should be pressed on the wrong side or with a thin cloth spread over them. This makes them look more like new and prevents shine on seams and marks of the iron.

Household Questions

Sweeten egg custards with maple syrup.

Oil bottles may be easily cleaned if a little ammonia is used.

To keep a pie from sticking to plate sprinkle pie plate generously with flour instead of greasing.

Remove the skin and bone from fish while it is still warm and they will come away easily.

When a pie runs over in the oven salt sprinkled over the juice will keep it from filling the oven with smoke.

A MARTIN HOUSE.

A 30-room house like that in Fig. 1 is none too large. In designing this I have made the construction of the simplest possible form, with the walls and roof built in sections so they may be separated for cleaning out the compartments (Figs. 3 and 4). The house is 24 inches wide, 30 inches long and 35 inches high. First construct the frame which forms the first story walls, out of boards 4 inches wide (A, and B, Fig. 3), then the second story out of 8-inch boards (C and D, Fig. 3), and then the third-story frame out of 8-inch boards (E and F, Fig. 3). Cut boards A, C and E 28 inches long, and boards B, D and F 24 inches long.

Cut the doorways before nailing the frames together, but as these should come in the centers of the compartments first mark off the positions of the partitions upon the boards. The first-story diagram shows how two long partitions (G) and six short partitions (H) are set. There will be one round doorway in boards A, and three in boards B. For martins these openings must be two and one-half inches in diameter. Bore several small holes and connect them into one large hole with a chisel. There is one square doorway in boards C and E, and three in boards D and F, two inches wide and three inches high. After marking them out bore holes in the corners and cut from one hole to another with a small saw.

After cutting the doorways and nailing together the frames, cut and fasten the partitions in place. Then prepare floor boards I to fit the first-story frame, floor boards J to form a three-inch projection upon all sides of the second-story frame, floor boards K to form a two-inch projection upon all sides of the third-story frame, and floor boards L to fit the third-story frame. A hole must be cut through the exact center of floors I, J and K for the post support V (Fig. 2) which extends through the first and second stories. Nail floor boards I, J and K to the under side of the first, second and third-story frames. These sections need not be fastened to one another, because the support will tie them together when they are slipped over it.

Cut gable ends M and partition N (Fig. 3) out of 12-inch boards, making the angle at peak 45 degrees, and bore three two and one-half-inch doorways through ends M. Nail floor boards L to the bottoms of these pieces (Fig. 4), then fasten partitions O (4 inches wide) between ends M and partition N, and fasten floors P on top. Screw floor L to the third-story walls E.

Cut roof boards long enough to project six inches over the gable ends and side walls, fasten these together in two sections with battens, and screw to the gable ends. Nail the small shelf S (Fig. 4) to the top floor below the gable ends.

Fig. 5 shows the chimney (Q) and its cap (R), Fig. 6 the small brackets U which fasten below shelves S and floor K, and Fig. 7 the brackets T which fasten below floor J.

The bird-house support (V, Fig. 2) is a 2-by-4. Cut brackets W out of two-inch stuff and spike them to V, then nail the 1 by 2-inch strips X to the wide faces of V, below the brackets, so as to make the post of the same form on all sides.

GARDEN HELPS.

Lacking a sprinkling can, one of the best substitutes I know of is a tin can with perforated bottom, and a thick handle fastened to the side (Fig. 1). For some purposes this homemade garden accessory is handier than a sprinkling can.

A heavy cord to stretch between stakes to guide you in making straight rows, and a hoe, rake or dibble, are all the tools you need for planting. Many gardeners prefer a dibble to a hoe or rake for making holes for large seeds, for planting bulbs, and for transplanting seedlings. Fig. 2 shows an easily made dibble. Whittle a stick handle, and at one end drive a 16-penny nail through it.

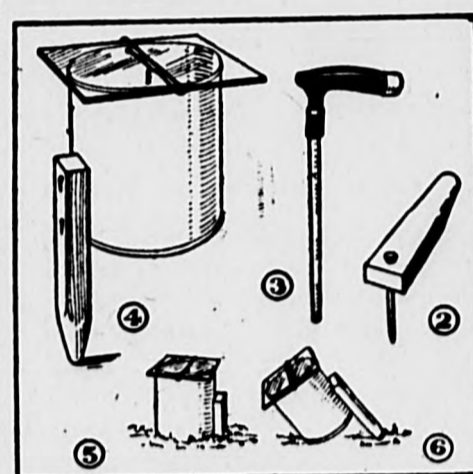

The dibble shown in Fig. 3 is an umbrella handle with about one-half of its rod cut off. This is excellent for making holes for bulbs and transplantings. The dibble in Fig. 2 is better for seed planting.

Often young tomato plants are nipped by a late frost. The proper protection would have saved them. If planted when the weather is warm, the plants must also be protected from the sun's rays. Figure 4 shows a plant protector that may be used in either case. The glass covered tin can makes a miniature cold-frame. Figure 5 shows the protector set close to the ground; Fig. 6 shows it raised for ventilation.

Tomato cans are of the best size, and 4-by-5 inch camera plates are of the right size for glass tops. If you cannot get used camera plates, any broken pieces of glass you can find will do. If the cans have soldered ends, these can be removed by melting the solder; if the ends are crimped on, as most cans are now made, cut the ends open with a can-opener. Punch a nail-hole in opposite sides of the can near one end, place the glass on the can, pass a piece of wire over it, and stick the wire ends through the holes; twist the wire ends as in Fig. 4, and the glass will be held in place.

The plant protector in Fig. 7 requires more time to make, but it has the advantage of being roomier than the can protector. The size of glass you obtain will determine the size of the parts. I used a 6½ by 8½-inch camera plate, and the dimensions on the pattern of Fig. 9 are correct for glass of this size. Go to a paint shop and see what you can get in small pieces of glass.

Figure 8 shows a cross-section of the protector. Prepare end pieces A and front and back strips B, and nail them together as shown. Then cut back piece C to fit, and nail it to the ends. The glass rests upon front strip

B, and it is held in place by four nails (E) driven into the edges of end pieces A so the heads lap over the glass. The screw eye F in the top edge of piece C helps hold the glass.

CROWNING OF VIRGIN MARY

About 250 children of the Sacred Heart church participated in the Procession in honor of the Blessed Virgin Mary Sunday afternoon, which made a pretty and impressive sight, as the children were from 4 to 15 years of age dressed in white and blue, some with angel wings.

The procession marched from the school yard into Commercial street and entered the front of the church. It was led by Beatrice Julian as an angel carrying a large cross of white lilac, on either side two little boys as cherubs. Then came 40 little girls with white angel gowns and wings;
two groups of children dressed in blue and white; 40 boys in white suits bearing blue pennants, 35 girls in white with blue epaulettes; the little crown bearer in blue, Hazel Delorey, carrying a blue satin pillow and crown of white; 48 boys with blue cashes; a group of Socialists in long white angel robes and large blue wings and blue crown of flowers;
Marion Husbands, in blue with long court train held by two little angel girls, carried the banner of the Blessed Mother; followed by 22 Altar boys in black cassocks and white surplices, 4 Acolytes in red cassocks, and Fr. Holland in white satin coat.
Entering the church the procession marched up and down the aisle and crowned the statue of the Blessed Virgin, which was followed by Benediction of the Blessed Sacrament.
The procession then marched out of the church and into the church yard.

BAND CONCERTS

The opening weekly band concert at Hollis Field, Braintree, was given last evening by the First Corps of Cadet band. Next Thursday evening the concert will be by the First Engineers band of Boston.

Original Sacrament

The sacrament may be termed an oath taken to fight manfully under the banner of Christ; originally the word meant a military oath taken by the Roman soldier, not to desert his standard, turn his back upon the enemy, or abandon his general. The early Christians used the word to denote a sacred mystery, and so it was applied to the eucharist.

RECALLED FOND MEMORIES.

A director, who has a reputation for being rather harsh and overbearing in his methods was giving his leading man a tongue lashing that fairly turned the atmosphere blue.
Through it all, however, the victim leaned gracefully against the wall and smiled happily.

"What the deuce are you grinning about?" barked the director. "Do you like to be cursed?"
"Why, yes. I rather enjoy it," chuckled the actor. "It recalls the good old days, you know, when I played Uncle Tom and was beaten to death every night by Simon Legree."—Film Fun.

Modest.
First Manager—I'm fed up with these movie stars. Young Cecil Legrand is the limit.

Second Manager—What's the matter now?
First Manager—He wants me to put on a play he's written in which he's featured as a heavyweight champion in the first part and a winning jockey in the second.—Film Fun.

Strange—Passing Strange!
The city visitor was consulting the oldest inhabitant. "How many people in this town now?" he asked.
"Twenty-five, sir."
"How many did you have last year?"
"Twenty-five, sir."
"That's strange. Aren't there any babies ever born in this town?"
"Yes, sir. But most every time a baby is born, somebody leaves town."

TWELVE BUG POWER.
Papa Spider—Hey son, run out and catch a few more fireflies, the light is getting low.

Advice.
Here, young man, is a simple plan.
Go to it;
If it is un-American,
Don't do it!

Sympathy.
"See that man going into the office building?" the chauffeur inquired as he casually prepared to move his car from the curb. "I feel sorry for him sometimes—he has to work so darned hard."
"You mean in order to make his living?" the doorman, in response, asked idly.
"No," the chauffeur replied as he gently let in the clutch, "to make mine."

Tragic.
He (during quarrel)—Then why did you marry me?
She—Just to get even with that hateful Maud Brown and to make her cry her eyes out because I took you away from her.
He—Good heavens, woman, what have you done? Why, I married you just because she threw me over.

Good Advice.
"This—uh—glub—spaghetti is awful
—lob-glob—slippery stuff!" complained a customer in the rapid-fire restaurant.
"Aw, don't try to eat it with your knife!" briskly said Heloise, the waitress. "Ketch it by the tail and reel it in."—Country Gentleman.

Of Course Not!
Staff Officer (benevolently to little girl)—And what is your name, my dear?
Modern "Little Dear"—D'you know you shouldn't speak to a lady without being introduced.

The Universe and Us.
First Star—They think they know how big we are.
Second Star—Well, that's nothing;
we think we know how small they are.

A PERTINENT QUESTION Monk—Say, old chap, what are you behind the bars for?

In Botany.
Inquired the kindly teacher.
"Oh, sir, the flowers! They are wild!"
Replied the timid creature.

All Serene.
"I notice they're on very peaceful terms with their next-door neighbors."
"Yes; the two families don't speak to each other."—New York Sun.

His Views.
"Can the ouija board read the future?"
"Well, I don't know. Sometimes
I think the future is a blank page."

His Mistake.
Tom—I tried to open my heart to her, but she stopped me coldly.
Ned—No wonder; she's an anti-vivi-sectionist.—Boston Transcript.

Do You Pay Your Bills?

Being One of a Series of Talks on Bills and the Prompt Payment of Them.

Do You Owe Any Bills That Are Overdue?

Your Rating

Credit Is Extended To You Because the Man You Buy From Thinks You Are Honest.

He has faith in you—in your honor. Prompt Pay MEANS "HONOR."

He believes you will pay when the TIME COMES.

He does not think you will abuse the privilege—the convenience—of credit.
HE EXTENDS TO YOU A RARE COMPLIMENT WHEN HE ALLOWS YOU TO TAKE HIS GOODS OUT OF HIS STORE WITHOUT PAYING FOR THEM.

DO YOU MAKE GOOD? Or do you disappoint him?

Are you "PROMPT PAY—GOOD CREDIT"—or "REQUIRE CASH?"

Now, classify yourself. You know better to what class you belong than anyone else. And you are alone to blame. It's your fault if you have bad credit—or good credit.

Don't Kick

When you get a statement of your account on the first of the month
DON'T KICK.

When the collector comes around to see you after your bill has run for sixty or ninety days DON'T KICK.

After you, figuratively speaking, "cuss out" the collector, ignore statements time after time, then get a letter sort of jerking you up, DON'T KICK.
Remember, it was your duty to pay the bill the first of the next month after you contracted it, and every day you let it run after that you were imposing upon the merchant who trusted you to take his goods out of his store.

It was YOUR DUTY TO PAY.

It was an honor agreement to which you and the merchant were parties.

He did his part when he let you have the goods. It was up to you to do your part on the first of the month.

BUT YOU FAILED.

Then you got "red under the collar" when he called your attention to
YOUR PART OF THE AGREEMENT.

He didn't say you were dishonorable—BUT YOU WERE.

BE HONORABLE—PAY UP—DON'T KICK.

Remember! he has to pay his bills, and can't unless you pay yours.

Times Change

It's not like it used to be.

THE DEAD BEAT HAS BEEN NAILED.

A person of "careless credit" can no longer "beat" every merchant in this town.

In union there is strength, and practically every retail merchant in this town and in Norfolk and Plymouth counties belong to the newly established clearing house that "clears credits."

If you do not pay your bills with one merchant, every other merchant knows it.

You Must Pay as You Go or Quit Going

The day of systematically beating the man who trusts you with his goods is gone.

If you are HONORABLE and pays your bills, your credit grows. If you are DISHONORABLE and don't pay your bills, your credit is nipped in the bud.

TIMES CHANGE, and invariably for the better.

PAY UP! Credit is too valuable an asset to lose. PAY UP!

The Haggard Man

By MARIE BELDEN JAMES

(Copyright.)

Marshall Shane was old, but nobody would have guessed it. Age had not dulled his dark eyes nor silvered his dark hair nor bent his broad shoulders.

He had watched the world for seventy years, and he knew it so well that he was not afraid to love it. Karl Kraft, the art critic was one of the many to whom Marshall Shane's word was law and light.

He walked into Shane's study one warm, late May afternoon. "A strange thing, sir," he said, sitting down by the table and gazing out of the window at the fading sunlight; "a very strange thing."

Marshall Shane looked at him keenly.

"You're in trouble," he said.

"Well, not exactly," returned Kraft. "I've been through a strange experience, but if it really was the way it seemed it was worth the price I paid for it."

"A large price?" inquired Shane.

"Rather—as the world considers things."

"That's good. Let's hear about it." So Kraft let him hear.

"I went to the bank this morning to cash my check for that series of articles I did for Kaleidoscope. The teller gave me eight one-hundred-dollar bills—there were eight articles, you know—and I put them into my vest pocket and went out. I started to walk home, and I had gone some distance before I noticed that a man was following me."

"When I did discover it I looked around at him, and I saw that he was a haggard, weary-looking man."

"I didn't pay much attention to him, even though I was carrying eight hundred, for I didn't think it would be easy to hold up a man on Counter street in the middle of the morning."

"I turned around and faced him sharply, but it did not seem to abash him in the least."

"You are Kraft?" he said. It was more like a simple statement than a question, and I told him he was right.

"I have the impertinence," he said, "to ask you to look at a picture."

"My terms are very high and in advance," I answered, briefly enough, for I thought if he were trying to put up some game on me that would settle him.

"I have only five dollars," he said calmly. "But you're welcome to that here and now if you'll look at my picture."

"Where's your studio?" I asked him.

"He pointed to the Lefevre, and that decided me."

"The elevator took us up—up—higher than'd ever been before, to the very top floor, and when we got out the room he conducted me to was the smallest and poorest in the building."

"There was wasn't much of anything in it—a couch, some canvases and paintboxes, and on an easel a picture covered with a cloth."

"About six feet in front of the easel an imitation Persian rug was spread on the floor, and to this he escorted me. He wanted me to sit on it."

"I haven't a chair," he said; "and you get just the right light on the picture from here. I've studied for days the placing of the rug, waiting for the time when you would come to see my picture."

Then he went softly over to the picture and took the cloth off it. He must have stepped back out of my sight then, for I remember no more of him."

"But the picture?"

"Mr. Shane, that was a picture—a wonderful one."

"The second my eyes fell on it it snatched my mind from everything else by its wonderful brightness—great masses of reds—scarlets and crimson and garnets so dazzling and blinding that it was a little time before I saw the face in the center of them. But when I did come to that clear, white face, everything softened and blurred."

"When, half-unconsciously, I wandered back to that mass of reds they were softer and clearer and I saw what they were—a great bed of heavy, nodding poppies drowning in a sleepy breeze that rocked them, and among them a delicate-faced girl with great, dark eyes gently falling asleep."

As I watched, her eyelids seemed to drop more and more, her eyes to grow more and more dreamy.

"I woke up peacefully and gazed around me dreamily, as I have waked and gazed a hundred times in my hammock at Heathrade on one of our long, rapturous July days."

"But when my eyes reached the easel it was like a cold shock of water in the face. The picture was gone."

"The canvas had been cut—hacked, the ragged edges seemed to say—from the frame. An ugly hole like a gaping wound confronted me."

"I stood up suddenly."

"I felt cramped and uncomfortable, as though I had slept for a long time, and the sunlight on the floor looked more like that of the afternoon than of the morning. Unconsciously I put up my hand for my watch to see the time."

"But no watch was there. Then, quite consciously, I felt for my eight one-hundred-dollar notes. They also had left me."

"You can imagine that I pulled myself together then. It's bad enough to lose eight hundred dollars, but to lose eight hundred dollars and have to walk home as well is too much. I turned down Rand street and entered Doctor Quigley's office."

"I asked Quigley to look me over and tell me, if he could, how I had been drugged so quickly and so quietly."

"Do you want to see whether I know my profession, or what?" he asked. "There isn't the slightest symptom about you to indicate that you have been near any drug for years."

"He was rather offended, and I had to apologize quite humbly before I dared even to ask him to lend me a carfare. When I got it I came straight up here. There's something very queer about the affair all around, Mr. Shane, and if anybody can explain it you can."

All through this story the old man's keen eyes had been watching his friend's face.

"You didn't even find out the name of the—haggard man?" he asked.

"Yes, I did find that out—at the very last," said Kraft. "I asked the elevator man, Ramon, his name is, Royal Ramon."

"Ah!" Marshall Shane's eyes brightened. "That accounts for it. I didn't think there was but one man in the world who could—"

"Do you know him, then?" interrupted Kraft.

"No," said Marshall Shane, "but I knew his father, Royal Ramon, Sr. He was a moderately successful painter—in England. One day, in a moment of delicious greatness, he painted a picture of a man flinging himself off London bridge in a dense gray fog. When he had finished it, I suppose he was foolish enough to look at it until it thrilled him, for instead of selling it he put it on exhibition in his studio."

"His friends all came to see it, and they looked and looked and went away with queer, scared faces, and before the end of the week three of them—men who had been brave enough through every kind of trouble—had thrown themselves off London bridge."

"A great fuss was made about it and it ruined Ramon utterly as an artist, and the government even went so far as to forbid him exhibiting his picture. But they couldn't prevent him from looking at it himself, and one day when all London was hidden in a dense gray fog he stole away from his home, leaving his wife and his little boy, went up to London bridge and—slipped off."

"Mrs. Ramon and the boy left England shortly afterward. I kept track of them for a while—the mother died nine or ten years ago. But I lost the boy, and now he turns up a haggard man, and a greater genius even than his father. And I don't think that you'll ever again see your watch or your eight hundred dollars."

"Do you really mean," demanded Kraft, "that a man believe that any man could paint a picture that would put one to sleep like an opiate?"

"I do," said Marshall Shane, "but the police never would. If you don't wish to have your sanity doubted, I advise you not to try them."

"You really believe?" repeated Kraft. "It seems so improbable—such a strange thing."

"I've known stranger things than that," said Marshall Shane.

African and Asiatic Elephants.
Many persons have, no doubt, wondered why the African elephant, though quite as intelligent as the Indian or Asiatic animal, is less often found with circuses and at zoological parks. The reason is one which may be easily explained: The African elephant, it has been found, is less docile in captivity than the Asiatic elephant; his surroundings seem to have more effect upon his disposition. Then, too, his tastes are different from those of his cousin, the Asiatic elephant. Used to the jungles, where he roamed at will, crossing the forests and fording the rivers, he is not at all content with his enforced captivity. Although all this is generally true of the African elephant, yet "Jumbo," long the great pet of Barnum and Bailey's circus, was a full-grown African elephant, which came from the wildest part of Africa. Yet "Jumbo" never caused any trouble to his attendants, and never was there a more affectionate elephant.

Island of Mystery.
Mindoro, in the Philippine group, is something of a mystery. Other islands are rather thickly populated, but Mindoro is shrouded in uncertainty. There is a fringe of population around the shoreline, but the interior of the big island is practically unknown and unexplored. It is claimed that but one white man, Dean Worcester, ever has crossed the interior of Mindoro.

Why the island has remained thus for nearly three hundred years is something of a mystery. It is said that there is gold in abundance on this island, and where there is gold there usually can be found white men willing to go after it, whether in frozen waste or tropic heat, but Mindoro's secrets remain safely hidden.—From "A Tenderfoot in the Tropics," by Mack P. Cretcher.

Bananas Should Be More Plentiful.
Big development has taken place in the banana industry in Kingston, Jamaica, due to the fact that there was no hurricane last year. The different trading companies are making arrangements to put on more ships and an attempt is being made to get the growers to co-operate with the district association, under the guidance of a large central association, to get better prices from the United States purchasing companies.

OBJECT LESSON WAS SPOILED

One Small Pupil at Least Misunderstood Just What Teacher Had Intended to Impress.

The fifth-grade teacher was fond of the young principal and it was often rumored that he was engaged to her. They managed to keep it a secret from the children, yet most of them were suspicious. One way she showed her affection was by the way she co-operated with him in all his pet schemes. So when he started a movement against smoking she promptly began to help him out.

First she demanded that all her boys who smoked bring to her all the tobacco they had in their pockets. They did it and it was a goodly supply. Taking the box which held it, she said to one of the boys, "You take this down to Mr. T."

A little boy in the rear of the room piped out: "Teacher, my sister, Bess, she's going to give her beau tobacco for his birthday, too."

WOMEN NEED SWAMP-ROOT

Thousands of women have kidney and bladder trouble and never suspect it. Women's complaints often prove to be nothing else but kidney trouble, or the result of kidney or bladder disease.

If the kidneys are not in a healthy condition, they may cause the other organs to become diseased.

Pain in the back, headache, loss of ambition, nervousness, are often times symptoms of kidney trouble.

Don't delay starting treatment. Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, a physician's prescription, obtained at any drug store, may be just the remedy needed to overcome such conditions.

Get a medium or large size bottle immediately from any drug store.

However, if you wish first to test this great preparation send ten cents to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., for a sample bottle. When writing be sure and mention this paper.—Adv.

Fraternity the Great Need.

It was Victor Hugo who conceived this thought: "The true resistance of man against catastrophes is an augmentation of humanity. Love one another, aid one another. Solidarity of men is the resort to complexity of mysterious facts. It is thus that is established on earth the third term of the grand human formula, fraternity. Governments put obstacles in the way of liberty and equality, they will come in their time, in spite of the monarchy; equality in spite of the aristocracy. But fraternity is the opening door, the emptying purse, the helping hand."

Profiteering? Well—
Officials of a department store in Sacramento recently advertised in local papers that on a certain day they would devote the entire space in one of their display windows to an exhibit of the goods in which the store was profiteering. The day arrived. Crowds of women found the window empty.

Prepared.
"Ole," said the preacher to the Swedish bridegroom-to-be, "do you take Hilda Sorgeson for your lawful wedded wife, for better or for worse?"

"Oh, well," replied Ole gloomily, "Aye s'pose Aye get little of each."—The American Legion Weekly.

Lydia Warren followed her young niece automatically down the valley of palms and gilt, called in common parlance "Peacock alley." With burning cheeks she passed the gamut of critical eyes that looked askance at her ankle-length skirt and broad-toed shoes.

The head waiter, like an executioner, led them to a lace-trimmed, candle-bedecked table and obsequiously assisted Lydia out of her unfashionable jacket.

She was tired after her morning shopping in the city, which she had not visited before for a decade, and hungry, too. So she gladly accepted Marjorie's invitation to a little snack before catching the afternoon train home. Unfortunately, as they picked up their menus they were joined by three young girls, friends of Marjorie's, and Lydia was left to her own devices.

"What would you like, auntie?" said Marjorie, smiling, suddenly remembering her duty as hostess.

When the order was placed before her Lydia at once passed with a shudder the "caviare," which seemed to be an arrangement of tiny, inky eggs on a silver of toast, and helped herself to a bit of the under-done beef and a spoonful of gravy surmounted by a twig of parsley. She was thankful the chattering girls did not notice her ravenous onslaught of the bread and butter, along with iced water. And it was with a feeling of deep relief that, finding it later than they thought, she and Marjorie hurried away to the train.

"And, auntie, dear, do come down again when you can make us a visit. I used to have such fun at your house when I was a kiddie," said Marjorie a bit wistfully as she kissed her goodbye.

"I probably won't be down again for a long time," said Lydia honestly. "But I'd love to have you come up and make Uncle Seth and me a visit."

"I'll see, Auntie, maybe I will," said Marjorie, dim remembrances floating through her brain of the big, comfortable farmhouse nestled in the New Hampshire hills. A sharp warning bell caused abrupt good-bys, and Lydia settled back with a sigh of relief as she thought of home.

COUNTRY MOUSE

Lydia Warren followed her young niece automatically down the valley of palms and gilt, called in common parlance "Peacock alley." With burning cheeks she passed the gamut of critical eyes that looked askance at her ankle-length skirt and broad-toed shoes.

The head waiter, like an executioner, led them to a lace-trimmed, candle-bedecked table and obsequiously assisted Lydia out of her unfashionable jacket.

She was tired after her morning shopping in the city, which she had not visited before for a decade, and hungry, too. So she gladly accepted Marjorie's invitation to a little snack before catching the afternoon train home. Unfortunately, as they picked up their menus they were joined by three young girls, friends of Marjorie's, and Lydia was left to her own devices.

"What would you like, auntie?" said Marjorie, smiling, suddenly remembering her duty as hostess.

When the order was placed before her Lydia at once passed with a shudder the "caviare," which seemed to be an arrangement of tiny, inky eggs on a silver of toast, and helped herself to a bit of the under-done beef and a spoonful of gravy surmounted by a twig of parsley. She was thankful the chattering girls did not notice her ravenous onslaught of the bread and butter, along with iced water. And it was with a feeling of deep relief that, finding it later than they thought, she and Marjorie hurried away to the train.

"And, auntie, dear, do come down again when you can make us a visit. I used to have such fun at your house when I was a kiddie," said Marjorie a bit wistfully as she kissed her goodbye.

"I probably won't be down again for a long time," said Lydia honestly. "But I'd love to have you come up and make Uncle Seth and me a visit."

"I'll see, Auntie, maybe I will," said Marjorie, dim remembrances floating through her brain of the big, comfortable farmhouse nestled in the New Hampshire hills. A sharp warning bell caused abrupt good-bys, and Lydia settled back with a sigh of relief as she thought of home.

In the fall Marjorie, suddenly filled with a longing for the hills, went to Warren Corners for a visit. Aunt Lydia met her at the little station.

"Whatever have you been doing to yourself, child?" she asked abruptly. "You look tired to death."

"Too many late hours, auntie dear. I've just come up here to rest," answered Marjorie. Her aunt remembered the "Poissons" and drew conclusions of her own.

A long night's sleep brought a tinge of pink to Marjorie's pale cheeks. Breakfast was waiting for her at one end of the spotless kitchen table.

"We had ours three hours ago," said Aunt Lydia. "I thought you'd be lonesome in the dining room." She placed oatmeal and cream, bacon and eggs, flaky biscuit and steaming odorous coffee in front of Marjorie.

It was late in November, a veritable Indian summer's day, that Marjorie walked up the long road past the school house, swinging her hat by one of its dull blue velvet ribbons. Her eyes were bright, and there was a cheery glow in her pliant face.

A young man, broad-shouldered and keen-eyed, was coming down the road. Marjorie's cheeks turned to a deeper scarlet. She knew it to be Philip Mason who owned the lovely old farmhouse that nestled among the gray hills just above Aunt Lydia's. He had made life in the country additionally pleasant. He doffed his cap as he met her and exclaimed, "Goodness! You don't look much as you did when you first came, Miss Marjorie."

"And I don't feel much the same, either," answered the girl, happily. "But I suppose I'll have to return to the city life in another week," she added. All the light suddenly went out of Philip's face.

"Why, I thought you would stay all winter," he said, dully.

"Mercy, what would poor Aunt Lydia do?" exclaimed Marjorie, adding with a merry laugh, "Why, she's had to teach me how to cook so I could help her get me enough to eat."

The sun had gone down while they were talking, and on the horizon the hunter's moon was beginning to send its glow over the stubby hills. Philip quietly took Marjorie's hand in his—it was the old story of the moon, the man and the maid.

Unmindful of waiting supper or chores they finally reached home, and Aunt Lydia knew by their happy faces what they would tell her later. She insisted on Philip's coming in for a "bite of supper," and he gladly accepted her invitation.

It was Saturday night and the big table was covered with good things—smoking baked beans, steaming brown-bread, a goodly array of pies and cakes. Marjorie was hungry after her long walk, and, despite the fact that she was very much in love and that Philip kept adoring eyes on her, she did full justice to the meal. Suddenly she looked at Aunt Lydia and laughed merrily.

"Oh, Auntie! Will you ever forget your lunch with the poor city mouse? And did we ever dream that one day she would become a country mouse herself?"

Embarrassing Moment.
I never saw a man in a more embarrassing situation than the manager of a lecture hall in a town I used to live in.

It was the appointed hour, but the lecturer did not appear. The audience was beginning to show signs of impatience.

Suddenly the manager made his appearance on the platform.

"Ladies and gentlemen," he said, in apologetic tones, "I am sorry to have to inform you that the lecture on 'How to Keep Fit' will have to be postponed owing to the unexpected indisposition of the lecturer."

The laughter that followed lasted several minutes after he had fled from the stage.—Chicago American.

Her Locks Were False.
After a siege of typhoid fever my hair all came out and in order to make it come in better I had it all cut off. Had to wear a wig. One afternoon late I went to the train to meet some friends and just as the engine whizzed by there was an unusually strong gust of wind. To my amazement and horror my hat and my hair went flying down the platform, and there I stood looking for all the world like a brand-new robin. I cried out: "Oh, there goes my hat and my hair." Of course that drew everyone's attention and it seemed years before a kind young man returned it to me. I wasn't long in getting away from the curious crowd; my sisters greeted the newly arrived friends.—Chicago Tribune.

HUSBAND GOES DOWN HILL

Finally Both Decide to Put Tanlac to Test and as a Result Have Enjoyed Best of Health for Past Three Years.

"Both my wife and myself have put Tanlac to the test and we call it the greatest medicine in the world," said J. T. Montamat, 1123 Third Ave., North, Nashville, Tenn., artistic sign painter for the Cusack Company. Mr. Montamat has lived in Nashville for nearly thirty years and is highly respected by all who know him.

"Before my wife took Tanlac she suffered so badly from gas on her stomach and heartburn that she often said she felt like she was smothering to death. She actually had to sit up in bed to get her breath.

"Well, in a short time after she began taking Tanlac her trouble disappeared and she was like a different person. Seeing the good results in her case, I began taking the medicine myself and it soon had me feeling like a brand new man.

"Up to that time I had been troubled with indigestion. I had no appetite and the little I did eat seemed to do me about as much harm as good. I felt so tired and languid I hated to move around, and was getting in such a run-down condition that it worried me.

"Tanalac acted with me just like it did with my wife, and although that was three years ago we have enjoyed the best of health all along. However, I keep a bottle of Tanlac in the house all the time, and when I feel myself getting run down the medicine soon has me feeling all right again. I am convinced that Tanlac is without an equal. Our friends all know how it helped us and I don't hesitate to tell anyone about it."

Tanalac is sold by leading druggists everywhere.—Adv.

Mrs. McCumber Avoided a Serious Operation by Taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound in Time

Georgetown, Ill.—"After my first baby was born I suffered so with my left side that I could not walk across the floor unless I was all humped over, holding to my side. I doctored with several doctors but found no relief and they said I would have to have an operation. My mother insisted on my taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I soon found relief. Now I can do all my own work and it is the Vegetable Compound that has saved me from an operation. I cannot praise your medicine too highly and I tell all of my friends and neighbors what the Compound did for me."—Mrs. MARGARET MCCUMBER, 27 S. Frazier St., Georgetown, Illinois.

JACK QUINN CLAIMS "SPITTER" IS FAIR

Pitchers Using Moist Ball Have Not Been Invincible.

Yankee Hurier Denies Abolishment of Spit Ball and Says Arguments Against It Are Not Sound.—Walsh Was Effective.

"The spit ball," declares Jack Quinn stoutly, "is no more a freak delivery than the curve ball." The Yankee pitcher, an exponent of the spit ball, soon to be extinct, seems to be sincere in his belief, that it is all right. He denies its abolishment and holds that there is no good objection to it.

"It is no more a freak delivery than the curve ball," he repeated, "not a bit more. It never hurt anybody, and no spit ball ever was invincible. Those are the objections raised against it by the baseball people, and not one of the arguments is sound.

"There never was an invincible spit-ball pitcher, never one to threaten the extermination of the hitter, which bugaboo was raised against the spit-ball pitcher. The nearest to invincible we ever had was Ed Walsh, but not one of the other pitchers of that delivery was as good as Walsh or as threatening to the hitter's chances of making a good batting average."

Few will disagree with Quinn that Walsh was the most effective of all pitchers who used the saliva ball. Next to him the one who knew the workings of the delivery better than anybody else and who came nearer to making it scientifically effective was Jack Chesbro. He and Walsh were master of it, though there may be those who maintain that Coveleskie is almost, if not quite, as expert with it as Chesbro.

Burleigh Grimes also ranks high as to skill with the wet fling, but he uses it a great deal, whereas Dick Rudolph and the disgraced Cicotte were quite as skillful with it, but didn't employ it as much. They employed it more in conjunction with other deliveries. Urban Shocker has as puzzling a spit-ball as there is at present, one with as deceptive quirks as Chesbro's, ball players say, but he bluffs a good deal with it. He uses a curve ball often when making the motions of the moist ball, and uses the two as part of effective strategy. Quinn is using the curve ball himself some, nowadays. When his spitball is operating to suit, Bill Doak is effective, but he is uncertain.

FIXED FOR PINCH SLUGGERS

Manager McBride of Washington Has Nifty Bunch on Bench to Select Hitters From.

With Frank Brower on the pitching staff and Bing Miller and Hank Shanks doing utility duty, Manager McBride of the Washington team will have a nifty lot of batters on the bench to pick pinch hitters from. Besides those named there'll be Pat Gharitty, extra catcher, and Pitchers Zachary and Courney, both of whom can whale the ball.

Fletcher's CASTORIA

The False and the True.

Advertising by the use of large space, the expenditure of huge sums of money have placed on the market, have put in your home, perhaps, many articles that today have been discarded, as you will readily admit. Do you recall anything that has more modestly appealed to the public than has Fletcher's Castoria: modest in all its claims, pleading at all times—and truthfully—for our babies?

The big spurge, the misleading claims may win for a time, but the honest truth-telling advertiser is like the old story of the tortoise that beat the hare.

Mothers everywhere, and their daughters, now mothers, speak frankly, glowingly, enthusiastically in praise of Fletcher's Castoria. Speak of it lovingly as a friend that has brought comfort, cheer and smiles to their little one.

To them: to these true mothers no argument can induce them to set aside their bottle of Castoria, their old friend, that they might try even another and unknown remedy for babies. Then, would YOU think of going to YOUR OWN medicine chest to find relief for Baby's troubles? Can you not separate the false from the true?

THAYER WINS

Thayer Academy defeated St. Mark 4 to 3 at Southboro last Saturday. Thayer got 4 runs in the third inning on 3 hits and 2 bases on balls. Thayer only made 4 hits in the entire game. Harrison and Wentworth kept their opponents hits well scattered and they had very good support in every inning except the fourth, when 2 hits, 2 errors and a base on balls netted St. Mark's 2 runs. St. Mark's other run came in the sixth, 2 hits and an error being responsible.

Higgins caught well for Thayer, his throwing was very accurate. St. Mark's only getting one stolen base. Bigelow, except for the third inning pitched well for St. Mark's, striking out ten men.

Captain Josselyn played his first game for Thayer since his recent illness.

HIGH SCHOOL OPERETTA

Last Friday evening the High school gave an operetta: "The Wild Rose", which proved enjoyable and successful.

From the insatiable Rose to the irrepressible Buttons all did their share in a manner that showed training and talent too. The perfectly proper reporters and the voluble suffragette, the matronly housekeeper with many cares, not the least of which was the care of "Bobbie", the stately Lady Grey, the cheerful debutantes, and the dainty maids, with all the other personages who came to the abode of the Rose, including the cast, played their parts in pleasing fashion.

The stage pictures were pretty and colorful, especially when the sunbonnet maids appeared in the last act and the blended colors of the girls' pretty dresses made one think of a flower parade.

The operetta was given under the direction of Mr. Calderwood with Miss Morrison and Miss Canning as coaches and Miss Mary Hoffman as accompanist.

The cast of characters follows:

Rose McCloud, a popular young society belle, Muriel Hanson.

Mary Forsythe, her secretary and friend, Greta Garfield.

Mrs. Fussy, her housekeeper, Lucy Parker.

Lady Grey, an eccentric playwright, Katherine Davenport.

Miss Writtemup and Miss Putemdown, reporters, Doris Monroe and Gertrude Culley.

Dora, Flora, Molly and Polly, debutantes, Beatrice Warren, Emily Evans, Dorothy Smith and Marion Pratt.

Miss Talkalot, a suffragette, Florence McKenzie.

Mrs. Doingood, a charity worker, Dora Pierce.

Madame Sewseams, a dressmaker, Mary Dorey.

Madame Feathertop, a milliner, Mary McIntosh.

Madame Smellsweet, a perfumer, Charlotte Davis.

Bobbie, the buttons, Katherine Burton.

Maids, Evelyn Grundstrom, Claire Kelcourse, Agatha Killean, Marion Nolan, Elizabeth Conroy, Evelyn Ward, Lesley Lovell, Mary Keith, Ruth Wing and Anit Petrucci.

The stage accessories were loaned by the J. H. Murray Hardware Co.

After the operetta there was a social dance with music by Aymar's orchestra. As the proceeds are to go to the piano fund it is good to know that the operetta brought in about $225.

FIFTY-FIFTH YEAR

VOL. LV NO 23

WEYMOUTH, MASSACHUSETTS, FRIDAY, JUNE 10 1921

PRICE SIX CENTS

Selectmen To Call Special Town Meeting

The Selectmen have decided to call a special town meeting for Friday evening, June 24, at Odd Fellows Opera House. There will be several articles in the warrant to be considered by the Town Council of Town Meeting Members.

One article is to see if the town will appropriate $15,000, or as much thereof as may be necessary to continue the street railway service for another year.

William J. Holbrook, the town counsel, has received the following letter from the trustees of the Eastern Massachusetts street railway:

Boston, May 21, 1921

William J. Holbrook, Esq.
We will continue to give Weymouth service for another year, similar to that furnished during the past year upon agreement of the town to pay the deficit to an amount not exceeding $15,000.

I enclose herewith statement of earnings and expenses for the last year.

Yours truly,
HOMER LORING,
For trustees of the Eastern Massachusetts St. Ry.

The trustees in their statement claim that the deficit the past year was $29,580.70, and one-half of this for which the town was liable, was $14,790.35. The town has already paid $11,492.64, and the balance due is $3,297.71.

MEETING OF SELECTMEN
The Selectmen received on Monday written charges against the Chief of Police for neglect of duty, signed by George Ames of North Weymouth. Both Mr. Ames and Chief Pratt were present, but the board did not consider the charges well founded and dismissed the petition.

The board voted to accept the offer of the town of Braintree to continue to board the Weymouth street on the same terms as last year. Mr. Ames as special police was accepted and Frank H. Torrey was appointed.

The issue of $20,000 in bonds voted at the annual town meeting for construction of highways was approved. Voted to call a special town meeting for Friday, June 24, at Odd Fellows Opera House. One of the articles will ask for an additional appropriation for poor, as the call has been unusually large, being $4000 in excess of the amount expended last June. Other articles relate to the sale of the hose houses at Nash's Corner and at Weymouth Heights, to acceptance of the boxing act, and appropriation for continuance of street railway service.

A motion not to grant additional junk licenses was lost, and it was voted to grant one to Abraham Wars Lilliam of Rockland, and one to William Loborsky of Quincy.

Upon learning of the action of the board, Jacob Gibbs asked that his license be recalled and the $50 refunded, which was done.

The Selectmen returned the petition of the 176 citizens, which set forth that neighboring towns did not grant licenses to non-residents, knowing it to be a fact that all the junk men doing business in Braintree were non-residents.

Louis N. Borlenghi was appointed as a special officer and temporary patrolman.

Minor licenses were granted. The Selectmen viewed Babcock avenue and Rosellin road which the town is asked to accept.

KEITH STORE FLOODED
Weymouth-made shoes were probably ruined in the Colorado flood, as the George E. Keith Co. has learned that the store at Pueblo was wiped out. There were nine and one-half feet of water in the store and the entire stock valued at $20,000 is a total loss.

MEMORIAL SERVICE
The Ladies Auxiliary of Div. 9, A. O. U. M. W. held a memorial service at the Francis Xavier cemetery on Sunday at 6 P. M.

About 9.30 Tuesday evening three automobiles met at a point nearly opposite the Catholic church, causing no little excitement and also injury to the occupants of the machines. A Buick roadster, owned and driven by Thomas Lester of East Weymouth, coming from Hingham met head-on a car owned and driven by Thomas Gavin of Quincy Point headed for Nantasket; a third car also headed for the beach tried to pass the Gavin car and presumably caused the mixup. All the passengers were more or less injured and cut by the flying glass. They were treated by Dr. Wallace Drake and afterwards taken to their homes. The Gavin and Lester cars were so firmly wedged together that it was impossible to pull them apart and they were left by the roadside.

At Quincy Point last Friday near the Fore River bridge, the automobile of Herbert J. Sullivan while returning home was struck by the motorcycle of Dennis LeBrun of Boston. Both machines were damaged and the LeBrun treated by Dr. Richard Ash.

Mr. Sullivan lives at 25 Standish avenue, North Weymouth, and is superintendent at the street railway power plant.

The men of the Fellowship Class have started to erect booths and a bandstand on Beals park, preparatory to the field day on July 4. The S. of V. will also have the use of stand and booths on Saturday, June 18.

Send your Wet Wash to the good and reliable Monarch Laundry. Satisfaction is our motto. A trial will convince you. Tel. office Wey. 530, residence Wey. 397W.—Advertisement.

Fred, 12-year-old son of Calle Hauksislo of Essex street was run down by an automobile and severely injured while at play on Church street near the residence of Edgar J. Hauch on Tuesday evening.

A very successful rummage sale was held by ladies of the Pilgrim church in the stable at the rear of the residence of Dr. W. A. Drake on Tuesday afternoon and evening.

A delegation from the C. E. of the Pilgrim church attended the quarterly meeting of the Clark Union at the First church at Weymouth Heights on Friday evening.

Nelson Gladwin has returned from two weeks business trip to Detroit.

Mrs. Charles Emerson of Derry, N. H., is visiting relatives in town.

Mrs. N. Gladwin of Lovell street has as her guest her sister, Miss Bangs of Newton.

Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Burnham are occupying the house recently vacated by Merle Cain at King Cove beach.

The Girl Scouts will sell tags Saturday for the District Nursing fund.

John Tanguy and family have moved to their new house on Stanley road.

Rev. Frederick Merrill of Amesbury, a former pastor of the Pilgrim church, has been the guest of friends in town during the past week.

Mr. and Mrs. Gardner Alden of Oxford spent Sunday in North Weymouth the guests of Mr. Alden's parents.

The L. A. K. C. C. held an all-day circle at the clubhouse Wednesday. Dinner at noon was served by Mrs. Margaret Hurley and Mrs. Lucy Miller.

SERVICE STAR LEGION
The next meeting will be the annual outing on Monday, June 13, at 10 A. M. at the summer home of Mrs. H. W. Robbins, 123 Sea street, Great Hill, Hough's Neck, Quincy. All former members are cordially invited and members may bring guests.

Holiday Notice

Because of the holiday next Friday, the 17th of June, the Gazette and Transcript will go to press one day earlier. Advertisements and news should be forwarded early in the week.

Loss to American Legion

The untimely death of Col. Frank W. Galbraith, the National Commander of the American Legion, is a distinct loss at this time to the organization. Much devolves on the National officers in securing justice for the World War veterans, and Col. Galbraith was doing good work.

Cash Bonus

The redraft of the Soldiers' Bonus bill by the Senate committee includes a cash bonus not to exceed $625, the bases being $1.25 per day for overseas and $1.00 per day for home service.

MEMORIAL SUNDAY

Memorial Sunday will be observed Sunday evening June 12 at 7.30 by Crescent lodge of Odd Fellows. Steadfast Rebekah lodge and Wompatuck encampment. The different organizations will attend services at the Congregational church at East Weymouth.

Another Fire In The Bloom Buildings

Electric wires were probably responsible for a second fire on Monday at the property of Morris Bloom in Washington Square, just over the Braintree line, whose losses are heavy these days. Good progress had been made since the fire of May 12 in rebuilding an addition to the Boston Cash Market building, and a refrigerating plant had been installed, using sulphur oxygen.

The blaze started where the new part joined the old, only a few minutes after the market was closed about 6.15 P. M. and spread rapidly to the tenement above the store occupied by Mr. Bloom and family.

Both the Braintree and Weymouth fire apparatus were summoned. Some delay resulted from bursting hose, and fumes from the sulphur oxygen reached some of the men. John Carter, one of the employees was overcome.

The fire did not get into the front store, the only damage there being from water. Mr. Bloom was asleep in his apartment when aroused by the fire. His loss may reach $4000, of which $2000 was on the new refrigerator plant, $1000 on stock in store house, and $1000 on house furnishings. Business was resumed at the market on Tuesday.

SEWING EXHIBITIONS

There will be exhibitions of sewing done by the girls of the elementary schools of Weymouth next week. These are to give parents and friends of the girls an opportunity to see what they have done and to encourage them in their work. It is hoped that mothers especially will make an effort to come.

The exhibitions at the Edward B. Nevin school will be Monday, June 13, at the Humphrey school Tuesday, June 14; at the Athens school, on Wednesday, June 15; at the Hunt school, Thursday, June 16. All the exhibitions will be in the afternoon during school hours.

W. R. C. NOTES

The next meeting of Corps 102 will be held June 14 at 2.30 P. M.; there will be initiation. Flag day will be observed in the evening under the direction of P. I. Mary E. Holbrook. A lunch will be served for those wishing to stay in the evening.

The quarterly meeting of the G. A. R. and W. R. C. will meet in Beacon hall, Brookline June 15, at 10.30 A. M.

Plans for the field day on June 18 are nearly completed.

DELPHI LODGE, K. OF P.

A well attended meeting of Delphi lodge, K. of P., was held in Pythian hall Thursday evening. The work of officers and staff was of that same high order that has made the Delphi team one of the best in this district. The class last evening numbered five and closed what has been one of the most successful seasons of work for the Delphi lodge. A delicious spread of strawberry shortcake and cream and usual good time followed the evening's work.

WEYMOUTH, JUNE 10, 1921

THOU SHALT REMEMBER.

There must be a consciousness of reserves in support if there is to be any real strength in a life, any strength such as the poet evidently had in mind. Such consciousness cannot exist in the soul that lives—or tries to live—a detached, unrelated life, nor can it be said that it is "standing at ease in nature, aploomb in the midst of irrational things." There are no supports to be called into the fight—or at least the power to call them is lacking. There may be great stir, much rushing to and fro, and a wild beating of the air, but there will be no application of power to life, since there will be no power to apply. These are they of wasted years, vain efforts and futile endeavors—and final failure. "Thou shalt remember all the way which the Lord thy God led thee these 40 years in the wilderness, to humble thee, and to prove thee, to know what was in thine heart." "Thou shalt remember"—the command still holds.

The Red rising in Germany at Lenin's bidding is confession of weakness on the part of the Red radicals everywhere. Lenin has tried out the communist theories and has found them unworkable, just as they have always been in all attempts that ever have been made. As a British statesman pointed out, they have found out in Russia that "locomotives cannot be patched and made to run with Karl Marx's theories," says the New York Commercial. If the communist theory has broken down in Russia, where it had its greatest opportunity, it can hardly be expected to work in Germany, where the people at large are opposed to the idea.

Arthur Reynolds, new president of the Continental and Commercial National Bank of Chicago, asked by a writer for Forbes' Magazine as to some particular quality to which more than others he could attribute his success, replied: "Perhaps I may call it 'sales-manship.' To be successful in any business, a knowledge of sales psychology and how to apply it is essential.
Sales psychology, after all, is nothing more than an understanding of human nature. The most successful men are not necessarily those who know the most. Men who have ideas and who know how to 'sell' their ideas to others, or win others over to their viewpoint,
achieve the greatest success."

In view of the part played in the World war by Greece and Turkey, most allied observers will join in the hope that after Turkey succeeds in inflicting heavy casualties upon the Greeks, the Greeks will rally and do as much to the Turks.

A Paris jury has condemned a religious fanatic to two months in prison for using witchcraft to stifle love. Many persons will avow that the process of arousing love is nothing other than a specialized branch of this art of sorcery.

From police reports, it appears that a moonshiner is almost sure to get caught, but so far no still manufacturer has suffered an interruption of his business.

"Falls 9,000 Feet in Plane, Attends Banquet," must have been somewhat of a poser for those who are given to reading just the headlines.

Sometimes we wonder whether there is more immorality in the world than in the old days or whether the reporters are more alert.

The man who is shocked because women smoke cigarettes forgets that his great grandmother may have smoked a pipe.

Less extreme shoes for women are predicted for the coming season. In price, let us hope.

A great many people who formerly held positions are now glad to get jobs.

FARM LETTER

AGRICULTURE IN BAY STATE

By Edward Lukeman

If any of the readers of this column are enough interested to examine the last U. S. census carefully they will find Massachusetts stands 38th in the list of farming.

Now what is the remedy for this condition? You cannot claim that the Massachusetts farmer is not a good farmer, or that his ancestors were not good farmers. They had to be in order to live. But conditions have completely changed and the farmer must understand this and meet the conditions of a new age.

On very many farms the scrub cow,
the scrub hog and scrub poultry reign supreme. Many farm yards harbor a lot of junk that should be valuable machinery. All for the want of proper places to store it. The land is badly run out on many of them, and will not produce more than one-half ton of hay to the acre, while under the intensive method one will produce three tons or six times as much.
The man who succeeds will not only be the one who is able to make two blades grow where one grew before, but the one who is able to keep two animals where one was kept before. The one who increases his flock of poultry and improves his breed of cattle and hogs. The farmer must raise corn to feed his animals instead of employing the easy and shiftless way of purchasing it by the bag at the stores.

It has been proven time and time again that more corn can be raised to the acre in this state than in Illinois or Iowa.

Then comes the question of farm labor, which is always a serious matter as far back as I can remember.
I think the day of the farm laborer under the old conditions has gone forever. The one who was a trusted counselor and a friend and almost a member of the family, has become extinct on most New England farms.

However a new factor has come to take the place of the farm-hand mentioned above, and that factor is the boys and girls and their clubs.
One of the greatest advantages arising from the late war was the enlistment of boys and girls in farm service. There is some danger that this may lapse for want of interest. Not all the boys and girls from the High schools will want to continue in this work, but many of them will.

Working so close to nature and to God will make it their life's profession, but the work and the compensation must both be made attractive.
The farmer must offer to his own children and to other children, if he has none of his own, opportunities as partners. The intelligent boy or girl will have to be given a share in the profits of the work they perform and this is as it should be.

At the Eastern States Exposition held last fall, 610 boys and girls each a prize winner in various fields, were given a week as a reward, and their intelligence and enthusiasm was most inspiring.

Here will be found the future farmers of Massachusetts, as well as the rest of the New England States.
Through the schools they will have first-hand knowledge of the most scientific methods. They will know the value of up-to-date farm machinery, and how to care for it. They will be inspired with a love of the very best in everything that pertains to the farm. They will produce the very best farm animals, and never be satisfied with anything of the scrub variety. Their pigs will outweigh.
Their cows give double the quantity of milk, and the hens produce double the number of eggs. They will come without prejudice, and they will fulfill the needs of Massachusetts agriculture.

New England now produces one-seventh of the manufactured products of the United States and the time is coming when Massachusetts will be able to feed itself. It will, however, need the encouragement of State and National agencies, of school authorities and county organizations and manufacturing interests. The cities must help or starve. The city people must get over the idea that the farmer is growing rich out of the high price of food. Other forces outside the farmer are to blame for that.
They should think that we are a generous people and live among historic surroundings. Here in more ancient days people of this state laid the foundation of mighty power.

The history of this state is closely interwoven with that of the nation.
Again and again it has sent forth its bravest to build up other states, and to the nation it has given men whose name and fame will live as long as the county lasts. E. L.

"Palaces" of Early Times.

Palaces are now the abodes of princes or kings, but the word was once used in a totally different sense.
Phillips gives the derivation from pal-lida, pales or paled fences. In Devonshire a palace was a storehouse; in Totness "a landing place, inclosed but not roofed in." Thus in an old lease drawn in 1703 we come upon the clause, "all that cellar . . . and the little palace and landing place adjoining the river Dart." In the forty-fifth Psalm, the eighth verse, is the sentence "out of ivory palaces," that is the storeplaces of cabinets made of ivory.—London Times.

Some People Believe This.

Select the number of stars in a constellation, add to it the number of the date of your birth, and divide the whole by 12. Keep the result in your mind until you shake hands with some one, then add the letters in that person's name to what you have. Divide by seven and you will get the number of months before you are married. If it should run over 13, and be even, you will marry a young man;
if uneven, an old man. If over twice 13 and even, he will be red headed;
if uneven, he will be bald and rich.—

AIM FOR HEALTH IN DRIVING CAR

Many Drivers Add to Numerous Ills by Failure to Consider Safety Points.

AVOID STRAINED ATTITUDES

Most Natural Position Is Correct One to Assume in Driving an Automobile—Slouching in Seat Will Cause Fatigue.

Motoring, taken in right doses, is healthful. There is such a thing, however, as an overdose. There is a correct and an incorrect way to drive and ride, from the standpoint of health, as well as from the standpoint of ordinary safety.

No learned physician need be consulted to determine if you drive correctly. Anyone can diagnose his own case. The symptoms are not hidden, says Cleveland Plain Dealer.

If, after a drive of fifty to a hundred miles, one gets out of his machine physically or mentally exhausted, "completely all in," his way of driving is "all wrong."

In driving any horse not particularly high spirited, the reins are usually left hanging rather loosely, seldom taut.

In steering an automobile, hold the wheel as you would a quiet, easy-going mare—easily.

Many people, when driving, hold to the steering wheel with all muscles tense and set. That is fatiguing and when quick action is demanded the muscles do not respond as readily as they should.

Constant driving in this fashion is usually due to nervousness. A general physical relaxation noted on finishing a trip is the symptom denoting this habit; though most persons so afflicted are aware of it, catching themselves frequently in strained attitudes.

Another Bad Habit.

Another bad habit among operators of motor vehicles is the tendency to slouch in the seat at the wheel. No one seems to cherish the old coachman's erect attitude, preferring to get as near a reclining position as possible.

Yet there are few coachmen suffering from curvature of the spine or round shoulders. The most natural sitting position is the correct one to assume when driving an automobile. Leaning over the wheel and resting one arm on the side of the car as on an arm rest are not healthful positions. While not necessarily harmful in themselves, they are in the end tiring.

A common affliction is eye strain. This is brought on by much night driving where the operator is peering for a long time into poorly lighted roads, or standing the glare of blinding searchlights.

To prevent this, look as much as possible into the stream of your own headlights and never, if possible, into approaching glares. If you are driving far enough on your own side of the road this is generally unnecessary.

Don't try to see too much at once. That is dangerous to more than the eyes.

Remove Rubber Footwear.

Inclement weather necessitates wearing of rubbers and overshoes. They have always been known to make the feet perspire when worn where the temperature is normal. When worn while operating an automobile, especially a closed car, the radiated heat from the motor passing up through the floor boards and transmitted by the metal controls, accentuates this tendency. Tender feet often result.

It is well to remove rubber footwear when driving a closed car. For similar reasons rubber-soled shoes are not recommended for one who drives much.

Another dangerous practice is that of opening a divided windshield in such a way as to allow a small but penetrating draft to blow on the face. In many cars the shield is so divided that when partly opened the cold blast strikes one directly across the eyes or forehead. This induces neuralgia and brings on head colds.

Better far to have the shield opened more, so no particular part is unduly exposed. Liability of colds is minimized.

"It is only a fool who, perspiring from undue or prolonged exertions and with pores open, tries to cool off with a speedy or long drive," remarks old Dr. Common Sense.

AUTOMOBILE NEWS

Always go over a grade crossing in second speed.

The muscles used in driving should be relaxed, but alert.

Try driving at 15 miles an hour and see if you can't keep within the law.

A speed indicator for motor vehicles has been invented that registers speed by the flash of colored lights.

Two-thirds of all the automobiles sold in this country last year went to the users in agricultural districts.

Good driving demands the attention of three senses: sight, hearing and touch. That is the reason concentration is so necessary.

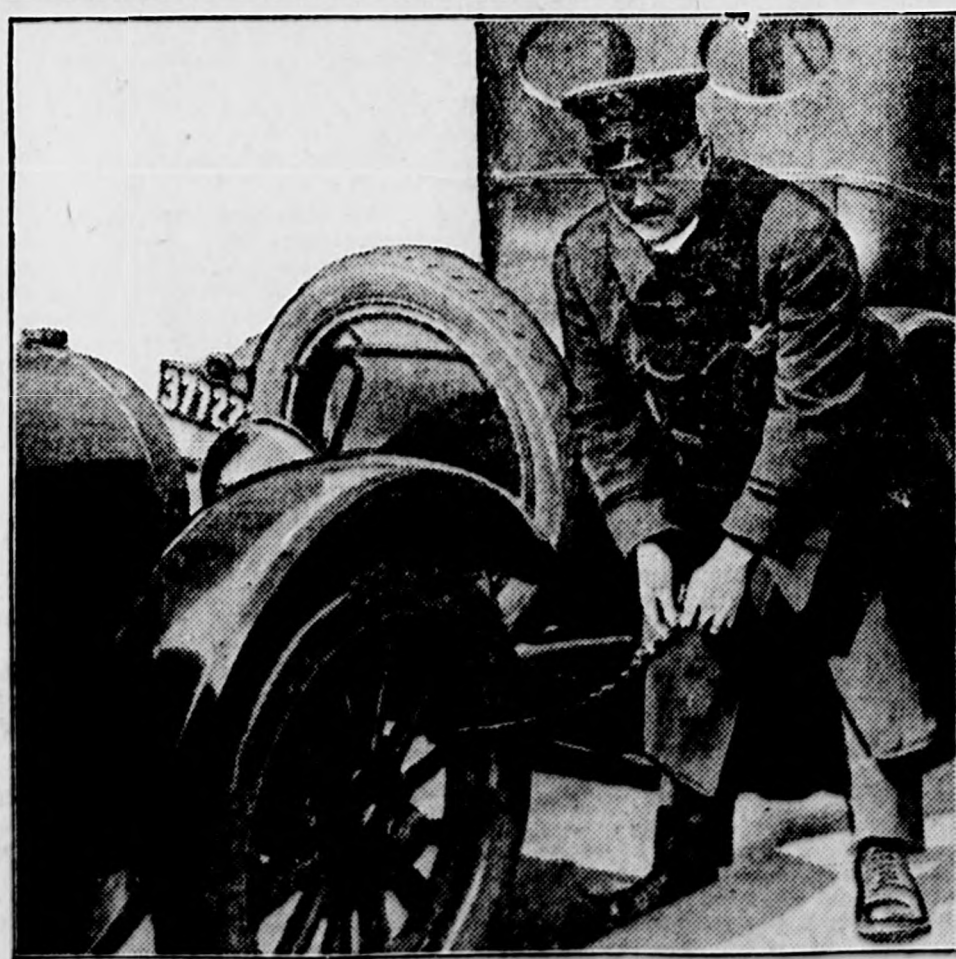

There are 163,000 physicians and surgeons and 40,000 dentists in this country listed with having one or more passenger automobiles each.

Motor car production is to be undertaken in Australia, to supply a light, medium-priced car which can withstand hard usage economically.

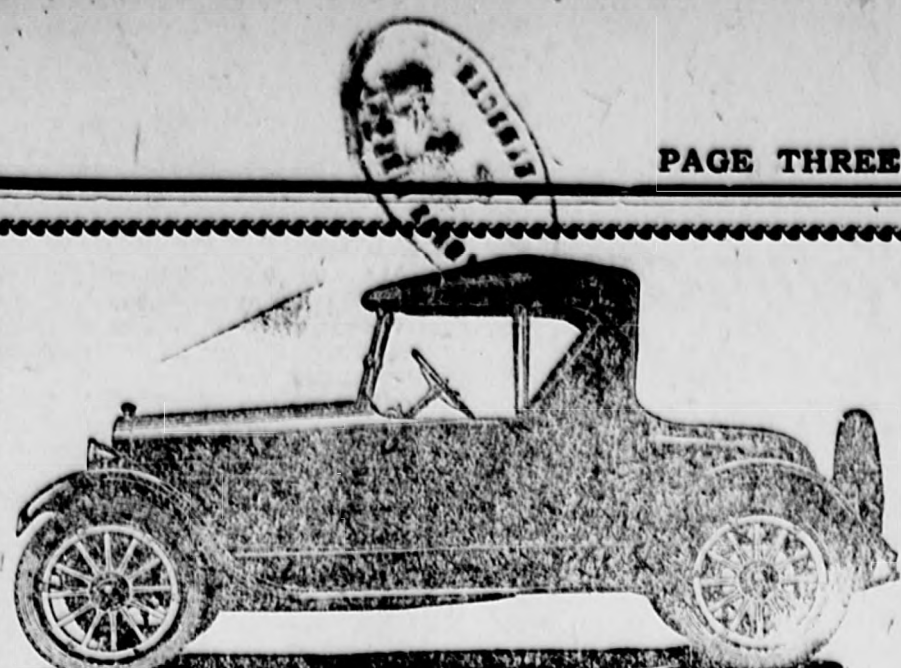

Inclosed side-car motor taxis are effectively operated in London and Paris at a low cost, reasonable rates, and easily handled in crowded traffic.

As a rival of the automobile among the finished products in the United States, the finished articles in men's and women's clothing are second in line.

CHAINS FOR TARDY MOTORISTS

The South Park police of Chicago have just been equipped with chains and when they find an automobile has been parked over thirty minutes, in violation of the city ordinance, they take one of the chains they are carrying and lock the car to one of the pretty electroliners that adorn the boulevard. The officers leave their card which informs the owner that he is on the "beat" and will be glad to release the car—after arranging for the owner to appear in court next morning. The photograph shows a policeman chaining up one of the machines that has overstayed its limit.

REO-SIX ROADSTER

A three-passenger Roadster for those who want the Power, Comfort and Durability of the touring car in a smaller model. Has ample carrying space. An excellent car for salesmen and for small families. Pronounced by many the prettiest-lined roadster on the market today.

"PASSION" AT OPERA HOUSE

The most recent of super-film plays, "Passion", which opens an engagement at the Old Fellows Opera House next Monday evening, is said to mark a new epoch in motion pictures. "Passion" is an intimate version of the story of a little French milliner who rose to a position commanding a king and affecting the destinies of a nation. It is presented as an Associated First National attraction and it comes to Weymouth with an actual record for establishing new ideals in screen production. Aside from its reputed new technical perfection there is a depth of panoramic perspective hitherto unknown to the silversheet and instanced by the passion of huge mobs rising in their might to overthrow the mighty and of which there have been plenty of demonstrations lately in the form of strikes and rebellions. One of the big scenes in this photodramatic spectacle is the storming of a mammoth barricaded prison by a mob of 5000 impassioned citizens, all of which becomes doubly impressive and realistic through the stereoscopic character of the new photoplay which displaces the flat photoplay that so often makes the illusion difficult.

Learn to Vernicol

It's the easy way of making things do by doing them over. Vernicol is a varnish stain. Stains and varnishes at each stroke of the brush.

Changes a paint brush into a magic wand—it works such wonders before your very eyes.

Dries quickly with a hard lustrous finish that wears and wears. That's why it is also great for floors.

OLD FOX'S REVENGE

WHEN all the nuts were fixed to suit Grandpa Fox he put them away and brought out some very fine, big radishes, which he carefully
scooped out after cutting them in half.

These he also filled with red pepper and glued together, touching the cut place with a bit of paint to cover the mark.

When he had a good pile of them finished he looked at his work with a broad smile on his face and carried them in a pan to the pantry window, where it was nice and cool, so they would not wither.

The next morning he was up long before the sun peeped through the trees in the woods; in fact, he had been awake nearly all night, so he might be the very first one up in the woods.

Grandpa took his basket of nuts and poured them on the ground near his house back of a bush, as if he had hidden them there.

The radishes he put in a basket and placed it under a tree and dropped his coat beside it so it would look as if he had just been in the garden working.

Then he sat down in the house by the window with a stick in his hand and waited.

He did not have to wait long for the Squirrel brothers were always up bright and early and called for Tommie Rabbit to come out and find some fun.

They came running along the path that led past the house where Grandpa Fox lived, when Billy Squirrel, who was quicker than the others, ran into Grandpa's yard.

He spied the nuts and back he went as quick as a flash and told the news to the others.

Tommie Rabbit did not care very much for the nuts, but he ran with Billy and his brother, and he spied the basket of radishes.

Looking around all three of them made sure that Grandpa was not in sight, and then they took all the nuts and radishes they could carry, and from his window Grandpa pounded the sill with the big stick and shouted:
"Drop those, you little rascals; drop them!"

Grandpa Fox knew that was all that was needed to make them carry off the nuts and radishes, so he pounded and called until they were out of sight.

"Stolen sweets are always the sweetest," he said. "That may be true in some cases, but I'll wager my pipe those youngsters will find out that is not a true saying always."

And they did, for Billy Squirrel did not bother Grandpa Fox any more.
Such sneezing was never heard in the woods before, even the chicken with the whooping cough did not sneeze any harder, though they all found their heads and tails were safe when it was over.

Their mouths and throats were burned, too, and so for many days they suffered for their badness and now old Grandpa Fox can sit all day in the sun and no one bothers him.

THE RIGHT THING AT THE RIGHT TIME

By MARY MARSHALL DUFFEE

WHEN YOU DINE

"Practice yourself, for heaven's sake, in little things and thence proceed to greater."—Epictetus.

NEVER take your seat until the lady of the house is seated. Never lounge on the table with your elbows, nor tip backwards in your chair.

Never play with your knives, forks, or glasses, but cultivate repose at the table. It is an aid to digestion.

Never make diagrams on the tablecloth with your fork or spoon to illustrate what you are talking about.

Never leave the table to get something that you want to show some one else at the table—to find a book to verify a quotation you have made or settle a disputed point. These things can be attended to after the meal.

Never light cigar or cigarette unless you are asked to by your hostess or unless others are doing so. Never, under any circumstances, smoke between courses, but wait until after dessert when coffee is served.

Never tuck your napkin into your vest, yoke or collar. It is unfolded once and laid across the knees without a flourish. After the meal, at a restaurant or formal dinner, lay it unfolded at your place. If you are a time guest in the household and will remain another meal, you may fold the napkin in its original creases.

Never put the end of a spoon into your mouth, sip everything from the side of the spoon, and do this noiselessly. Never use a spoon when a fork will serve. Forks are now often used for eating ice cream, and salad is folded or cut with the side of a fork, never with the knife. Even small vegetables like peas are eaten with a fork.

Never hold your knife and fork up in the air when your host is serving you afresh. Lay them on one side of the plate when you send it to the host by servant or your neighbor at table.

Never leave your spoon in coffee or tea cup. Lay it on the saucer.
Never cool food by blowing upon it.
Wait until it becomes cool enough to eat.

Never take a second helping at a large and formal dinner. You will find yourself eating alone.

Never make yourself conspicuous in any way by aiding the host or hostess in serving, unless especially asked to do so, or in passing dishes when servants are provided for that purpose.

Never push back your plate and finger crumbs at the conclusion of the meal. It indicates undue haste.

Telephone Improvement.

A wartime invention promising permanent usefulness is the throat microphone transmitter. Placed against the side of the throat when a person is talking, it transmits speech clearly, and without being affected by outside sounds. In a late type of the instrument, an ebonite handle presses the microphone against the throat and an ordinary small receiver against the ear, but for long conversations the throat microphone is mounted as an attachment of the head-gear receiver.

"What's in a Name?"

By MILDRED MARSHALL

Facts about your name, its history, meaning, whence it was derived; significance;
your lucky day and lucky jewel.

ALBERTA

ALBERTA, meaning nobly bright, has its origin in the Teutonic language. It is one of the names coming from the nobility of which Aethel is the root.

Aethelbryht was its first form, though it was a masculine name and was given to the first Christian king of England. The famous bishop of Prague, who was martyred near Dant-zig while preaching to the heathen Prussians in 997, was called Adel-brecht and his fame spread the use of the name throughout a great part of Europe.

Italy received it and straightway changed it to Alberto. It is from this latter that the feminine forms, Alberta and Albertine, were formed.
The husband of the late Queen Victoria, who bore the name of Albert, brought both the masculine and feminine into great vogue in England. Indeed, it has since been accepted as a national name.

But, like all names which have a masculine and feminine equivalent, Alberta has no really individual existence. After all, she is merely a masculine name with a feminine termination. But unlike many of her contemporaries, such as Edwina and Roberta, she is almost frivolously feminine and is not regarded as a substitute name for the hoped-for son and heir who was to have been called Albert.

Jade is Alberta's talismanic stone.
It has the power to assure its wearer great prosperity, and freedom from danger and disease. But it should never be removed from the finger, arm, or throat on which it is worn.
Monday is Alberta's lucky day and 1 her lucky number.

"NEWS"

IN THE earlier journals, before they were called "newspapers," it was the custom to print at the head the figure of a compass, symbolizing that the journal covered events in all directions. An enterprising publisher hit on the idea of printing the cardinal points, N-E-W-S, and in a short time every journal adopted the idea.

Pure-Breds Do Pay

That pure-bred livestock is a safe, profit-bringing investment for any farmer has long been the conviction and the message of the great national weekly of farm progress,

The COUNTRY GENTLEMAN

In a widely discussed recent series it pointed out, with merciless publicity, dangerous evil practices among certain breeders and distributors of pure-breds. Next week in a constructive article, it tells the general farmer how, in spite of these practices, he can profitably stock up with pure-breds NOW.

William Johnson writes the story. For several months he has been traveling all about the country, interviewing leading breeders and livestock farmers and gathering material for a message that will be helpful to everyone who raises animals. His able, concretely suggestive story deserves your attention.

Grammatical Controversy.

The controversy as to the propriety of using "It is me" instead of "It is I" is several centuries old. It arose from the fact that from the earliest times there was in use in the languages of Europe two sounds that served to indicate the person speaking. In English they appear as "I" and "me," the older form of "I" being "ic." In the vernacular of England both forms of the phrase are used, but "It is me" finds greater favor, if one may take literature as indicating preference. Notwithstanding the fact, the grammarians have arrayed themselves against it. Considered etymologically, the correct form is "It am I," and this is the way in which the phrase was used by Chaucer in "The Knight's Tale" lines 1463 and 1733.—Literary Digest.

Tolstoy Tribute to Dickens.

Maxim Gorky published some jottings from his notebook of talks with Leo Tolstoy toward the end of the old man's life, and among them there is a curious appreciation of Charles Dickens, according to the continental edition of the London Mail. Tolstoy said of him: "Dickens has expressed a remarkable thought. He says life was given to us to be valiantly defended to the last breath. . . . He was on the whole a sentimental and loquacious writer of mediocre intelligence. But he knew better than anyone how to put a novel together. He certainly did it better than Balzac. Both writers have left a number of badly written books, and yet Balzac had genius." The talks cover a wide range of subjects.

The Road to Success.

Keep so busy with a real job, that you haven't time to fuss about a possible job. Besides, when you are really busy you won't have time to listen to a lot of empty high-sounding talk that begets nothing but trouble. Let the little squabbles go and attend to business. While the other fellow is telling the world what a bad place it is you will be earning a new dress for the baby. One of these days they will wake up to the fact that to pay the butcher they must keep on pushing. There's no royal road to a place in the sun. For the past several years thousands of fellows have been as near wealth as they will ever get. Yet they have not profited.

Blue Bird for Happiness.

To those of us who believe in the blue bird as a harbinger of happiness, it is gratifying to know that a much more brilliant one than our blue bunting exists, says a correspondent. It lives in California, is a little larger than our kingfisher and has feathers of a glorious blue. Among its companions are humming birds—tiny, bright-colored, timid things, with long, long bills, which they bury deep into the blossoms, hoping, perhaps, for their part, to find happiness hidden therein. Meantime, grey and white mocking birds, with long tails and a very cheeky expression, look on with scorn.

Roses in Many Lands.

Those who associate the rose prominently with England, are surprised to find mountains covered with roses in China, bushes of them; or to see tall trees uplifting in their arms climbing roses, whose lanky stems, having reached the summit, burst into flower, and roll down the other side in wave upon wave of blossom. In winter, they are beautiful, covered with orange or scarlet flask-shaped "hips." But though wild roses are far more varied and abundant in the mountains of Asia than they are in England, still England has its roses and pergolas; and is not the rose garden surely all its very own?

WEYMOUTH MAN'S EXPERIENCE

Can you doubt the evidence of this Weymouth citizen?

You can verify Weymouth endorsement.

Read this:

Benj. W. Hewitt, 97 Broad street, Weymouth, says: "I had kidney trouble and I could hardly straighten up. I had backache and was annoyed with frequent action of my kidneys. I heard of Doan's Kidney Pills and used two boxes and the trouble disappeared. At my work I have to bend over constantly. I have had no return of the trouble and am glad to recommend Doan's to others." (State-ment given March 24, 1913.)

On February 10, 1921, Mr. Hewitt said: "I still think Doan's Kidney Pills are the best ever. I use them whenever my back or kidneys bother me and they never fail to relieve the trouble in a short time."

OF ORIENTAL AIR

Negligees Featuring Loose Trousers With Mandarin Coats.

Soft Satins and Chiffons Are Favored Material For These Comfy Home Garments.

One would think that the brilliant spectacle of Mecca still lingered, if one were to enter any of the negligee departments in the big city stores, for the Orient wields a strong influence in the new spring boudoir robes. Loose trousers with short mandarin coats taken from the costume of the Chinese lady, full gathered trousers with low hip girdles and floating chiffons which whisper of Turkish harems, while others show a Russian influence that in itself is tinged with the color of the Orient.

Of course soft satins and chiffons are the favored material for these sumptuous negligees, although lace and chiffons form charming combinations. The colors are indeed vivid, jade and emerald greens, royal and turquoise blues with flaming red and many orange-tinged shades.

"Bagdad" is the name given to one negligee. Of a scarab blue crepe satin, with long flowing chiffon sleeves in the same tone, it consists of loose trousers which drape about the ankle and a wide-sleeved jacket. The neck and sleeves are embroidered in Persian red silk, the long tassels being in this color.

Another robe that in its long clinging lines shows a Russian influence is aptly called by its creator, "Pavlova." It is fashioned from peacock-blue crepe satin and is faced with a Baltic red chiffon, the long scarf which passed around the throat being of this fabric. The inset V is of cloth of gold, while the sleeve trimming and the long Egyptian girdle are of this cloth embroidered in varicolored beads. A Chinese negligee is of jade-green satin trimmed with gathered black chiffon and motifs of black taffeta on which hand-painted fruits are depicted.

GOWNS FASHIONED AT HOME

Graceful Negligees or Hostess Robes Are Easily Constructed by the Family Dressmaker.

The simple yet graceful negligees or hostess gowns which in their straight clinging lines hark back to the days of the Italian Renaissance are easily fashioned by the home dressmaker.

Such a garment with its long side sleeves, which are open to the hem, may be cut from three yards of any 40-inch material. Fold the cloth in the middle, cutting out a rounding neck opening which may be slit out on the shoulders and fastened with quaint Chinese buttons and loops. Line the material, if it be velvet, with a contrasting shade of georgette or chiffon.

Cut a slit at each side of the front and back, through which to pass a heavy silk cord, and finish the four corners with tassels of silk. The edge may be finished with a jet beading, while the slits at the sides through which the cord passes may be piped.

Dressy Satin Suits.

Very feminine and dressy are the new satin tailored suits. A chic one is made of dark-blue satin. The skirt is rather short and narrow, save for a few gathers on the sides. The box coat opens over a gilet of ecru flit lace. This same lace is seen at the edges of the three-quarters sleeves. The lower part of the coat, the entire sleeves, the collar are heavily padded and worked in intricate machine-stitched patterns. This is called "matelasse." This garniture has been exceedingly popular in Paris and is seen on many tailors' counters.

GOOD-NATURED AND PATIENT

English Visitor Pays Tribute to Virtues He Noted as Distinguishing American People.

A while ago I published a little book on a tour I made in America during war time. I dedicated it "To the kindest people in the world," and I put the dedication in Latin to spare their blushes. Should I write another work of the same kind, I think I should dedicate it "To the most good-natured, tolerant and patient people in the world," writes Sir Arthur E. Shipley in the Outlook.

Although as the election grew imminent interest in it became keen and discussion eager, still I only once heard an acute disagreement between the supporters of the rival candidates, and this was between a husband and wife. It seemed based upon a fundamental difference of opinion on that most innocuous and unexciting fluid, milk.

As a rule the discussions were most amicable, and usually finished up, after the method of Lincoln, in a joke or a story. Their toleration equals their every variety of religious dogma; these are almost as numerous in the United States as are patent medicines. They quietly endure and ignore the most infernal noises. Owing to the enormous distances one has to traverse in the states, one spends a considerable part of one's time on the train and it is this reason which possibly accounts for the fact that Americans persist in talking on the cars.

Mr. Lucas has recently reminded us that Carlyle bequeathed certain books to Harvard university because of his esteem and regard for the American people—"particularly the more silent part of them." The latter exist not only in the imagination of the Chelsea philosopher. They are perhaps not very numerous, still they exist.

MEAT UNDER PERPETUAL BAN

Residents and Visitors on Island of Valamo, Finland, Must Obey Law Centuries Old.

Every day is fish day on the little Island of Valamo, Finland, 12 squares miles in area. Almost ten centuries ago monks of the Greek Catholic church embarked on Lake Ladoga to find a new home and landed on Valamo.

A fine old monastery they built and framed a law that from that day on no meat should ever be eaten on the island. Recently several members of the American Red Cross stationed at the Russian refugee camp at Viborg, made a journey to the island and were entertained at lunch in the monastery built to replace the one destroyed in 1754. The old law is still observed by the 450 monks now living there.

From the day they arrive on the island to the day they leave or die no meat is eaten by them. Husky, strong and living to a good old age, this lack of meat as food is not apparent in their build. For lunch the Americans had fish in several forms, fried, baked and in soup, but always fish.

Hunting is barred, trapping is taboo, so that temptation in the shape of meat may never come. Smoking also is banned.

No Aerial Mail for Chinese.

While Chang Tso Lin, who today dominates the north of China, was wondering just what he would do with six airplanes which he ordered from England the question of the disposal of three of them was settled for him. He was undecided whether to use them for military purposes or for the establishment of a mail service, in accordance with the terms of the contract. While debating the question he ordered three to be sent to Mukden, for possible postal use, and the remainder to Paoingfu for military purposes. Those shipped to Mukden were loaded on flat cars and started on their way. Some distance from Tientsin they bumped a railroad bridge and were not only smashed but also put the bridge out of commission. So it looks as though those who expected to get their mail via the air route are doomed to disappointment.

Thrill Not on Program.

President Oregon of Mexico has given his sanction to bull fighting by appearing one Sunday afternoon when Rodolfo Gaona and Ernesto Pastor fought jointly. He occupied a ring-side seat. When Pastor, playing the last bull, made what appeared to be a death thrust, the President arose to leave and the band immediately struck up the national anthem. The bull, however, was not dead and started to charge. At the sound of the anthem he stopped in his tracks, lowered his head, and with Pastor standing at rigid attention not three feet from the bull's horns, the hymn was completed. A second later the bull tumbled over dead. Veteran fighters asserted the spectacle was the strangest ever seen in the Mexico City arena.—Brooklyn Eagle.

Then All Was Quiet.

Junior has reached the age of inquisitiveness. With grandma, he was making a social call. He noticed that the piano was not in the same position as the one at home, that theavenport was different, and that the library table was of another design and called attention to the facts in tones that all heard.

"Grandma," he said, finally, "haven't they got any more chairs?"

"Why of course they have. Now keep quiet."

"Well, why is that man sitting on the piano stool then?"

Where Cheeses Are Made.

Cheeses are generally named for the town or district from which they come. American cheese is the name used for that form of the English cheddar generally liked in this country. Brie, Camembert, Coulommier, Neufchatel and Roquefort are French cheeses from different parts of France, and differing in some cases very much in flavor and appearance. Edam and Gouda cheese are from Holland. Gruyere, the cheese of many holes, is from Switzerland, and the strong-smelling Limburger comes from Belgium, and not from Germany, as is often supposed.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE

Many from Weymouth attended Sunday afternoon a lecture on Christian Science at the Masonic Temple at Wollaston, under the auspices of the First Church of Christ, Scientist of Quincy, by Frank H. Leonard, C. S. B., of Chicago. He said in part:

Christian Science was first brought to my attention in the fall of 1884 and under the following circumstances. About half my life up to that time had been spent in bed. The physicians all said I had been born with an incurable organic disease, and that it was improbable that I would live to reach manhood. Their statements seemed about to be proved true when, through a case of healing, Christian Science was brought into our home. This led to my having Christian Science treatment, so successfully that three months later our family physician said a miracle had been performed and that I was absolutely free from any physical disease.

Because of my condition, and as a preparation for what was deemed inevitable, God had been explained to me far more than is usual with a small child, and the statement frequently made that He sent sickness and suffering as a chastening and purifying preparation for the joys of the kingdom of heaven. Naturally, however, the only thing I thought of was the suffering; and when I was told that God caused it a terrible sense of fear and helplessness arose, when love and trust should have been present. We can never love nor trust anything of which we are afraid; therefore the thoughts about God were locked inside my consciousness, because of my fear of giving them utterance. The name, and not the nature, of God, then as now, was all that most people knew; so my surprise was great and unqualified when I learned that the healing work in Christian Science is all accomplished through a right knowledge of God; that there is nothing peculiar or secret about the work done, nor is the ability to do it confined to a select few; it is to be acquired through growth thing race. In fact, Christian Science gives humanity a clear apprehension of the birthright of man, of how to gain it, and how to use it.

Christian Science unfolds to its students that knowledge of God which keeps one well mentally, morally, and physically, and shows that ignorance of Him is the procurer of sin, sickness, and death. It teaches that regenerated thinking means regenerated living in all ways. It reveals through an endless, infinite vista of Christian idealism, God enthroned and omnipotent, omnipresent, and omniscient, and the fact that one may intelligently call upon Him in any time of need and always find Him right at hand, ready to heal and save. This teaching brings God to us as a real presence, instead of an ephemeral hope, and so establishes the fact normally and naturally that He has dominion over all things, including the ill of the flesh, and will destroy all evils, whether they present themselves as mental, moral, or physical, when He is intelligently asked to do so.

It has been said that the Christian Scientists are too familiar with God. They are familiar with God because, knowing Him to be what He is, knowing Him to be both the Father and Mother of all His children, they go to Him with all their troubles, sure that His love and wisdom will dispel them. It is just, however, in this connection to say that no people on earth so venerate, worship, and adore Him as do Christian Scientists, and this is true because He never fails them in their extremity.

We are told in the Bible that we must be regenerated. Regeneration is first mental, and is followed by the outward results as a natural consequence. It is very practical to say you cannot think right and do wrong, for can you think wrong and do right? If we will gain the right knowledge of God, and man's relationship to Him, and cling to it, we shall always be well men. We must be obedient in all things to law of God, or good, as He is called in the Icelandic translation of the Bible, because it is our duty to set that Christ is lifted above human sense into spiritual realization, that all mankind may be drawn unto Him, and find the freedom promised them.

MRS. JOSEPHUS S. WHITE

Angeline W. White passed away at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Abbie A. Lewis on Cedar street, East Weymouth, in her 94th year. Mrs. White was born in Taunton April 26, 1828, the daughter of Ezekiel and Angeline Bonney, and oldest of ten children; her early childhood days were spent in Hanson. At the age of 18 she married Josephus S. White, late of South Weymouth, and resided on Union street for 47 years. Since the death of her husband she has made her home with her daughter, Mrs. Abbie A. Lewis.

Mrs. White enjoyed young people and was ready at all times to enter into any entertainments they might have. She was a great lover of company and her fondest moments were spent with her friends around her. Although a great many persons of her advanced age could not be urged to ride in an automobile, she was always eager for a ride in one. She has enjoyed good health and remarkable eyesight up to a short time ago. She leaves two daughters, five grandchildren and nine great-grandchildren.

WAR OF JUNK DEALERS

Now, J. Gibbs denies the report that he was willing Sam Beer of Quincy should have a junk license in Weymouth. He is against any out of town man having a junk license here, unless Weymouth men can obtain licenses in Braintree, Quincy and neighboring towns. At Mr. Gibbs request, the Weymouth Selectmen have revoked his license recently granted and refunded the $59 which he paid.

By the new timetable which went into effect on the N. Y. N. H. & H. R. on Sunday, Weymouth and the other South Shore stations have two new Sunday evening trains to Boston, leaving Weymouth by daylight time at 8.56 and 10.56. An additional train also leaves Boston for Weymouth at 2.20, arriving at 9.01. New express trains are also run between Boston and Nantasket Junction. There are other changes as will be seen by the timetable in another column.

BUILDING COST REASONABLE

This Design is Attractive in Appearance and Thoroughly Comfortable From the Standpoint of Number of Rooms and Equipment.

By WILLIAM A. RADFORD.

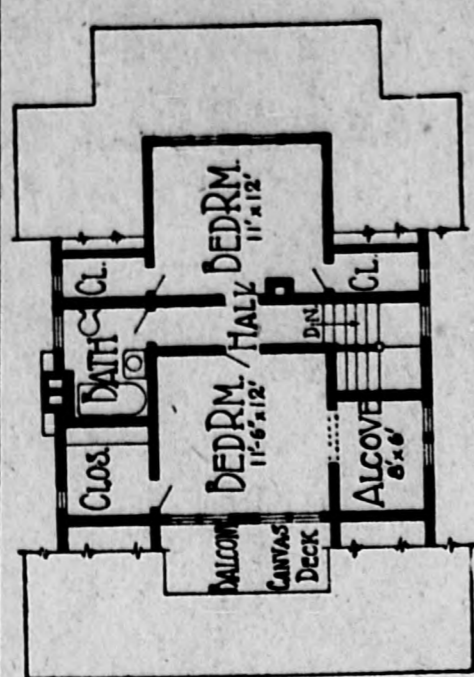

Mr. William A. Radford will answer questions and give advice FREE OF COST on all subjects pertaining to the subject of building, for the readers of this paper. On account of his wide experience as Editor, Author and Manufacturer, he is, without doubt, the highest authority on all these subjects. Address all inquiries to William A. Radford, No. 1827 Prairie avenue, Chicago, Ill., and only inclose two-cent stamp for reply.

According to all indications, the big demand by home builders for several years to come will be for small homes. Thousands of families, in an effort to get away from the exorbitant rents of the apartments in the cities, will build homes of their own, and because of the cost and their limited means, these homes will necessarily be small. But they will be as complete and just as modern as any pretentious home on an exclusive boulevard. The building art has been developed to the point where the small home can supply the same comforts and conveniences that the larger and more expensive one has heretofore had alone.

With a small home the man is not worried over rents, not worried over a place for his children; he has plenty of room to turn around in, plenty of fresh air to breathe. And he is an independent citizen keenly interested in at side and rear provide an abundance of real daylight and insure splendid ventilation.

Between the reception hall and the kitchen, which is at the rear of the lower floor, is the grade entry and staircase to the second floor. The kitchen is a splendidly arranged room equipped with many labor-saving devices of a novel nature, such as the built-in hinged ironing board which fits snugly, when not in use, into a niche in the wall, and various cupboards for utensils and the like. At one corner in a sort of wing is the pantry, a large room designed to be a storage and work room. It is also fitted with several space-saving features of which the outdoor icing refrigerator will find much favor with the housewife. A swinging door connects the kitchen with the dining room.

The upper floor or half story, for this house is what is familiarly known as a story-and-a-half house, contains the two bedrooms, bathroom and a small alcove, 8 by 6 feet, which can be used as a sewing room. The bedrooms are of comfortable size, 11 by 12 feet, and well lighted and ventilated by a row of windows in the front and rear dormers. Each bedroom has adequate closet space for clothing. The front bedroom opens out on to a small balcony with special prepared canvas flooring.

There will be thousands of small homes like the one shown here built this spring and summer. If they are planned along the same substantial lines, there need be little fear that they will not prove to be comfortable and ideal homes. Only through the protection and continued prosperity of the home can the nation hope to survive. In face of the present acute shortage it is imperative that building be started and carried out on a large scale. Otherwise we may have disturbances of a far-reaching character.

The front porch is quite large, extending the full width of the house and screened in so as to make an admirable lounging place on the warm days. Recessed as it is under the main roof, the porch is well protected by solid walls on either end. The front door is a single door, artistic in design. It opens into a small reception hall, which leads to the large living room on the left. These rooms are connected by a cased opening.

The living room is an extra large room, ideal for the family lounging and resting room. In the outside wall is a large open fireplace, and on one side of this fireplace is a wall bookcase. This room is the most important room in the house and consequently the most comfortable and attractive. French doors lead the way into the dining room, a room not quite so large, but perhaps more cheerful and brighter, an ideal place for the happy family around the dinner table. Windows

POULTRY

COMFORT FOR SITTING HENS

Give "Broodies" Nests Where They Will Not Be Disturbed During Period of Incubation.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture)

There are several ways to tell when a hen is becoming broody and wants to sit. Soft, downy feathers are left in the nest; the hen stays on the nest longer when laying. On being approached she will remain on the nest, making a chucking noise and ruffling her feathers. When one is reasonably sure that the hen is broody, and her breast feels warm to the hand, she is ready to be transferred to the nest previously prepared where she is to sit.

At this time it is advisable to dust the hen thoroughly with insect powder. In doing so hold the hen by the feet with the head down, working the powder well into the feathers, especially those around the vent and under the wings. The sitting hen should be dusted again on or about the eighteenth day of incubation to be sure that no lice are present when the chicks are hatched. Powder should also be sprinkled in the nest. Sodium fluoal may be used for the purpose, say poultry specialists of the United States Department of Agriculture.

When possible the nest should be in some out-of-the-way place, where the hen will not be disturbed. Night is the best time for moving the hen from the regular laying nest to the one she is to sit on. She should be handled carefully. A china egg or two should be placed in the nest, and a board or a covering may be placed over the nest so that the hen will not get off. Toward the end of the second day go quietly to the nest, leave some feed and water, and remove the covering from the top or front of the nest, so that she can come off when ready. The best feed for the sitting hen is whole corn or wheat, or both. Should she return to the nest after feeding, replace the china egg with those to be incubated. The nest should be slightly darkened, as the hen is then not so likely to become restless.

In cool weather it is best not to put more than 10 eggs under a hen. Later in the spring, however, from 12 to 15 eggs can be set, according to the size of the hen.

When several hens are sitting in the same room they should be separated by partitions and should be kept on the nests and allowed to come off only once each day to receive feed and water. A hen that does not voluntarily come off the nest should be taken off. As a rule hens will return to their nests before there is any danger of the eggs chilling, but if they do not go back in half an hour they should be put back.

Examine and clean the nest carefully, removing any broken eggs and washing those that are soiled. Nesting material soiled by broken eggs should be replaced with clean straw, hay, or chaff. Nests containing broken eggs soon become infested with mites and lice, which will cause the hens to become uneasy and leave the nest. This is likely to be the cause of the loss of valuable sittings of eggs. When a nest is infested with mites, the hen, if fastened in, will often be found standing over rather than sitting on the eggs.

Eggs laid late in winter or early in spring are frequently infertile, and for that reason it is advisable to set several hens at the same time. After from five to seven days' incubation, the time depending somewhat on the color and thickness of the shells, the eggs should be tested, the infertile and dead-germ eggs removed and the fertile ones returned to the hens. Thus in many instances all the eggs remaining under several hens may be placed under one or two, and the hens from which the eggs were taken may be reset. For instance, 30 eggs are set under 3 hens at the same time, that is, 10 under each hen. At the end of 7 days, at which time the eggs should be tested, it may be found that 10 are infertile or have dead germs, leaving only 20 fertile eggs. These 20 eggs can then be put under the two hens, and a new sitting placed under the third hen.

RIBBONS STRAY INTO BY-PATHS

RIBBONS continue to wander into various by-paths—most of them familiar, but always alluring. Having made a place for themselves in almost every article of women's and children's apparel, they proceeded to make themselves useful in all sorts of little furnishings for the home, and time adds to their popularity for making all these things.

There is a world of pretty things at the ribbon counter to tempt us to try our hands at making them, and few of them are difficult for the average needlewoman.

For the baby bonnet at the left of the group a wide, soft satin ribbon in cream color, blue or pink is chosen and shaped to fit the head by rows of shirrings. These form frills about the face and neck. The bonnet has a very soft interlining and a lining of very light, soft silk. Narrow satin ribbon makes the bridle which extends from side to side under the chin.

Wide and narrow ribbons are used for the child's hat shown at the right. The top crown and side crown are tucked in very narrow, hand-run tucks. Where they are joined straps of narrow ribbon are placed and the same decoration is used for the edge of the brim—the straps overlapping. The same ribbon makes the hanging loops and ends at the back.

The sashet bags illustrated are made of satin ribbons in light colors. They are merely oblongs of ribbon, sewed together at the edges, stuffed with scented cotton and tied in a bundle with baby ribbon. Sometimes a tiny safety pin is fastened to the end of each sashet so that it can be quickly pinned in the dress or camisole.

Hemstitching and small tucks make the decoration for the camisole of wide ribbon, with shoulder straps of narrow ribbon and little clusters of chiffon roses adorn it. For the bags both plain and brocaded ribbons are used with celluloid mountings and ribbon handles. In the little coat or dress hanger, very narrow lace is used for embellishing the satin ribbon that is shirred to cover it. Plain satin ribbon is shirred to cover the pin-cushion that finishes the group, with narrow ribbon making the frill and bows, the flowers and cords that finish it.

To Swim or Not to Swim

THERE are bathing suits and bathing suits in materials and styles that differ considerably, designed to meet the needs of women who do more or less—considerably less—swimming. They may be conveniently classed as swimming suits, bathing suits and beach suits—and in buying them one has to bear in mind just what tests they will be put to.

The logical swimming suit is made of pure wool yarns firmly knitted, elastic and shaped to cling close to the figure. It should fit perfectly and hold its shape indefinitely. Such suits are to be had in new colorings and they consist of short close-fitting trunks reaching not quite to the knees and in an overgarment that is a little shorter than the trunks, sleeveless and having a round neck. They may slip on, or fasten on one shoulder. Half hose and stocking cap to match often accompany them and they are usually worn in two colors, as orange and black, blue and red, green and white, black and red and so on. Such suits are for the real business of swimming and are concerned chiefly with being simple and substantial.

For the average woman a bathing suit spends considerably more of its time on the beach than in the water and is designed to be attractive as well as useful. Such a suit is pictured, made of a light-weight, woven wool and ornamented with braid. It has trunks somewhat longer than the overgarment and is pictured in black and white, worn with black silk stockings and white canvas shoes. There is a sash of the fabric that slips through slides and ties at the front and a pretty cap of rubberized cloth brightens up this very smart looking affair. It is not so close fitting as the regulation swimming suit—which fact often is advantageous to its wearer—and it is becoming.

MAKE DOUGHNUT LIGHT AND RICH

Results of Series of Experiments Made by Department of Agriculture Specialists.

THINGS TO DO TO AVOID FAT

Do Not Be Too Lavish in Use of Butter, Sugar and Eggs—Testing Temperature With Thermometer Is Excellent Plan.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.) If you are fond of doughnuts, but find those you make at home become soaked with fat while frying, the following suggestions may be of help. They are the result of a long series of experiments in the absorption of fat by fried batters and doughs carried on in the experimental kitchen of the United States Department of Agriculture.

A rich dough always absorbs more fat in frying than a plainer mixture. Unless you wish your doughnuts to be excessively rich, do not be too lavish with butter, sugar, and eggs. The following recipe makes doughnuts which, if properly fried, are not so excessively rich as to be a menace to digestion.

Plain Doughnuts.

1 cupful sugar, 1/2 cupful butter (level), 1/2 cupful milk, 1/2 cupful flour, 1/2 cupful eggs, 1/2 cupful baking powder (level), 1/2 cupful salt, 1/2 cupful cinnamon, 1/2 cupful nutmeg.

A very soft dough absorbs more fat than a stiffer mixture, was another fact found through these experiments. Too much flour, however, makes a doughnut that is not so light and fluffy as is desirable. The addition of hot rice potatoes to the mixture makes a doughnut that is light and fluffy, but at the same time does not absorb much fat. Doughnuts made by this recipe are delicious when fresh, but also keep well.

A Wire Plunger That Will Keep Doughnuts Under Fat Enables You to Fry Doughnuts in Half the Time and the Result Is Better.

Potato Doughnuts.

1 1/2 cupfuls of sugar, 4 table spoonfuls of butter, 1/2 cupful milk, 1/2 cupful flour, 1/2 cupful eggs, 1/2 cupful baking powder, 1/2 cupful salt, 1/2 cupful cinnamon, 1/2 cupful nutmeg, 1/2 cupful hot rice potatoes.

Fry your doughnuts no longer than necessary. Frying doughnuts in fat that is not hot enough, or rolling and cutting them so that they are too thick to cook through in a short time, or failure on the part of the cook to judge when they are done, or any other cause that keeps them in the fat too long, tends to make them greasy. Testing the temperature of the fat with a thermometer is the best method in frying doughnuts. Other methods, though sometimes successful, are uncertain. A temperature of 185 degrees Centigrade, or 365 degrees Fahrenheit, has been found satisfactory. Doughnuts rolled about 1/4 inch thick can usually be fried in 3 minutes at this temperature if they are turned to make them brown evenly; or they may be fried in 1 1/2 minutes if forced under the surface of the fat during frying.

Frying With a Basket.

It was found that the use of some device to force the doughnuts under the surface of the fat was the most satisfactory method of frying. An ordinary wire frying basket, with a ball and slightly smaller in diameter than the frying kettle, can be used. When the doughnuts first rise to the surface of the fat, lower the empty basket over them under the surface of the fat. Doughnuts fried by this method absorb less fat, brown evenly, and are much less apt to crack than when turned in frying. The basket can be used for draining the doughnuts after they are removed from the fat.

If your nose is oily or shiny, bathe it nightly with borax water or wash with cornmeal instead of soap. After a few minutes rice powder or powdered starch should be applied.

Double Purpose of Salads.

Salads serve a double purpose. They are tempting to the appetite and they aid digestion. No dinner, however good, is complete without a salad.

CARELESS HANDLING CONTAMINATES FOOD

Dangerous Micro-organisms Are Found Everywhere.

Guard Against Enemies of Human Race by Protecting Food From Dirt, Filth and Flies and Keep It in Clean Place.

Dangerous micro-organisms, known as "germs," as well as those which cause food to spoil, are often to be found in food which has been carelessly handled. Typhoid and scarlet fevers, tuberculosis, colds, influenza, diphtheria, and other diseases may be carried by food. Most so-called food poisoning is due to harmful micro-organisms carried into the body by food which has been contaminated either by accident or carelessness. These organisms are to be found everywhere, but especially in dust, dirt and filth. They are often carried by flies, vermin and household pests. They may also get into food from unwashed hands or from dishes which may appear clean but are not.

To guard against these microscopic enemies of the human race, protect the food from dirt, filth and flies by keeping it in clean places and in clean receptacles, say Department of Agriculture specialists. Insist that every person who handles food or dishes washes the hands before beginning work, scalds all the dishes, dries them with towels washed out in boiling water, or drains them dry. Care should be taken to cover the mouth and nose in sneezing and coughing, particularly when near food.

MAKE CLOTHES LAST LONGER

Garments Soon Become Shabby If Not Given Good Care—Airing and Washing Is Urged.

Garments even of the best quality, design and workmanship will soon become shabby through lack of care. On the other hand, those that may have cost only half as much may be kept trim and fresh for a considerable length of time through painstaking care.

Cotton and linen garments, especially those that touch the skin or are worn in hot weather, should be carefully aired and frequently washed, because they absorb oil and perspiration from the body. If dresses, waists and other outer garments are carefully placed on hangers as they are being aired, many wrinkles will disappear.

Sponging and pressing of woolen fabrics, but too frequent pressing of partly soiled white washable garments will tend to yellow them and colored ones may be permanently discolored in this way.

PIN MONEY FOR FARM WOMEN

Eggs, Poultry and Butter Furnish Means of Earning Tidy Sum All the Year Round.

Butter and eggs furnish many farm women with most of the money they spend on themselves and their children. The amount of butter a woman sells depends pretty much on the number of cows her husband is willing or able to keep. The number of chickens, however, is usually determined by her skill and by the amount of time she can devote to caring for them.

The women who belong to clubs organized by the Department of Agriculture and the state colleges are taught the best and most up-to-date methods of caring for poultry. The members are also helped in organizing egg and poultry circles which enable them to obtain better prices for their product.

ECONOMY IN COOKING FRUITS

As Much Fuel Consumed in Preparing One Pound as for Five—Can for Future Use.

It requires very little more fuel to cook five pounds of prunes, dried apples, or apricots than it does to cook one pound, and very little more time. What cannot be used at once may be canned for future use. Dried fruits may also be used in puddings, breads, and cookies, and to make marmalades, butter and jams.

FOR THE BACKYARD CAMP.

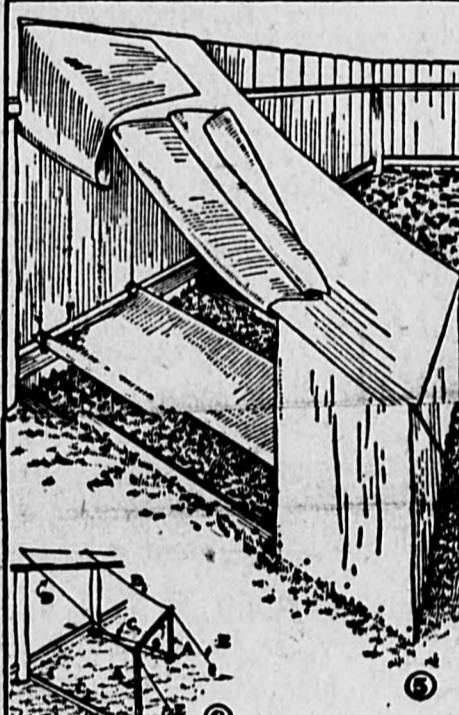

A stove, tent and cot are all the equipment needed for the backyard camp, and as they can be home-made no boy need lack an outfit.

Get an old discarded wash boiler and you will need in addition only a section of stovepipe and pieces of tin cans for making the camp stove shown in Fig. 1.

Three openings must be cut through the wash boiler bottom, one for the stove pipe, the others for cooking receptacles to stand over; and in the end of the boiler farthest from the stovepipe, there must be a fuel doorway. The cutting is done best with tin snips, but a can opener will answer the purpose. Describe circles for the round openings, one the size of the stovepipe, the other two 5 inches in diameter. The fuel doorway should measure 8 by 12 inches. The piece of tin removed from the doorway (A, Fig. 3), must be made into a door (Fig. 2) by the addition of tin strips (B, and C). Fig. 3 is a detail showing how strips B and C are attached with carpet tacks. Punch holes in the tin to drive the tacks through, and clinch the tack ends. Hang the door with hinges made of wire. Pass wire through holes punched through the edge of the door and the boiler, and twist the ends together. A simple catch for the door can be made of a screw hook (E, Fig. 2) and a wooden knob made of a section of broom-handle (F). Punch a hole through the door for the shank of the screw hook to slip through.

Covers for the stove openings can be cut out of tomato cans.

Fig. 1 shows a shovel for removing ashes from the camp stove, made of a piece of tin fastened in the notched end of a stick.

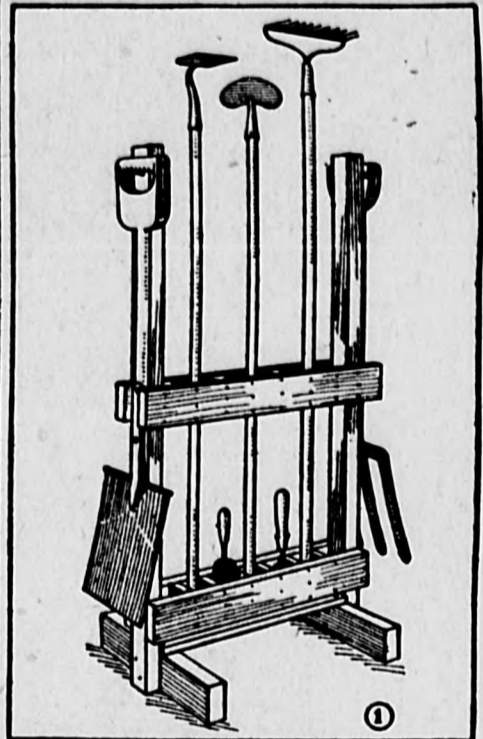

One of the simplest ways to make a tent is by using a board fence for one wall (Fig. 5), constructing a framework as shown in Fig. 6, and sewing or pinning together pieces of canvas, burlap, and other heavy material, to cover it. Drive corner posts A into the ground (Fig. 6), nail crosspiece B to their tops, and extend strips C from posts A to the fence. Run ropes D from crosspiece B to the fence, and ropes E from B to stakes driven into the ground.

The camp cot in Fig. 7 has a mattress made of canvas, burlap or bed ticking, stuffed with excelsior (Fig. 8).

Figs. 9 and 10 show a provision box. Cut legs A long enough to drive 3 inches into the ground, yet hold the box 6 inches or so above the ground. Crosspiece C, nailed across legs A, supports crosspiece B, which in turn supports the cover when it is open. Batten together the cover boards, and cover with oilcloth or tarpaper.

GARDEN TOOL RACKS.

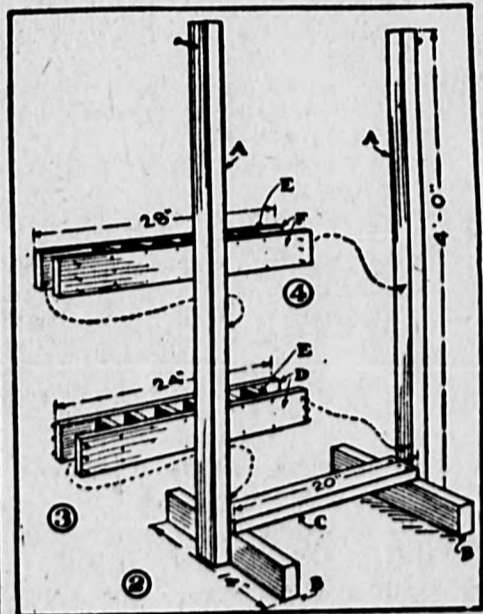

The rack in Fig. 1 was designed for six of an amateur gardener's essential tools—spade, fork, hoe, rake, trimmer, and trowel. There is room for one or two additional tools, and, of course, the rack may be extended as much as you want. Fig. 2 shows the start of the framework. Cut uprights A out of 2 by 2 inch stuff, shoe blocks B out of 2 by 4 inch stuff, connecting strip C out of a 1 by 4 inch board, by the lengths indicated in Fig. 2, and nail them together as shown. Then make up the frames shown in Figs. 3 and 4, cutting side pieces D and F out of 1 by 4 inch boards, of the lengths shown, and division blocks E 2 inches long by 4 inches wide; assemble the pieces in the manner shown, spacing the division blocks 2 inches apart. The ends of the lower frame (Fig. 3) come flush with the sides of uprights A, the ends of the upper frame project 2 inches beyond. Fasten the lower frame about

1/2 inch above connecting strip C, the upper frame 18 inches above the lower frame. Drive a nail into each of the uprights A, near the top, on which to hang the spade and fork.

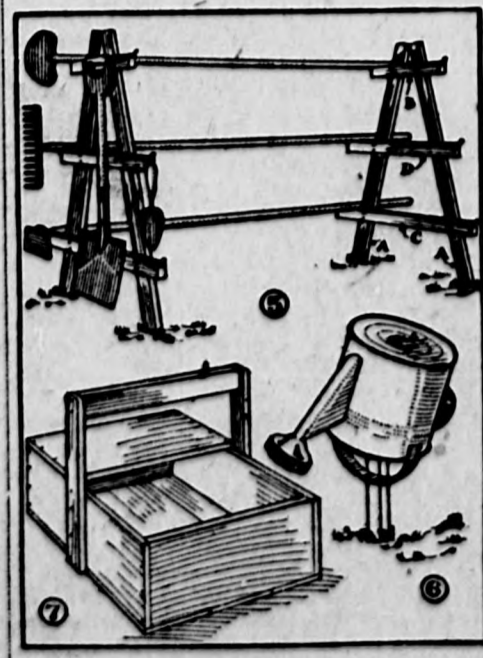

The rack in Fig. 5 is not only a good tool rack, but will serve as a clothes-prop rack as well. The two frames forming it are simple to make, and requires two uprights (A), with three crosspieces (B, C and D) nailed to them. Nails driven into the ends of the crosspieces are provided to keep the tool handles from rolling off. The nails will also make good hangers for towels.

A stake driven into the ground makes a satisfactory rack for the sprinkling-can. If you can utilize the space underneath a porch for garden tools, you can suspend tool racks from the porch floor joists, and nails can be driven into the joists on which to hang trowels, weedeas, dibble, sickle, sprinkling can, etc. Give your racks a coat of paint, green or white.

Fig. 7 shows a handled box that will serve several purposes in the garden. It may be used as a stool when weeding, as a step to reach vines overhead, as a weed receptacle, or as a receptacle for trowel, weeder, knife, ball of string, and other garden accessories. A grocery box of about the size of a soap box, with one-half of the cover nailed on, two upright strips nailed to the opposite sides, and a crosspiece fastened between the uprights, is all there is to it. If you want, you can hinge the other half of the cover to the half nailed in place, so the box can be closed.

Resilvering Mirror.

It is usually safest to send the mirror to a resilvering works. It may be repaired by making use of another mirror as follows: Clean the bare portions of glass by rubbing gently with fine cotton, taking care to remove any trace of dust and grit. With point of penknife cut upon back of other mirror around a portion of the silvering of required form but a little larger; upon it place a small drop of mercury. The mercury spreads immediately, penetrates the amalgam, and where it was cut with the knife, and the required piece may be lifted and removed to place to be resilvered. Then press lightly the renewed portion with cotton; it hardens almost immediately and the glass will present a uniform appearance.

Bride Cake.

The origin of bride cake dates back to earliest times. In fact, it was an introduction of the Romans to the bridal banquet, with the view of counteracting the evils of indigestion which might arise from too free indulgence in the rich offerings of the marriage table. In his work, "De Re Rustica," Cato gives us the recipe for the complicated farrago. It consisted of other aromatic ingredients, and it may be said, with much truth, that the spicy compound was better adapted to stave off indigestion than the modern cake to which it gave origin.

BEWILDERING TO THE MIND

Everyday Measurements of Science That Are Almost Beyond Comprehension of the Layman.

One great difficulty in the study of astronomy is to comprehend the immensity of the distances and sizes involved. For instance, we can form no conception of the size or distance of the sun.

Suppose there was a spherical shell of the diameter of the sun. Suppose a great genie should drop into this shell, every second, night and day, a ball the size of the earth. How long would it take to fill the shell? Would it take an hour, a day, or a week? In fact, it would take two weeks, and when full the shell would contain more than 1,000,000 earths.

The distance to the sun is 93,000,000 miles. How long would it take a cannon ball to reach the sun, if shot from the earth, and continued on its course at a uniform velocity? In order not to underestimate the distance some might say a year. In fact it would take 1,000,000 earths.

Astronomically speaking, the above distance is very short. The sun is our nearest star. Strain the imagination by trying to comprehend the velocity of light which would pass seven times around the earth in one second of time. Now stagger the brain by trying to think of stars, so remote from us that a million years are required for their light to cross the enormous abyss that separates them from us. Think of it! When that ray of light, which now enters the eye, started on its course, perhaps there was no life on this earth.—John Candee Dean in the Indianapolis News.

REFUSED HAND OF SULTAN

Offer of Marriage by Ruler of Sulu Was Turned Down by Alice Roosevelt.

The Moro is not all bad. He has his good points. There has never been a case where a Moro has murdered an American woman, and there are many American women in Moroland. This abstinence, however, is not due to Moro chivalry, but to the fact that in the Moro thought women have no souls.

Not that the believed soullessness of the sex keeps the Moro from being a ladies' man. In fact, he is inclined to be very gallant. The famous visit of the Taft party, accompanied by the then Miss Alice Roosevelt, some years ago (and long to be remembered in the Philippines), was attended by a chaperon. When this party visited Jolo—a trip to the islands would be complete without visiting this picturesque island—his royal highness, the sultan of Sulu, immediately offered his hand in marriage to the daughter of the President. He addressed her as the American princess, and the name of Princess Alice still clings to her in the Philippines. The fact that his highness already had a couple of dozen wives scattered around the town was no deterrent in case of a Mohammedan monarch.

Encouraging the Hen.

The modern method of increasing the quantity of eggs that may be obtained from hens is turning on electric lights in their pens in the middle of the night, thereby awakening them, to the end that they eat an extra meal and thus approach closer than ever before the ideal of laying an egg a day, week after week. One cannot but think that this lengthening of the working day for hens is a device of the same genius who discovered that there was no need of arising at dawn to feed the poultry. He simply waited until after the henyard denizens had gone to roost, and then scattered their morning meal. The hens found their breakfast waiting for them in the morning, while the ingenious one arose and went about the affairs of the day only when he felt so inclined. No chattering called him to work.

"Automobile" Street Car.

Mechanical arrangement similar in many respects to that of an automobile is the distinguishing feature of a new form of gasoline-driven interurban car described in Popular Mechanics Magazine. Though the body, seating 35 passengers, is like that of a standard modern street car, there is a long hood extending in front, in which the 50-horsepower engine is mounted. An auto-type gear shift is provided, and a shaft transmits the power to the rear wheels. Air brakes, electric lights, and a hot water heating plant are other details of the equipment. The car makes a round trip of 40 miles in a little more than two and one-half hours, consuming about five and one-half gallons of gasoline, or one gallon to seven miles.

Too Late.

"Ah!" exclaimed the fallen baseball star as he wiped away a tear. "If I had only thought about that song the young people were singing when I was a bush league player!"

"What was it?" asked a sympathetic friend.

"Take Back Your Gold!"—Birmingham Age-Herald.

Bad Housing and Tuberculosis.

Because of lack of housing in New York Doctor Copeland, city health commissioner, fears an increase in the tuberculosis mortality rate. He says insanitary conditions create an excellent field for the spread of disease and are sure to result in a moral and mental degeneracy.

MOTHER GOSSIP.

"Well," said little Mother Gossip to the girl who was adventuring with the boy to the house of secrets, what have you to tell us?" Mother Gossip had been the latest person for them to meet. Her lips were curled and they didn't seem to move or change even as she ate, for they were now all eating supper as fast as they could, except Mr. Wood Elf and the girl. All of Mother Gossip's family were eating.

Mr. Wood Elf had just whispered to the boy and girl that he had a delicious picnic supper ready for them at the top of the hill, so that they needn't eat here. It was entirely too disagreeable a place.

"Well," said the girl, "we've met so many nice people along the road."

"Nice?" screamed Mother Gossip. "You mean you thought they were nice and then found out how horrid they were? That's it, eh?"

All this time the Tattle-Tale Twins kept interrupting to tell on the other while Mother Gossip smiled in her ugly way every time they did so. The boy and the girl thought the Tattle-Tale Twins were quite the most horrid creatures they had ever met. In fact, they thought the twins would never get through trying to get out of things themselves and blaming each other and their relatives and telling on them.

The dull brown suits of the twins were so ugly, too. They looked as if they were never brushed or cleaned.

"No," said the girl, "they didn't turn out to be horrid in the least. In fact we've met some delightful people, quite delightful," said the girl.

"Didn't you hear any stories about them which made you think differently?" asked Mother Gossip.

Evidently, Not by the Sense.
An American was with a gushing enthusiasm describing his new car to an English visitor. "It runs so smoothly," he said, "you can't feel it. Not a bit of noise, you can't hear it. Perfect ignition, you can't smell it. And speed, why, it simply whizzes, you can't see it."

"My word!" exclaimed the astonished Britisher. "How do you know the bally thing is there?"—Boston Transcript.

Telephone Nightmares.
Church—I understand an arrangement has been patented so that when a person is talking on the telephone the face of the person one is talking to is reflected on a mirror in front of them, even if the person being talked to is miles away.

Gotham—Well, I hope to gracious if that is so some people I happen to know will never telephone me.

Excessive Success.
"It isn't possible for success to escape the sneer of envy," "No," replied Cactus Joe. "Success should be taken in moderation. The first time in an event that a man holds four aces everybody congratulates him, the second time everybody gets suspicious, and the third time everybody guesses it's about time to stop the game."

Strong-Arm Methods.
"Politics is a game of give and take," remarked Mr. Wapples. "I'll subscribe to the first part of your statement," said Mr. Grabco, who had just had an experience with an alert "money digger." "I don't particularly object to giving, but I do object to the kind of back talk I have to take for not giving more."—Birmingham Age-Herald.

Her Exact Words.
Bill—So you asked the sweet little thing to marry you?
Gill—Yes, I did.
Bill—And she said "yes" to you?
Gill—No, she didn't.
Bill—Oh, she said "no," did she?
Gill—Not exactly.
Bill—Well, what did she say, then?
Gill—She said: "Nothin' doin'."

WHAT OFFICERS ARE FOR
"So you've elected a new set of officers."
"Yes. Now all we've got to do is to sit back and kick about the way they do things."

Cheerful.

DAUGHTERS OF VETERANS
The good of the order committee met with the president recently and plans were discussed for the Department Fair, scheduled to take place in December. Tent 32 is unusually interested this year owing to the fact that a great deal of responsibility rests with Sister Anna Williams, who is department senior vice-president and we all want her to be most successful in her efforts.
Final reports of the recent fair are in and show that it was a very great success.
The Daughters assisted the Grand Army in observance of Memorial Sunday on May 29th and were also present with the other patriotic orders on Memorial Day, presenting each veteran with a button-hole bouquet. A committee of five headed by Sister Farrington, assisted in serving dinner at noon to veterans and their guests, our president being among the guests.
Sister May Blanchard is reported as very poorly at the present writing.

ALEWIFE FISHERY
There has recently been published by the Division of Fisheries & Game Department of Conservation of Massachusetts, a report dealing in most interesting manner with the alewife or branch herring fishery of the Commonwealth, which will be of interest to Weymouth people.

From it we learn that the great decline in the fishery as a whole may be attributed to unwise legislation, which permits of unjust exploitation, over-fishing, and the obstruction of streams by dams and other materials in such manner as to prohibit the passage of the fish to spawning grounds, thus preventing reproduction.

After giving the life history and habits of the alewife thorough study, this division concludes that it has arrived at the proper methods of checking the decline so widely prevalent. It has developed two types of fishways for this species of fish, called respectively the "Straight Run" and the "David" this species of fish, called respectively "fishways", each adapted to different physical requirements, which installed at any dam gives them access to the waters above without difficulty, for spawning purposes.

The former of these comprises a series of small waterfalls, not unlike many to be found in nature, while the latter is based more largely upon the plan of the old Brackett type of way, with baffles projecting from either side to break the forceful flow of water and provide rest pockets. This finds its largest utility in those places which afford limited space for construction work.

Furthermore, it has been proved by experimentation that the successful reestablishment of fisheries in those streams at present depleted or non-productive, is in most instances very feasible, if passageways for the fish be provided at dams, and ponds at the stream headwaters are available for spawning purposes, proceeding on the parent stream theory, according to which alewives upon reaching maturity invariably return to the waters which witnessed their early life, to cast their spawn. This is at present accomplished by transplantation of mature spawning fish from those places which they frequent in abundance to the localities where stocking operations are to be carried on.

As methods are perfected, it is expected that much of the alewife property, since it has been demonstrated by the Division that these fish may be so reared.

Not an uninteresting portion of the whole treatise has to do with a survey covering past and present fishery conditions in all of the coastal streams of the state.

INTERESTING TO BICYCLISTS

An amendment to the General Laws was approved on May 9, and following the usual course of events it is not an emergency measure, it will go into effect in 90 days from that date, which has much of interest to riders of the "Bent steel", as bicycles used to be called in their best days of the sport. Under this provision the bicyclists are not to exceed ten miles an hour for speed in public places, a demand is made for a suitable alarm bell or gong—something not done in many instances here—sidewalk riding is prohibited and it is expressly provided that one half hour after sunset and a like time previous to sunrise bicycles shall carry lights visible from the front and rear, a penalty of $20 being provided for failure to comply with the regulations which are a state law now and not local by-laws.

Original Sacrament.

The sacrament may be termed an oath taken to fight manfully under the banner of Christ; originally the word meant a military oath taken by the Roman soldier, not to desert his standard, turn his back upon the enemy, or abandon his general. The early Christians used the word to denote a sacred mystery, and so it was applied to the eucharist.

PLENTY OF MILK HELPS CHILDREN

Provides Needed Supply of Protein for Building Up Muscles and Body Tissues.

ALSO CONTAINS MUCH LIME

Assists Child to Grow, to Keep Well and to Build Up a Strong, Vigorous Body—Clean Whole Milk Most Desirable.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture)

If a child is below its proper weight after it reaches the age of twelve, the chances are much against its ever becoming normal, child specialists say; yet several million American children—some put the number at 5,000,000—are below weight today. Recent surveys made in different parts of the United States, both in the city and in the country, disclose the fact that 10 to 30 per cent of the school children in each community surveyed weigh at least 10 per cent less than they should. Epidemics find these underweight children easy victims, and large numbers die from contagious diseases each year, that might have lived if their bodies had been in normal condition when they were exposed to the contagion.

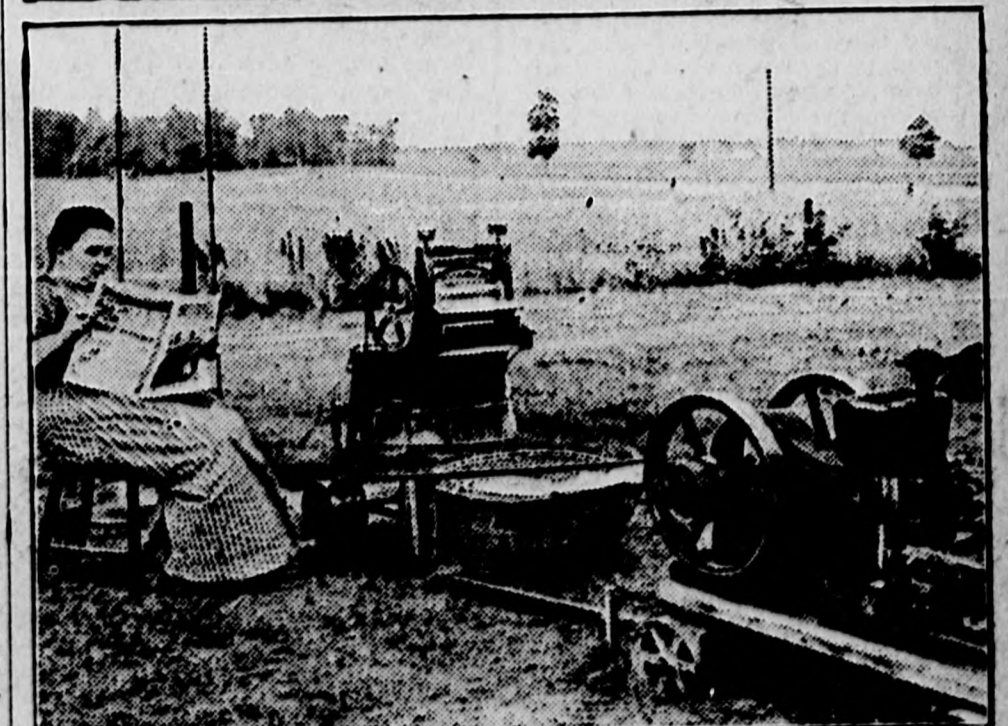

Not Quantity, but Kind, of Food.

It is not a question of the amount of food provided for the American child who is undernourished, but of the kind, as the proportion in the families of the well-to-do is about as large as that in the poorer districts. An effort is now being made by various agencies to teach children and their parents the kind of food that should be given children; and the success that is attending the effort is encouraging. The thing stressed most in these campaigns is that children must have plenty of milk. Give an abundance of that food, and you have gone a long way in giving a child his chance for health. A quart of milk a day for every child is not too much, say nutrition specialists of the United States Department of Agriculture, for milk helps a child to grow, to keep well, and to build up a strong, vigorous body.

Milk, being a liquid, is sometimes classed with water, tea, and coffee, simply as a beverage, and not as food. This is a great mistake. If all the water were to be driven from a quart of tea or coffee, almost nothing would be left and the little that remained would have practically no value as food. If, on the other hand, the water were driven from a quart of whole milk, there would be left about half a cupful of the very best food substances, including butterfat, and a kind of sugar not so sweet as granulated sugar and known as "milk sugar," together with other material, needed to make muscles, bones, teeth and other parts of the body. All these valuable food substances are ordinarily either dissolved or floating in the water of milk. Milk is also very important for providing the growth-promoting substance, or vitamin, called a fat-soluble. Apparently nothing can serve so well as milk, as a basis for the diet of a healthy child.

Good whole milk is desirable, but if a mother is obliged to choose between clean milk and rich milk, she had better take the clean milk. Best of all, of course, is clean whole milk.

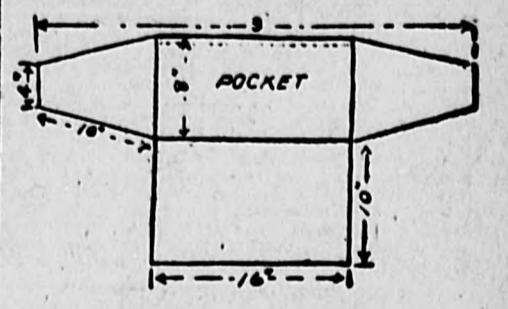

WAGING WAR ON "LADY KILLERS"

Nothing of the "Lady Killed" About This Equipment.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)
An exhibit of "lady killers," the kind found in too many homes, was recently put on in different parts of the State of Washington by the Washington State College extension department and the United States Department of Agriculture.

Among the "lady killers" are found the washboard, the sad iron, the scrub brush, the water pail, the short-handled dustpan, the ax, and a number of implements with which many women are obliged to do their work.
To offset the "lady killers" was another exhibit of ways and means of lightening work in the home. In this were included "kitchen jitneys"—a type of tea wagon—iceless refrigerators, washing machines, plans for simple water systems, fireless cookers, fruit and vegetable driers, oil stoves, portable gas makers and hydraulic rams. Several manufacturers showed light and power plants suitable for farm homes at the same exhibit. Small conveniences costing anywhere from 5 to 25 cents were also displayed. Getting more conveniences for doing work into the home is the aim of every home-demonstration agent.

Pattern of the Pad.

tom, then fold each side to meet the sides of the bottom, and sew them together.
Fasten the ends of one piece of tape, 40 inches long, to the back corners of the frame; also sew ends of another piece of tape the same length to the lower front corners of the frame; fasten the latter also to the top of the front. Bring these loose loops together and fasten. This handle when not in use, will drop inside the pad.

Make a cushion of the lining to fit flat on the inside of this frame and stuff it with cotton, or cover a thick, soft cushion with a piece of cloth the bottom of the kneeling pad.

All Around the House

Never turn griddle cakes twice, or they will be tough and indigestible.

By planning meals for a week ahead the housekeeper can save herself much trouble.

With boiled fish serve cucumber salad and a butter sauce of some kind with creamed potatoes.

To cleanse worsted sweaters, scarfs, hoods, caps, etc., use ordinary wheat flour, washing the garment in it as you would in water.

A chair with stiff, prim lines is uncomfortable. In the reception room or the ballroom it may find its place, but never in the living room.

YANKEE DISCARDS MAKING GOOD

Chickens come home to roost in baseball the same as in anything else. Last winter Miller Huggins traded George Mogridge, southpaw, and Duffy Lewis, outfielder, to Washington for Bobby Roth, the "Wandering Romeo" of the American league.

The Washington club in a recent series humbled the Yanks by taking four games out of five from them.

And in that series both Mogridge and Lewis played parts in the downfall of the team that had cast them off. Roth didn't break into the game.

That's how Mogridge and Lewis came home to roost on the mite manager's back right in their old ball yard.

Baseball is full of such boomerangs. Players who don't seem to be "there" on one club can do wonders for another.

Mogridge was an unlucky pitcher with the Yanks last year. The breaks all appeared to go directly against him. Lewis, though still a great outfielder, has never shown his old Boston form. Before he went to New York Lewis was ranked among the best. He broke his ankle sliding into a bag last summer and Huggins figured he would be too slow for the Yanks this year.

Roth, the temperamental outfielder who has played on every American league club except Detroit and St. Louis, had the speed that Huggins wanted. Hence the trade.

What looked like a good trade for Huggins has worked out the other way, according to the mathematics in the case.

Mogridge will likely tame the Yanks again when they meet and Lewis and his bat will cause the New York pitchers trouble.

Mogridge knows what the Yank batters know. He knows what Yank pitchers have got.

COACH GUY NICKALLS FAVORS 4-MILE RACE

Safer for Man's Health and General Fitness.

Heart Trouble is Generally Traced to Shorter Contests—Doctor Spaeth of Princeton Would Race Yearly Over Two-Mile Course.

Guy Nickalls, head coach of Yale crews, would abolish short races, as he finds them more dangerous to the health of the participants and a poorer test of oarsmanship than a four-mile row. In a special article in The Harvard Crimson Coach Nickalls says:

"The four-mile race is safer for the man's general health and physical fitness than the distance of one mile and five-sixteenths. Heart trouble is generally traced to the shorter races and seldom to the longer races. Had I my way I would have no races under four miles for interuniversity contests."

Doctor Spaeth, Princeton's coach, favors the shorter distances and is desirous of seeing Harvard, Princeton and Yale engage in a triangular race yearly over a two-mile course.

FANS ARE LOYAL TO KANSAS

Buffalo Admirers of Lightweight Are Prepared to Back Him Against Benny Leonard.

Buffalo fans are prepared to back Rocky Kansas as a winner if he gets a title match with Benny Leonard. Up until the time Kansas knocked out Richie Mitchell in a single punch he had been considered only a tough second-rater.

BASEBALL STORIES

Baseball dope still continues to be ham-and-scrambled.

They have not begun to call the giants "George Kelly & Co." yet.

It took Frank Baker a long time to get from the bench to third base.

John Tobin, outfielder of the Browns, gets most of his hits by place hitting.

Babe Ruth swings a 58-ounce bat. Cobb and Speaker get along with 37-ounce artillery.

A lost ball game can never be won back tomorrow. Tomorrow never comes in baseball.

Pop Anson admits that Ruth and Kelly would have been classed as sluggers even in his day.

Visiting clubs in the National league get 30 minutes for batting practice instead of 20 as in the past.

The outfielder of Lehigh university, who recently inherited $750,000, will never play ball for a living.

The Brazil who is playing the "Murderers' Row" role for the Mackmen is not a nut. But he cracks 'em.

Whether left-handed pitchers are effective or not depends on the men to whom the left hands are attached.

Wilbert Robinson is accused of using a ouija board to tell just when to yank a pitching nag and start a fresh one.

Yale takes the same stand against razzing opposing players that Tris Speaker does. "Down with the foghorns," they say.

Babe Ruth, having been arrested for automobile speeding in New York, will doubtless confine his speed henceforth to home runs.

Connie Mack is a stickler for curfew hours on his ball club. Scott Perry, now suspended, has been advised to get a new timepiece.

"Uncle Wilbert" Robinson depends on Zach Wheat's war club to bring him another pennant this year, and he's sure of it.

Clarence Rowland, manager of the Columbus team, will get a bonus if he makes a good showing. His bonus is to be stock in the club.

Outfielder Wagner of the Indians has been released to Galveston. Cleveland bought Wagner from Joplin of the Western league last fall.

If the two Meusels could combine their home runs and either Bob or Emil get credit for all of them, a Meusel would lead the world.

Columbia fans are elated over Jack Tavenner, the little shortstop on Zinn Beck's team. He is breaking into the professional game in great style.

Last season the hard hitting was in the American league. So far this season the National league teams seem to have rather a shade in the matter of swatting bees.

The old familiar white elephant is missing from the Athletics' togger. The uniforms of the Mackies have blue trimming with blue caps, with the historic elephant also turned to blue.

"BIB" FALK IS RARE PLAYER

Texas College Outfielder With Chicago White Sox is an Adept at Dodging Wild Balls.

"Bib" Falk, hard-hitting outfielder secured by the Chicago White Sox from the University of Texas, is one of those rare baseball players who stand right up to the plate and step toward the ball as they swing. He does not mind a bean ball, either, for instead of sprawling over the ground to get out of the way, he holds his footing and sways to either side just far enough to dodge it. The word "fear" is not in Falk's vocabulary.

Convenience and health in the kitchen

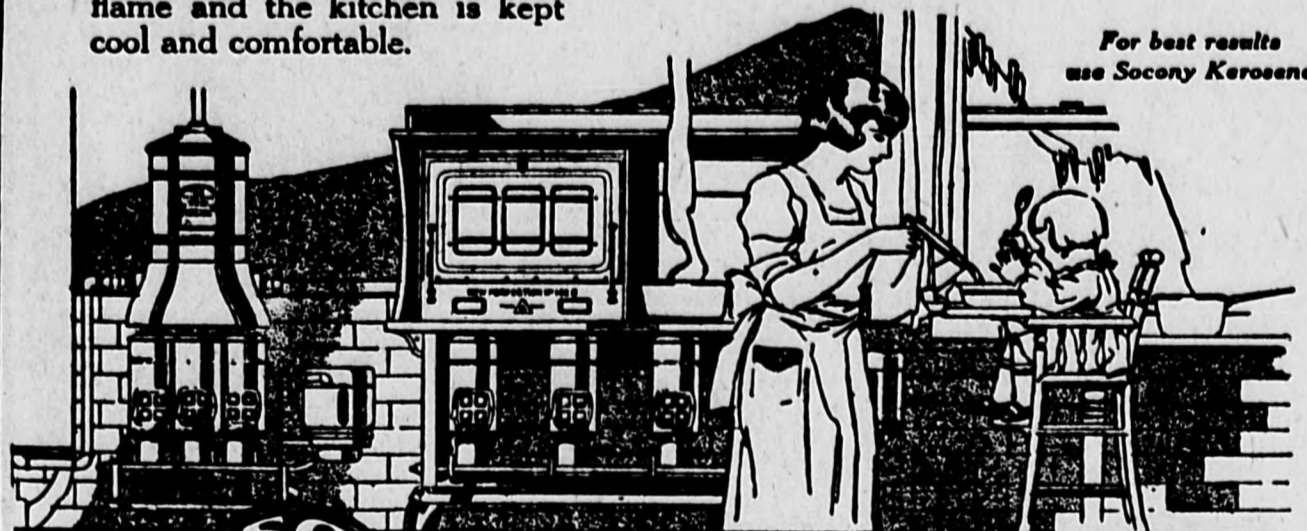

It is often necessary to heat up something in a hurry, in less time than it would take to build up a coal fire. It is then that the convenience of the New Perfection Oil Cook Stove is most appreciated. The heat you want is ready in an instant, in any volume you may need. Remember, the white-tipped flame gives the most heat.

By a simple turn of the wick you can obtain heat for either quick boiling or simmering from any one of the burners. And when you are through with it another turn extinguishes the flame and the kitchen is kept cool and comfortable.

Another convenience for the household is the New Perfection Water Heater. Just as clean, safe and economical as the cook stove. Produces hot water in a few minutes.

New Perfection Oil Cook Stoves are sold in one, two, three and four-burner sizes—with or without warming cabinet, except the one-burner, which has no cabinet. Most housewives like the cabinet top because of its convenience in keeping dishes warm.

Sold by dealers everywhere.

MAROONED FOR THREE YEARS

Sailor's Long Period of Loneliness on Small Island Located in the South Seas.

Marooning occasionally brings about a modern Crusoe; just as it did with Alexander Selkirk, who was put ashore three years and forty-one days on the "Robinson Crusoe." The trading schooner, Queen Charlotte, passing a small island of the Marquesas in the South seas, landed her boat to investigate the smoke of a fire, as it was understood the island was uninhabited. Here was found a United States seaman, who had been put ashore with three shipmates by their captain, on account of their mutinous conduct. The three others had died, but the man from Connecticut had contrived to live on the fish he caught, and the breadfruit and coconuts and other products which he could gather. When rescued after three years' loneliness, his utensils consisted of great shells, and two cups which he possessed, made from the skulls of his companions.

What She Could Be. Two tots were recently overheard discussing their plans for the future. "What are you going to be when you get big?" asked one. "Well, I am not going to be married and I am not going to be an old maid," was the reply. "You will have to be one or the other," said the first. "I won't, either," was the rejoinder. "I guess I can be a nurse."

MORE THAN HE COULD STAND

Mr. Cityman Chapin's Mind When Business Partner Began to Drag About His Garden.

What He Said to His Wife—If you want a garden this year you had better hire somebody. I've figured it out; and if I would spend on my business the time I put in on that garden I would make enough money to keep us in vegetables for fifty years. I am off for life.

What He Said to His Neighbor—I don't think I'll bother with a garden this year. It doesn't pay; I may do a little; but the digging and the labor—I'm off that for life.

What He Said to His Partner—Well, how's the garden coming along? I'm not doing much with mine this year. What? How high did you say? Already? What seed did you use?

What He Said to His Wife When He Got Home An Hour Early That Day—Call me when dinner's ready. I've got to get the garden started today or I'll never raise a thing.—Life.

But This Isn't London. "Here you are, gentlemen, the greatest invention of the age!" bawled the street peddler. "What is it?" Inquired an onlooker. "A magnetized keyhole plate for front doors. It will attract an ordinary steel key from a distance of two feet. All you have to do to find the keyhole is to take out your key and hang on to it." Three men were injured in the crowd that rushed to buy.—Tit-Bits.

Do You Pay Your Bills?

Being One of a Series of Talks on Bills and the Prompt Payment of Them.

Do You Owe Any Bills That Are Overdue?

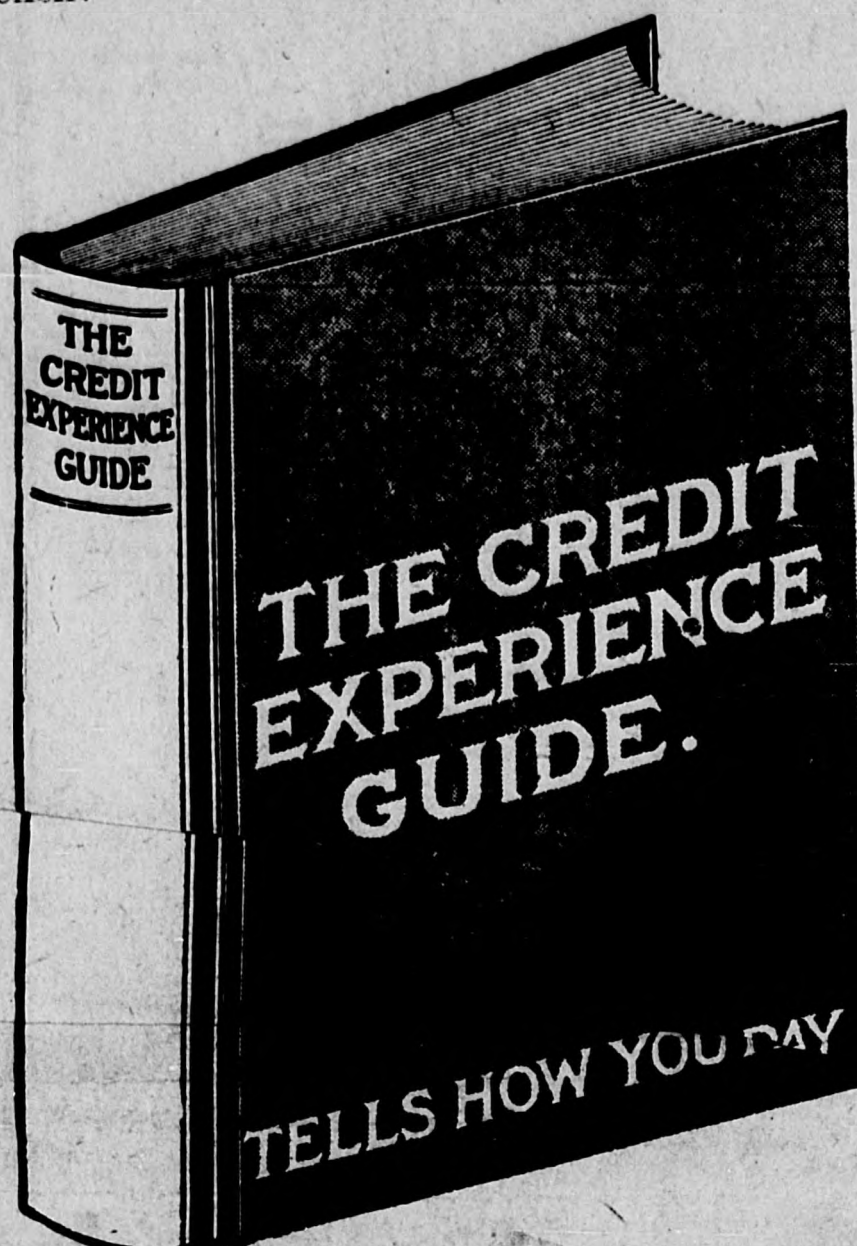

Your Rating

Credit Is Extended To You Because the Man You Buy From Thinks You Are Honest.

He has faith in you—in your honor. Prompt Pay MEANS "HONOR." He believes you will pay when the TIME COMES.

He does not think you will abuse the privilege—the convenience—of credit. HE EXTENDS TO YOU A RARE COMPLIMENT WHEN HE ALLOWS YOU TO TAKE HIS GOODS OUT OF HIS STORE WITHOUT PAYING FOR THEM.

DO YOU MAKE GOOD? Or do you disappoint him? Are you "PROMPT PAY—GOOD CREDIT"—or "REQUIRE CASH?"

Now, classify yourself. You know better to what class you belong than anyone else. And you are alone to blame. It's your fault if you have bad credit—or good credit.

Don't Kick

When you get a statement of your account on the first of the month DON'T KICK.

When the collector comes around to see you after your bill has run for sixty or ninety days DON'T KICK.

After you, figuratively speaking, "cuss out" the collector, ignore statements time after time, then get a letter sort of jerking you up, DON'T KICK. Remember, it was your duty to pay the bill the first of the next month after you contracted it, and every day you let it run after that you were imposing upon the merchant who trusted you to take his goods out of his store.

It was YOUR DUTY TO PAY.

It was an honor agreement to which you and the merchant were parties.

He did his part when he let you have the goods. It was up to you to do your part on the first of the month.

BUT YOU FAILED.

Then you got "red under the collar" when he called your attention to YOUR PART OF THE AGREEMENT.

He didn't say you were dishonorable—BUT YOU WERE.

BE HONORABLE—PAY UP—DON'T KICK.

Remember he has to pay his bills, and can't unless you pay yours.

Times Change

It's not like it used to be.

THE DEAD BEAT HAS BEEN NAILED.

A person of "careless credit" can no longer "beat" every merchant in this town.

In union there is strength, and practically every retail merchant in this town and in Norfolk and Plymouth counties belong to the newly established clearing house that "clears credits."

If you do not pay your bills with one merchant, every other merchant knows it.

You Must Pay as You Go or Quit Going

The day of systematically beating the man who trusts you with his goods is gone.

If you are HONORABLE and pay your bills, your credit grows. If you are DISHONORABLE and don't pay your bills, your credit is nipped in the bud.

TIMES CHANGE, and invariably for the better.

PAY UP! Credit is too valuable an asset to lose. PAY UP!

AWARDED PULITZER MEDAL

The awarding of the Gold Medal of the Joseph Pulitzer Foundation to the Boston Post calls attention to the remarkably interesting way in which this medal was won, and especially to the editorial judgment and publishing courage displayed by Richard Grozier in carrying out the news feature which won the distinction.

The medal is given under the foundation established some years ago by the editor of the New York World, for the most disinterested and meritorious public service rendered by any newspaper in the United States during the year 1920.

Richard Grozier is the assistant editor and publisher of the Boston Post and during the absence of his father, Edwin A. Grozier, the editor and publisher, is in complete charge of the newspaper.

So, it happened that when Charles Fonzi was carrying into dizzy heights his extraordinary swindling scheme by which millions of dollars were taken from the people of New England, it fell upon Richard Grozier to lead and carry out the exposure of that extraordinary financial bubble, for which exposure the trustees of the Pulitzer Foundation have conferred the blue ribbon of journalism, regarding the unmasking of this gigantic fraud as a public service outranking that of any other newspaper during the year.

THE G. A. R. VETERANS

In Weymouth respect has always been shown to the veterans of the war, but perhaps we should do more. Peabody showed up in an unfavorable light on Memorial Day, according to a report in a Boston daily, which reads:

"Failure of citizens to donate the use of their automobiles to convey Grand Army men to the West Peabody and Lynnfield cemeteries on Memorial Day has aroused a storm of protest principally because it was necessary to make use of a police patrol wagon to take a delegation of veterans to the West Peabody cemetery. In previous years many more machines than were needed have been at the disposal of the veterans, but this year only one or two cars were offered them."

TREMONT THEATRE

Of the memorable musical comedy successes that have marked the career of the Tremont Theatre, Boston, some of which have made historic summer engagements at this popular playhouse, there has been none which have approached in extent of great popularity that which is enjoyed by George M. Cohan's production, "The O'Brien Girl," played by the George M. Cohan's Comedians.

There is no one who goes to the theatre who does not treasure the pleasure of memories arising from the engagement of "Mary" at the same theatre last season. It was from the magical hand of George M. Cohan that the public received this record-breaking musical comedy.

The characteristics of "The O'Brien Girl" are of the usual Cohan brand with its liveliness, tunefulness, good cheer and delightful fun. Moreover, it follows this producer genius' in fallible rule of absolute cleanliness in every line and situation with the result that "The O'Brien Girl" is the most wholesome, lovable and charming "girl" ever seen in musical comedy. In every particular it is the most perfect of summer shows breathing the spirit of warm loveliness and brilliancy.

FIFTY-FIFTH YEAR

VOL. LV NO 24

WEYMOUTH, MASSACHUSETTS, FRIDAY, JUNE 17 1921

PRICE SIX CENTS

Clark C. E. Union At Weymouth Heights

Clark C. E. Union held its 33d annual meeting at the First church, Weymouth Heights, Friday evening, June 10. There were about 200 present, which included a delegation from each of the eleven C. E. societies in the Union.

The meeting, which was presided over by Miss Florence B. Nash, president, was a bright and interesting one as well as inspiring and impressive.

A song service in charge of Rev. W. B. Sharatt opened the evening program, which was followed by words of welcome by Miss Nash, also Fred Lunt. The devotionals were conducted by Mr. Sharatt, which was followed by a solo, "Jesus Lover of My Soul", by Miss Bertha C. Nash.

The secretary's annual report was read, which proved to the endeavorers that the officers and committee chairman of the union the past year have accomplished much.

The union is much stronger today than it was a year ago. Many interesting and worth while features have been introduced into the union this year and the Endeavorers, wishing to show their president Miss Nash how much they appreciated her efforts and successful year's work, gave bursts of enthusiastic cheers and yells for Miss Nash.

The treasurer's annual report was read, which showed a large sum in the treasury.

Under her business the following were named: President, Miss Florence B. Nash; Vice-president, Harry Fekkes of Hingham.

Treasurer, Edward Fearing of South Weymouth.

Recording secretary, Marjorie Davis of South Weymouth.

Corresponding secretary, Amy Clark of Rockland.

Lookout committee, Harry Allison of Weymouth.

Quiet hour superintendent, Mrs. Sarah Rix of East Weymouth.

Missionary superintendent, Mrs. Walter Seeds of Hingham.

Junior superintendent, Miss Hazel Hollis of Weymouth.

Social committee, Elwood Gerold, Sarah Rix and Mrs. John Tower.

Press committee, A. Clark Spaulding of North Scituate.

Literature, Francis Partridge.

Banner committee, Ruth A. Nash.

Counsellor, Rev. Mr. Creelman of North Scituate.

An installation service was held, Rev. J. A. MacClelland of the Fourth Presbyterian church, South Boston, being the installing officer. The service was a most beautiful and impressive one.

Following this the speaker of the evening, R. J. Blair of Cambridge, was introduced and he gave a most inspiring address on Christian Endeavor ideals.

Another interesting feature of the evening program was the awarding of the Clark Union banner to the C. E. Society, having the largest percent of attendance at their consecration meetings and at the union meeting. The Hingham Baptist C. E. won the banner by having 99%.

The Clark Union meeting was brought to a close with the singing of "God be with us till we meet again" each and every one declaring it was the most impressive and best annual meeting Clark Union ever has had and the Endeavorers are eager to go on with their work "For Christ and the Church" trying to make the coming year even a bigger and better one than the last.

TEACHERS' BANQUET

The annual banquet of the Weymouth Public School Teachers Association was held at Grand Army hall, East Weymouth, Monday evening. The teachers presented a splendid entertainment. The program was a most interesting one. The banquet was followed by an interesting program consisting of readings by Miss Marion Husbands, solos by Miss Mary Keith, violinist; Leslie Lovell, pianist; and chorus singing under the direction of director of music James E. Calderwood.

ROBERT EMMET COUNCIL

An open-air meeting will be held in Jackson Square, East Weymouth, this (Friday) evening. William J. Whelan of Tipperary, Ireland, who will speak of conditions that exist in his unhappy country. William J. Larkin of Boston will also speak. Jerome McDonald has resigned as financial secretary and Miss Katherine Fogarty has been appointed by the president. Mr. McDonald has accepted the office of vice-president.

SUCCESS

It's doing your job the best you can
And being just to your fellowman;
It's making money, but not losing friends,
And staying true to your aims and ends;
It's figuring how and learning why,
And looking forward and thinking high,
And dreaming a little and doing much;
It's always keeping in the best touch
With what is finest in word and deed;
It's being thorough, yet making speed;
It's struggling on with a will to win,
But taking loss with a cheerful grin;
It's sharing sorrow and work and mirth
And making better this good old earth;
It's serving, striving through strain and stress,
It's doing your noblest—that's Success.

FIREMEN'S SUNDAY

The Weymouth Firemen's Relief Association observed Memorial Sunday last Sunday and decorated the graves of 80 deceased firemen in the various cemeteries in town. At 9:15 A. M. the members assembled at Lincoln Square, where they formed and under escort of the Weymouth Fire Department, Weymouth Fire Engine and Weymouth Fire Truck, marched to the First Baptist church, where the pastor, Rev. Charles W. Allen delivered an address on "The Meaning of a Memorial Service." There was special music by the church choir.

BOY SCOUTS

For the purpose of instruction in life-saving methods Commodore W. E. Longfellow, General Field Representative of the American Red Cross Society, has been assigned to the Old Colony council the camp at Manomet for August 5 and 6.

The Old Colony council plan to hold an out-door rally at Berwick park, Norwood, Saturday, June 25. The arrangements for the meet will be in charge of Earl MacCannell, Randolph; Everett Wilder, Hingham; Gray Stevens of Weymouth and scout executive Duncun MacKellar.

Scoutmaster Rev. Lawrence Perry of Hingham, assistant scoutmaster Everett Wilder, Earl MacCannell and Raymond Young and scout executive Duncun MacKellar acted as judges at the meet of the Norumbega council held June 11.

HUNT—FIFE

Miss Flora M. Fife became the bride on Wednesday evening of Edward A. Hunt, one of Weymouth's leading merchants, the genial proprietor of Hunt's Market Grocery, and a veteran of the World War. The ceremony was performed at the Weymouth residence of the bride at 55 Summit Avenue, Wollaston, by Rev. J. Caleb Justice of the Union Congregational church of Weymouth and Braintree, the double ring service being used.

Guests were present from Weymouth, Quincy, Worcester, Providence, Seekonk and elsewhere, a reception being held from 8:30 to 9:30. The couple were assisted in receiving by the parents of the groom, Mr. and Mrs. E. W. Hunt.

The bride was charmingly attired in a pink satin gown with overdrapery of white net. The house was prettily decorated in pink and green, there being a profusion of sweet peas, peonies and palms.

Mr. and Mrs. Hunt are en route to Niagara Falls by auto, and will be at home July 15 at 214 South Central Avenue, Wollaston, during the months necessary for the completion of a new home Mr. Hunt is building in Weymouth. "Ted" and his winning smile, is well known in Washington Square and he has the best wishes of those around him in his new move.

DAUGHTERS OF VETERANS

Tent No. 32 will make an official visit to the home on Wednesday, June 22, and will provide an entertainment, and also furnish candy, etc., for the veterans.

Tent 32 will entertain post presidents on Wednesday, July 27, at the King Cove Boat Club and a good time is promised.

Hats off to the committee who worked so hard for our fair. Final reports show a profit of $338.79, all expenses paid, the greatest financial success our tent has ever had.

Support the committee in charge of our end of the Field Day and it will be just the same kind of a success, and we all want it to be.

S. OF V. AUXILIARY

The meeting on Monday evening was largely attended, because of the obligation of a popular S. of V. and the initiation of his wife and mother for membership in Auxiliary 31.

Commander Higgins of the S. of V. although not in his usual good health, owing to his recent illness, spoke encouragingly of the plans for the field day at Beals park.

Just a little question: Why did Counsellor Brother Hunt say there was a shower, thunder and lightning, when the moon was unusually bright.

Many New Articles in Town Meeting Warrant

Next Friday evening for the first time in the history of the town of Weymouth the second oldest town in Massachusetts, there will be a new order of things at a special town meeting, as all the business will be transacted by delegates from the different wards to be known as "Town Meeting Members" or a Town Council which has been elected to serve some for one year, some for two years and some for three years. Hon. George L. Barnes has been elected as permanent Moderator to serve for one year.

All citizens, men and women, may attend but only the Town Meeting Members and certain town officials may vote. Their action will be watched with interest.

In another column will be found the warrant in full for the special town meeting of Friday, June 24, which will be held in the Odd Fellows Opera House at East Weymouth.

Already reference has been made in the Gazette-Transcript to several of the articles, but there are some new ones which may cause debate. The principal article is an appropriation for the street railway.

MEETING OF SELECTMEN

The Selectmen had another inning on Monday with the junk dealers. Mr. and Mrs. J. Gibbs, M. Feldman and others objected to out of town men having licenses, but the Selectmen adhered to their vote of May 23, limiting the number to ten, and fixing the price at $50 each.

The Selectmen were disappointed when a communication was received from the State Highway Commission saying that nothing additional was available for rebuilding of Union street, but thought Norfolk County would help out. The latest from the County Commissioners is that they will go 50-50 up to $7500. This would require a town meeting appropriation.

Permits were granted to Crescent lodge, I. O. O. F., to parade and to Robert Emmet council, A. A. R. I. R., for an open-air meeting.

The board voted one license to peddle fish, fruit and vegetables, and two as common victuallers.

Frank Wheeler was appointed a public weigher.

Town physicians were appointed as follows:

Ward One.—Dr. W. A. Drake.
Ward Two.—Dr. J. C. Fraser.
Ward Three.—Dr. F. P. Virgin.
Ward Four.—Dr. Karl H. Granger.
Ward Five.—Dr. George Emerson.
Braintree Home.—Dr. Lewis W. Pease.

MEMORIAL SUNDAY

The Odd Fellows were fortunate in having Rev. D. N. Beach, D. D., president of Bangor Seminary speak to them on their Memorial Sunday, for it was an able address, which the members appreciated. The services were held in the Congregational church, East Weymouth, Sunday evening at 7:30, and attended by Crescent lodge, Wompatuck encampment and Steadfast Rebekah lodge.

The proclamation was read by the chaplain of Crescent lodge, and the order of services included anthems, hymns and a solo by Miss Evelyn Greeley. Fred V. Garey was organist.

During the year Crescent lodge has lost six members, three in the month of May, viz:

John W. Butterfield, Charles H. Mathewson, P. G. Hiram E. Raymond, P. G. George W. Young, Andl Burrell, and George W. Gardner.

Steadfast Rebekah lodge has lost two, Hiram E. Raymond, P. G. charter member, and Belle F. Smith.

Wompatuck Encampment has lost two, Charles H. Mathewson, P. G. P., and George W. Young.

WOMEN FINANCIERS.

Our women are making fine progress in the realm of high finance. The fact that banks run by and for women have not thus far indicated conspicuous success is no warrant for questioning the capacity of the sex. When they work side by side with men they are as alert and capable, and they are quite equal to shouldering responsibilities as they come. There are banks in Chicago and New York that each have more than 500 women on the regular working staff. It is admitted that within a few years women will be occupying executive positions in the world of finance, says Los Angeles Times. They may be presidents of railroads and banks. They will gain this recognition not through corporations of women, but through competition with men. They seem to be more successful by reason of their association with or rivalry of the masculine mind than when in a field wholly their own.

Pessimists who are complaining that more garages are being built than homes, and lamenting the day the world went awheel, will have something more to charge to the motor-car if they accept the indictment of the London Times that the speed wagon is killing off the flowers and gardens. The theory is that the rapid motion of the tires pulverizes the dust of the highway or street into such fine particles that when they settle upon flowers and plants they choke the leaves, prevent the plants from breathing, and they wither and die. This is in addition to the charge that oiling the roads kills off vegetation alongside. The old-time dust on the horse-used roads was, it is argued, chemically beneficial and relatively large compared to the fine spray in the clouds raised by automobiles.

Certain Red sympathizers give smirks of satisfaction because Mexico has deported a citizen of the United States for being a radical and a "pernicious foreigner." But Americans are grumbling. In fact, the United States would be well pleased to receive back all its Reds in exchange for the Reds of other nations who are now making their home here.

Discussing the recent feat of the army aviator who jumped to the earth from an airplane four miles in the air, a thoughtful friend suggests that it would have been much more remarkable if he had jumped from the earth to the airplane.

If the pay of a $120-a-month railroad worker is cut 20 per cent, would there be any harm in nipping off 20 per cent of the $4,000 a month or $5,000 a month or the $10,000 a month that some of the big boys get?

FARM LETTERWHY PLANT A GARDEN
By Edward Lukeman

At this season of the year when all who can should have made a good start with their garden and have everything well under way, it begins to look as if a good many gardens will this year grow a luxuriant crop of weeds. In fact the seedmen say, practically no demand exists for the war garden collection of seeds that were so numerous during the last four years. Doubtless there are a good many reasons: that vegetables are now selling in many cases as low as before the war, and that the course from now on will be downward all along the line.

Now, if any of the readers of this column are reasoning in this way, just stop and consider the following: potatoes are now selling at a loss to the grower of $1.50 per barrel, and according to the most reliable farm papers, the acreage planted to them will be greatly reduced. Then again the freight rates are very high and the same is true of farm labor, while manure from the large city stables is almost impossible to obtain. The auto truck has displaced the horse and this is what causes the scarcity. The Fertilizer Trust is well aware of this fact, and have not reduced the price of the high grade brands enough to notice it, but they have some in the cheaper grades. This is not very satisfactory to users and does not produce any bumper crops. So taken all in all everything points to the fact that vegetables will be scarce and high. Better get busy at once, while you still have time.

Have you sprayed your trees and currant bushes yet? If you have not you will come home some night and wonder what has happened to your currants. The currant worms are gross feeders, and only take two or three days from the time they start until the job is complete. Arsenate of lead or pyrox is the best liquid spray. Hellebore's or Hammond's slug shot is excellent for dusting on the bushes. Whichever method you use will produce the desired result.

Have you made a second planting of corn yet? It's about the right time to do so. If you start about May 10 and continue every two weeks until July 1 you can have green corn until Nov. 10, and this should be worth a little extra effort on your part. Golden Bantam is the variety you will have to plant when you let it go until July 1. Its a yellow variety, and one of the very best and it will surely please you.

This is the time in every year when many who are employed in the cities get a longing for the country. But it is well in every case to go slow, and consider what one must do in order to succeed. Many people have the idea that all you need do is to purchase an incubator and start in the poultry business; never giving the subject any study, or whether they are adapted to it or not.

Now anyone who goes into the poultry business in this manner will surely be a student in the school of hard knocks. Its a fascinating business however, and if you go at it slowly and a determination to master the subject thoroughly, it will prove a profitable business. Every loss you meet with should show you how to avoid this same thing in the future, and in this way prove a real asset. You won't think so at the time, but you will afterward.

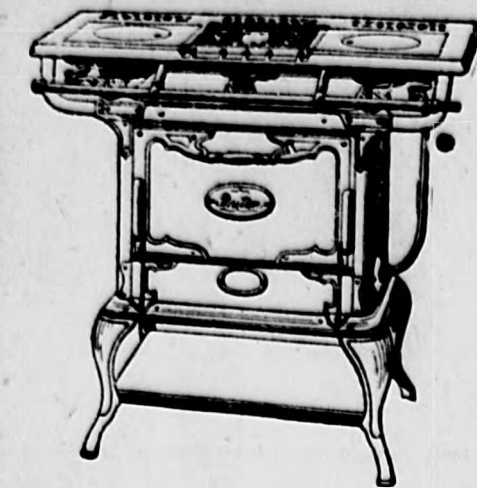

Many people will tell you that the poultry business is overdone. I have heard this same cry as far back as I can remember, but it has never come true, and its just as far away as ever. Poultry products sell as readily at the present time and there is as much difference between the cost of production and the selling price, as in any year since we have been keeping poultry.

A common mistake that many people make is to purchase hatching eggs from the neighbor. Now this way is sure to invite failure. You get all kinds of mongrels and nothing but disappointment can come out of this. It's a great deal better to pay a little more and get eggs from some up-to-date poultry man. You can watch the papers and see who is winning in the egg-laying contest, and if you order from any one of those you won't go far wrong.

Make up your mind what breed you want and then stick to it. Changing breeds is about as bad as changing business. Lots of people who never could make a success of anything, will advise you what breed to keep, but with poultry no one breed contains all the good points. Its the care and attention to details, as well as feeding, that makes the best egg producers. Of course a good building, where the birds will have plenty of air, and this can be secured by having what is called the open front type, is about the best. That is, no windows on the south side. Muslin curtains are used and these are never put up only in zero weather.

The buildings must be sprayed often, and kept clean. This is imperative. To succeed in any undertaking requires a vast amount of hard work, and only by the best of management can anyone hope to succeed. It's your own fault if you go into the poultry business, and do not know of the latest scientific methods. Keep up with the times by reading the best poultry papers. Be kind and patient with the birds and in this manner you will surely make a success of it.
E. L.Chivalrous Lion.

While a workman was oiling the sliding doors of two cages at the Zoological gardens, Regent's park, London, England, says a correspondent, a young lion slipped into the sleeping den of an old tigress. They attacked each other in the semi-darkness, before the lion, apparently discovered that his opponent was a female. He could have killed her with ease, as her claws were feeble and her teeth worn, yet presently both emerged in neighborly fashion from the sleeping den into the show cage in front. They were separated by the keeper, but the tigress, although apparently little hurt, had been bitten deeply in the chest, and died next day from internal hemorrhage. The keeper declared that if the two animals had been of the same sex they would have fought to the bitter death in the sleeping den.

ALARM WARNS OF DEFECTIVE TIRE

Electric Device Invented by Indianapolis Man Can Be Attached to Any Wheel.

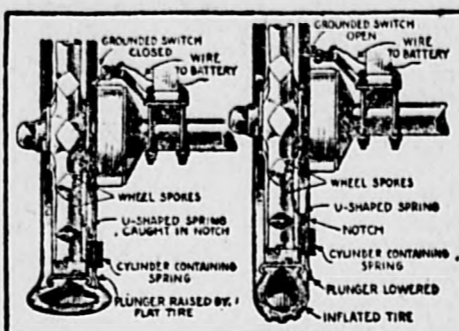

ELECTRIC SWITCH DOES WORK

Placed in Position So That They Will Be Thrown to One or Other of Closed Positions When Tire Is Punctured.

It frequently happens that air leaks slowly from a tire without the driver's knowing it. The tire becomes flat and the rims of the wheel cut into it. To warn drivers in time, George F. Young of Indianapolis has recently invented an electric alarm which can be attached to any wheel. It consists of an electric switch which is mounted on the axle of a wheel. The blade of this switch projects toward the spokes of the wheel. The end of the blade stops very close to the spokes, though enough space is left to enable the blade to barely clear them.

Working of Switch.

Working in conjunction with the blade of the switch is a metal finger mounted on one of the spokes of the wheel. This finger can slide radially to the wheel, but a spring normally holds it away from the axle, with one end up against the underside of the inflated tire. The other end of the finger will clear the projecting blade when the tire is properly inflated. Just as soon as the tire begins to flatten, the finger is pressed radially inward and it strikes against the projecting blade. The switch is thereby closed and an alarm, such as a well located light or buzzer which is very easily heard, is operated.

A Flattened Tire Presses a Switch-finger Inward. The Electric Switch is Thus Closed, and an Alarm in the Circuit at Once Gives Warning.

Rotate With Wheels.

The various switches are mounted so that they do not rotate with the wheels with which they are associated; but they are placed in a position so that they will be thrown to one or the other of their closed positions when the tire is punctured or if the air suddenly leaves it. This method of mounting may be carried out in several different forms. The one most convenient is shown in the accompanying illustration.—Popular Science Monthly.

UNIVERSAL JOINT IS VITAL PART OF AUTO

No Portion of Car Works So Hard and Efficiently.

Takes Power of Engine and Transmits It to Propeller Shaft Which Moves According to Movement of Rear Axle.

There are hundreds of moving parts on an automobile or motortruck, but none works so hard and so efficiently as a universal joint. Such a joint is necessary on the propeller shaft extending from the clutch to transmission and from the transmission to the rear axle, as the case may be.

Universal joints are known to operate at more than 98 per cent efficiency, which cannot be said of any other part of an automobile doing such strenuous work.

The universal joint, as its name indicates, allows for free or universal movement of the propeller shaft. It is like your thumb, which you can wiggle in all directions.

A universal joint takes the power of the engine and transmits it to the propeller shaft. At the same time this joint may be constantly moving first in one direction, then another, but usually it moves up and down because the rear axle keeps moving up and down over the road.

The propeller shaft angularity varies according to the relative movement of the rear axle, and were it not for the use of universal joints the shaft would bend or break, and hence could not transmit power.

Every automobile uses universal joints on the propeller shaft. This is an all-metal joint, and the only care which this hard-working part receives is a little grease twice each year. It is remarkable how this part stands up even when owners forget it.

Most owners do not know what a universal joint looks like because it never gives any trouble, but the wise owner will not allow joints to go without grease.

Grease is easily injected through the filler opening by means of a suitable grease gun. The joint should not be filled completely—one-third full is sufficient.

INJURIOUS TO CAR SURFACE

Common Practice of Using Ammonia to Brighten Surface of Hood Will Ruin Finish.

There used to be a common practice of trying to brighten up the finish of the hood by the use of a solution of ammonia. This is about the worst thing that could be done, as ammonia eventually destroys the finish. Unfortunately the ammonia gives a little temporary brilliancy to the finish, but in the long run it ruins it. In fact, car manufacturers recommend that no car be kept in a stable or barn, as the ammonia from manure gradually destroys the enameled surface.

AUTOMOBILE HINTS

There are now 44 different makes of automobiles in Mexico, as compared with 20 in 1919.

The "horseless carriage" twenty-five years ago was a curiosity with Barnum & Bailey's circus.

One out of every 200 applications for permission to take a chauffeur's examination to drive a motor vehicle in New York state is from a woman.

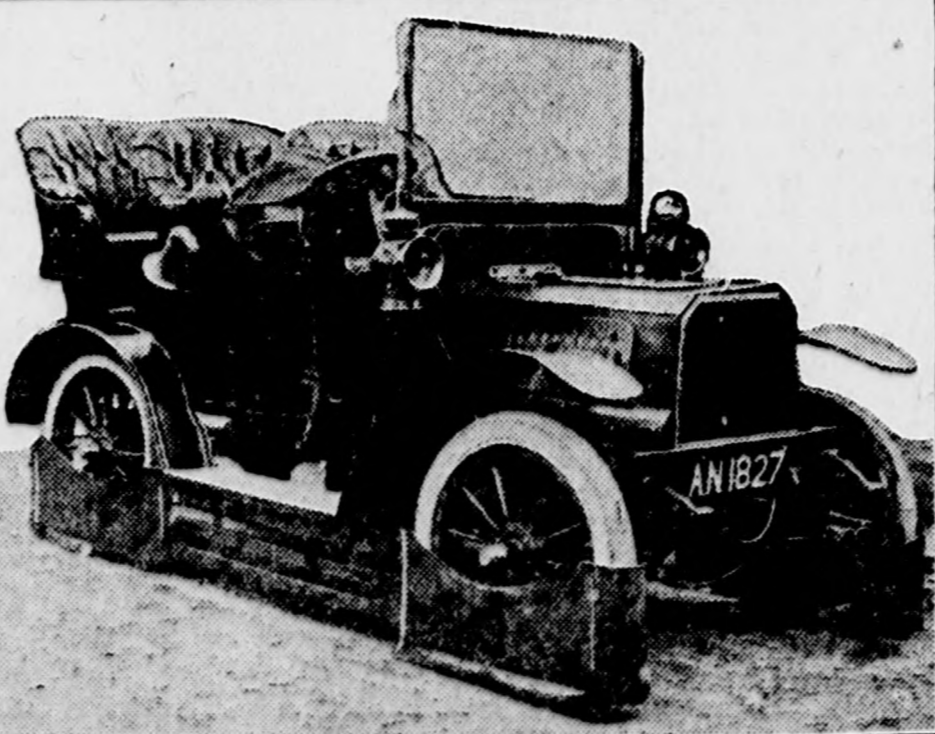

In England, to secure greater safety on the highways, patrols are stationed at dangerous crossings to warn motorists, and at bad stretches of road.

For the production of gasoline there are 311 petroleum refineries in operation throughout the United States with a daily capacity of 1,721,025 barrels of oil.

Does the Valve Leak?

It is an easy matter to discover whether the tire valve leaks or not if you know the little kink. Remove the cap and, having the wheel turned so the valve is right at the top, set up over the valve stem a bottle, a glass container of any sort, filled with water. If there is a leak, of course, the bubbles will indicate it. Try it with the cap on and with the cap off. You may find that a valve you thought all right is the sole cause of a tire constantly getting soft without apparent cause. The tube that shows no leak when taken out and immersed in water, valve and all, may leak through the valve slowly when in the shoe and pumped up to riding pressure. So this little kink is well worth remembering.

TRIAL OF ANTI-SPLASH DEVICES

An international trial of anti-mud-splashing contrivances was held in England recently by the Camberwell town council. There were thirty-five entries, including demonstrations from France and Denmark. The photograph shows a well-protected car.

Something to Think About

By F. A. WALKER

DEVIL WORSHIP

AN AMERICAN explorer has just returned to civilization after a visit to the interior of Ecuador and the homeland of the Jibaros Indians. This tribe of head-hunting savages have lived in the same territory since long before Columbus discovered the Americas and have kept wholly free from the influence of civilization.

The most striking evidence of their failure to advance in the centuries which have passed over them is the report of the explorer that the Jibaros do not believe in a God, but that they do worship devils.

It is practically the universal history of the developments of all peoples from the savage state to that of civilization, that the belief in devils precedes that of a belief in God.

Before they conceive or defy a ruler in the realm of good they establish a kingdom of evil and nominate a being supreme in the management of one or all forms of danger and misfortune.

Herbert Spencer in his analysis of human worship bases religion on the Unknown, declaring that the savage first worships those powers which he does not understand. It is the savage's inability, because of his savagery, to trace cause from effect that leads him to assign to totally unrelated things the cause for what he observes.

And since it is those things which harm or threaten him with harm which most concern him he establishes first his devil causes rather than his God causes.

He hears in the thunder the voice of a devil living in the sky who punishes with the swift lightning and with fire.

He sees a devil in the wild beast that kills his cattle. There is a demon power that helps his enemies of another tribe.

The white man's gun is an invention of some evil spirit and the drought which spoils his crop or the deluge which overflows his lands are evidences to him of the activities of some powerful and unfriendly spirit which he must in some way appease.

In some of the earliest written history of this country, the narrative left by Captain John Smith of Virginia, there is much space devoted to the devil worship of the Indians of that territory and the sacrifice of children to quiet the wrath of the evil ones.

All through tradition and history from Set, the demon of death and evil in the mythology of early Egypt down to the Hopi Indian dances which take place yearly in Arizona, there has been a continuous story of devil worship and rites and rituals intended to appease his wrath and gain his friendship.

Each of us, highly civilized as we

THE CHEERFUL CHERUB

pined somehow,
Each one a strong and
glorious whole—
So may I through this

Spread out the branches of my soul.

think we are, gives a tremendous power to evil.

Despite the fact that we read in the Bible, and generally think we believe it, that the God of our civilized ideas is omnipotent—all powerful—we immediately deny that fact by giving evil, which cannot be an attribute of God, equal or greater power.

Practically everybody, unless we except Christian Science believers, think that sickness is much more powerful than health and that death is certain to triumph over life.

We can only establish the rule of evil by suppressing the rule of good. Darkness is in itself nothing; it is only the absence of light.

Silence is only the absence of sound.

Death is only a local ceasing of the phenomena of life.

The way to get rid of darkness is to let in the light.

The way to get rid of evil is to let in and encourage good.

Perhaps we should not blame the poor savage in Ecuador for failing to believe in God and having a liberal supply of devils. He has not yet been able to think out the truth.

But, we who are wiser and, we hope, better for that wisdom, should see to it that as little as possible of "devil worship" creeps into our existences and influences our lives.

THE GIRL ON THE JOB

How to Succeed—How to Get Ahead—How to Make Good

By JESSIE ROBERTS

PART TIME WORK

THERE are two reasons why part-time work is sought. The first is that the woman who has her own home to run cannot be away all day without serious consequences, particularly if she is a mother as well as a wife. Yet it is sometimes necessary to have the woman add something to the direct income. Part time work is the solution.

The second reason is that the regular job does not pay enough. This is often the case with teachers and librarians and other professional workers whose salaries are small, while the calls upon them are great. They do not want to give up the special professional labor in which they are regularly engaged, yet they must have more money.

Summer jobs are various, from accepting positions as governess to children, or waiting at summer hotels, to filling in at offices where vacations are cutting down the regular force. A stenographic summer job can often be secured in an office for two weeks or a month, and then another one, and so on until the vacation season closes. Some women are successful in taking parties of young girls or older women on tourist excursions, charging a good price for services of this sort.

Lecturing is another good part-time job. The lectures are planned for women's clubs and political associations. To succeed here you must be a good speaker, and have from four to six lively papers to read on any given subject, or on two or three allied subjects. It is best to specialize.

Teaching craft work is an excellent part-time occupation, and so are the various housekeeping jobs that are opening for the trained woman who wishes to give only half a day to such work. Two women I know divide between them the work of an office, as well as the salary. One goes for the morning, the other for the afternoon, and this has worked well.

The woman looking for part-time work is more likely to get it today than in any period before. It is a solution for both employer and employees that is certain to become more and more popular.

Do You Pay Your Bills?

Being One of a Series of Talks on Bills and the Prompt Payment of Them.

Do You Owe Any Bills That Are Overdue?

Your Rating

Credit Is Extended To You Because the Man You Buy From Thinks You Are Honest.

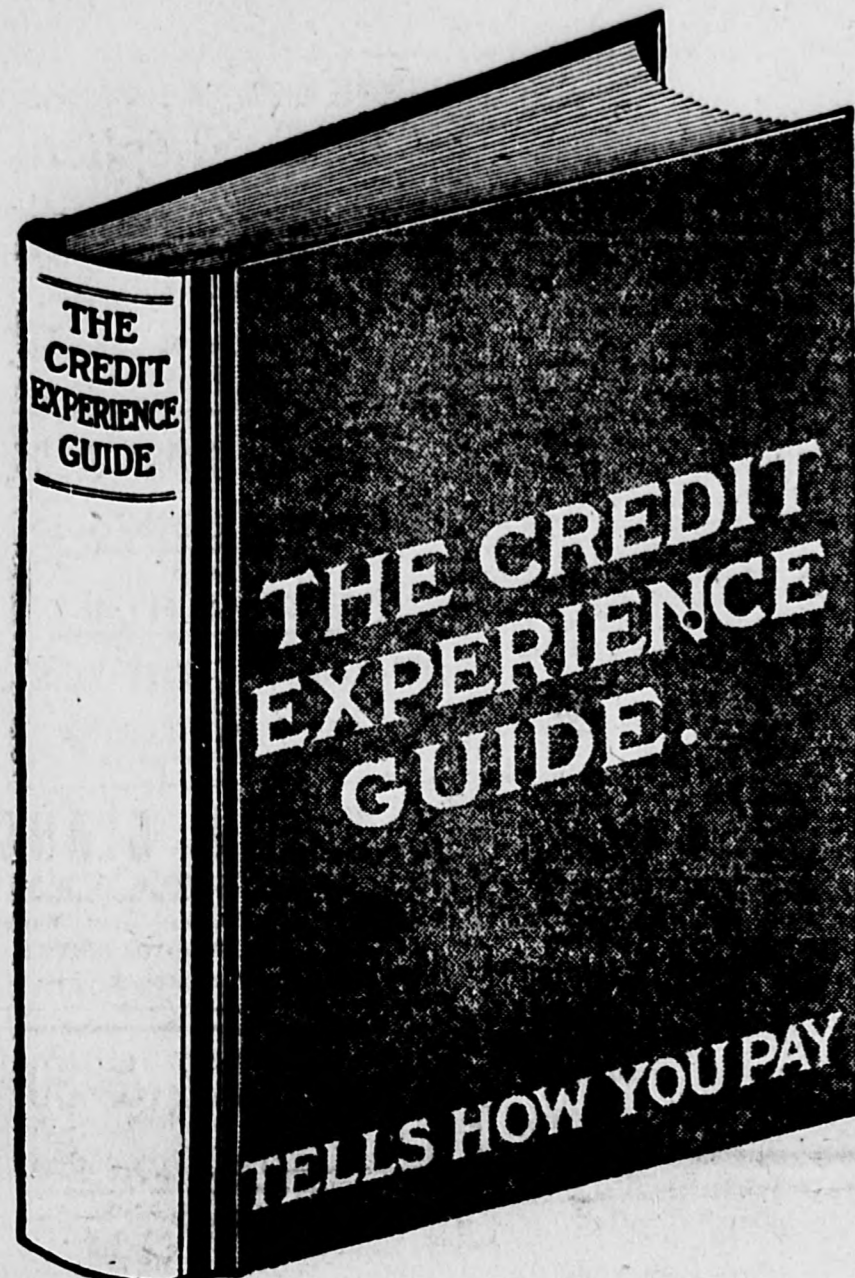

He has faith in you—in your honor. Prompt Pay MEANS "HONOR."

He believes you will pay when the TIME COMES.

He does not think you will abuse the privilege—the convenience—of credit. HE EXTENDS TO YOU A RARE COMPLIMENT WHEN HE ALLOWS YOU TO TAKE HIS GOODS OUT OF HIS STORE WITHOUT PAYING FOR THEM.

DO YOU MAKE GOOD? Or do you disappoint him?

Are you "PROMPT PAY—GOOD CREDIT"—or "REQUIRE CASH?"

Now, classify yourself. You know better to what class you belong than anyone else. And you are alone to blame. It's your fault if you have bad credit—or good credit.

Don't Kick

When you get a statement of your account on the first of the month DON'T KICK.

When the collector comes around to see you after your bill has run for sixty or ninety days DON'T KICK.

After you, figuratively speaking, "cuss out" the collector, ignore statements time after time, then get a letter sort of jerking you up, DON'T KICK. Remember, it was your duty to pay the bill the first of the next month after you contracted it, and every day you let it run after that you were imposing upon the merchant who trusted you to take his goods out of his store.

It was YOUR DUTY TO PAY.

It was an honor agreement to which you and the merchant were parties.

He did his part when he let you have the goods. It was up to you to do your part on the first of the month.

BUT YOU FAILED.

Then you got "red under the collar" when he called your attention to YOUR PART OF THE AGREEMENT.

He didn't say you were dishonorable—BUT YOU WERE.

BE HONORABLE—PAY UP—DON'T KICK.

Remember he has to pay his bills, and can't unless you pay yours.

Times Change

It's not like it used to be.

THE DEAD BEAT HAS BEEN NAILED.

A person of "careless credit" can no longer "beat" every merchant in this town.

In union there is strength, and practically every retail merchant in this town and in Norfolk and Plymouth counties belong to the newly established clearing house that "clears credits."

If you do not pay your bills with one merchant, every other merchant knows it.

You Must Pay as You Go or Quit Going

The day of systematically beating the man who trusts you with his goods is gone.

If you are HONORABLE and pays your bills, your credit grows. If you are DISHONORABLE and don't pay your bills, your credit is nipped in the bud.

TIMES CHANGE, and invariably for the better.

PAY UP! Credit is too valuable an asset to lose. PAY UP!

Enjoy the Sun and Prolong Life.

Once upon a time people worshipped the sun. It would help all of us city folks, and country folks, if we acquired some of that respect for sunlight. Scientists may say this or that about the sun. They may agree or disagree with regard to certain theories of light, but the common-sense people are satisfied with the simple fact that sunlight is healing, that it breeds life, that it is the source of great beauty. People who live in the country do not appreciate sunlight, because they have so much of it. People who live in the city take the sun as a matter of course, a thing too obvious to think about, or else they forget it altogether.—Thrift Magazine.

Ants Make Biscuits.

According to recent studies of the common Mediterranean ant, the seeds which are collected are kept for a time dry and are eventually put out in the rain so that they begin to germinate. This has the advantage of bursting the hard seed-coats, and in some cases of starting processes of fermentation. At a certain stage, however, the ants kill the embryo plant by biting off the radicle or other parts and the seeds are dried again in the sun. According to Neger the dried seeds of some leguminous plants, for instance, are then taken back into the nest and chewed into dough. This is dried once again in the sun in the form of biscuits, which are eventually put into the cupboard.

Folk Songs.

Folk songs differ from all other songs in being the expression, unhindered by culture or self-consciousness, of primitive emotions and aspirations. Their simplicity and directness, says the Christian Science Monitor, are undoubtedly strong elements in the charm they exercise, more especially as they often display within the limits of a simple form surprising capacity for complicated rhythmic effects. The feeling for rhythm is invariably the first musical faculty to show itself, and is, therefore, more developed than any other faculty in these primitive songs.

THAT BAD BACK

Do you have a dull, steady ache in the small of the back—sharp, stabbing twinges when stooping or lifting—distressing urinary disorders? For bad back and weakened kidneys Weymouth residents recommend Doan's Kidney Pills. Read this Weymouth statement.

Mrs. Nellie Condrick, 177 Broad street, says: "Doan's Kidney Pills are certainly a fine medicine and I can highly recommend them. I used them some time ago when suffering from an attack of kidney complaint. My back was lame and sore and I seemed to have a constant, nagging pain in the small of my back. My kidneys felt sore and heavy and they didn't act right. I was advised of Doan's Kidney Pills and got a few boxes. In a short time they completely rid me of the attack."

Price 60c. at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Mrs. Condrick had. Foster-Milburn Co., Mfrs., Buffalo, N. Y.

OF WHITE CREPE DE CHINE

The vogue for embroidery has full sway on this frock of white crepe de chine, which in all other respects is sweet and simple.

THE STRAIGHT-LINE DRESS

Garments Are Long Waisted, Often Without Any Belt, Skirt Being Gathered to Bodice.

The serge dresses are built on straight lines, long waisted, often without any belt, the skirt being gathered to the bodice. On a few models there is a narrow belt, starting from the sides and tied a little on one side. Trimming is mostly placed on the skirt, consisting of embroidery in modern designs, in silk or wool, or even in beads.

This embroidery is either of a color to match the material of the dress, or contrasting and chiefly of the type called "mousse," really a mass of tiny French knots or cut threads, as in carpet embroidery. Afternoon dresses are either with long and straight bodices and scarf belts, or made in one with girdle. Sleeves are either long and wide or very short.

Tricorn Never Disappears.

The little tricorn which never really disappears from the fashion world is quite a pet of the spring mode. It is shown with the lace eye-velvet draped about it and it is shown with the spray of paradise standing up at the front. It is trimmed with a quicquard or a stiff little ostrich tip curling under the point at each side. It is a satisfactory little tailored hat at all times. And about that sprig of paradise—its sprouts out or drips off the hat at most unexpected places. Many times the dressy hat of all black has no other trimming.

FADS AND FASHIONS

For dressy blouses, sheer fabrics and crepe de chine are smartest.

A new frock of brown velvet is trimmed with lacquer red buttons.

White satin and bands of ermine appear together as a charming wedding gown.

A tricot blouse of canary yellow has the cuffs and lower part of the blouse run with metal.

An apron-shaped net veil has two deep points forming ends to tie around the crown of the hat.

One smart leather coat has collar and cuffs of otter and bands of embroidery in gold thread.

Silk fringe is used on one of the new serge suits. The fringe, in black, borders the coat of blue twill—fringe about two inches wide, hanging along the edge of the sleeves and the lower edge of the coat.

Fillet lace is treated without any respect whatever by the dressmakers this spring, for they dye it any color of the rainbow that suits their convenience. Sometimes it is jade green, again it is gray, and then it is red. It takes dyes well, and really is often very effectively used in these colors.

The black satin coats that are so smart for young girls this spring look for all the world like their grandmothers'—or rather, their great-grandmothers', for no grandmothers of today's young girls wear garments like those. They are made with quilting in black or white for trimming. A deep border is quilted around the bottom sometimes, and sometimes a wide collar or a narrow collar and cuffs are quilted. They are quaint little coats, and look charming on a young figure.

Earring hats are much worn—that is, hats with trimming hanging down over one ear or both. That is just what they look like. One such hat is made of straw in tam shape, with the band about the head covered with big red stones like cherries, and with one cherry-like stone hanging pendant over each ear. This same downward droop to trimming is observable on many hats of the spring. The trimming is often in the form of a bunch of ribbons, and sometimes it is in the form of a feather ornament that hangs down.

DIAMOND PICK-UPS

Welcome home Dan Howley! A big affair was to have been given in his honor, but owing to the recent death of his brother Walter, Dan requested that any plans for a demonstration be cancelled. Although he has been in all the principal cities of this big country of ours, Dan says there is no place better than Weymouth. The Detroit club, of which Dan is latterly coach, plays a series of three games this week with the Boston Red Sox.

The Eagle A. C. opened the season at West Hingham last Sunday afternoon, with the Fort Hill A. C. of that place for opponents. Beal, the Hingham High school pitcher, was on the mound for Fort Hill; Draper and Jones pitched for the Eagles. The game was called at 6 o'clock in order to comply with the law, with the score 10 to 10, ten innings. A challenge is issued to the Oakland A. C. of East Braintree by the Eagle A. C. of East Weymouth by way of this column.

The Odd Fellows start their league season tomorrow afternoon.

Connie Condrick of East Weymouth is picking up quite a lot of money playing with independent teams wherever he can catch on. Last Saturday afternoon he pitched for Stoughton and won his game 5 to 2. A party of friends went from East Weymouth to see him perform. Connie also pitched for Taunton recently and won. If he were a few years younger he might have stayed with Augusta, Ga., and taken his chances in organized baseball of reaching fame and fortune. The time he served in the service of his country with the 101st Pioneer Infantry, took valuable years out of his baseball playing days.

The first prospects rather discouraged some of the Snowbirds as only three ventured out. The course for the 15-footers was 7 1/2 miles and for the Snowbirds 5 1/2 miles. The judges were Fred E. Tupper, Capt. E. M. Wight and C. Frank Hardwick. The summary:

Education and Wealth.

When one considers that the increase of economic wealth, which is industrial production, can in the last analysis only be provided for by the growth of intellectual capacity, which is education, the realization must follow that eventually, and at no very distant time, the teaching profession will regain its rightful prestige and will be free from many of its temporary handicaps.—President Hopkins, Dartmouth College.

SUDDEN DEATH

Charles E. Loud of Weymouth and Boston and prominent in the real estate business in Boston, died suddenly from heart trouble about 5 o'clock Saturday afternoon, while cruising off Salem Willows in his sail boat, with his daughter and T. G. Frothingham of Boston.

He was experiencing considerable difficulty in managing the small craft in the heavy wind and suddenly collapsed, almost tumbling overboard. It is believed that he over-exerted himself. The boat put into Salem Willows and the body was taken to the rooms of a Salem undertaker.

Mr. Loud was born in Weymouth 54 years ago, where for many years past he and his brother, Joseph T. Loud of West Medford, have made their summer residence. He was educated at Adams Academy, Quincy, and at Harvard, being graduated from the latter in 1887. After leaving Harvard he entered the real estate office of William Minot, leaving there after a few years to take a position in the office of S. Parkman Blake. After several years Mr. Blake and Mr. Loud became partners in the real estate and insurance business, with offices at 75 State street, under the firm name of Blake & Loud, conducting it under his own name.

He was treasurer of the Veterans Association of the 1st Corps Cadets and during the war served in the 1st motor corps, state guard. He was a member of the Union Club, Harvard Club, Eastern Yacht Club, Boston Real Estate Exchange and other organizations. Surviving him are his daughter, Mary Frances Loud, and his brother.

GEORGE A. BOLSTER

George A. Bolster, long connected with the drug business with his partner, C. D. Harlow, died at his home, 39 Bradford street, Saturday morning. He was born in Blackstone on Feb. 8, 1861. In 1910 he represented ward 3, Quincy, in the city council and the next year was councillor-at-large. His widow and a daughter Marion survive.

East Indian Superstition.

The moon's release from the jaws of a mythical demon was anxiously watched and prayed for by thousands of people throughout India during the last eclipse. Hindus regard an eclipse as the act of a demon called Rahu, who is believed to swallow the moon and then disgorge it. On the Howrah bridge, in Calcutta, dense crowds waited for the first glimpse of the veiled moon; then with one voice they cried out, "Isko Chhordo! Chhordo!" ("Let it go! Leave it.") Before dusk the River Hooghly was thronged with bathers, as bathing during an eclipse is considered a soul-saving act. Beggars swarmed through the city, and as it is a virtue to give freely on these occasions they collected plenty of small coins.

COLONIAL HOUSE ALWAYS IN STYLE

Its Simplicity, Quaintness and Comfort Are Irresistible.

NEVER LOSES ITS APPEAL

Fundamentally It Embodies All That Goes to Make the Home the Center of Life—Can Be Built at a Cost Within Reason.

By WILLIAM A. RADFORD.

Mr. William A. Radford will answer questions and give advice FREE OF COST on all subjects pertaining to the subject of building, for the readers of this paper. On account of his wide experience as Editor, Author and Manufacturer, he is, without doubt, the highest authority on all these subjects. Address all inquiries to William A. Radford, No. 1827 Prairie avenue, Chicago, Ill., and only inclose two-cent stamp for reply.

When the early settlers came to the western continent they had certain ideas on homebuilding which they had brought from Europe. In England the predominating type of architecture was known as Georgian. It called for simplicity and dignity and a certain quaintness that made hospitality the cornerstone of the home. Once established in this country the settlers began to carry out this same scheme with some modifications. This development led to what is known as colonial architecture. The colonial home is as popular today, if not more so, than a century ago, and there is no reason to believe that it will lose its hold upon the people in the years to come. For fundamentally it embodies all that goes to make the home the center of life. Its delightful simplicity, quaintness and comfort are irresistible.

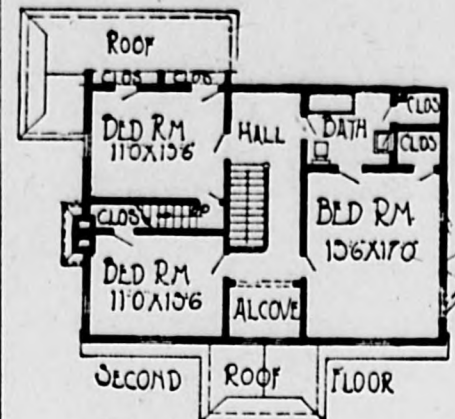

In the colonial home the entrance is one of the dominating features of the exterior treatment. It is the most important element in the facade. Usually it consists of a white door with old-fashioned knocker and narrow side panels. If covered, the hood is supported by white pillars such as those shown in the picture. This house is an excellent example of colonial treatment and expresses very eloquently the hospitality and comfort which are found in a home of this type. There is something alluring about the white clapboard siding (white seems to be the standard color of colonial houses, the house is the dining room, smaller in size than the living room, but ample for its purpose. It is lighted from two sides. A swinging door leads the way to the kitchen, 16 by 10 feet.

On the second floor are three bedrooms—an alcove and bathroom. The large bedroom is 13 feet 6 inches by 17 feet, and the other two smaller ones are 11 by 13 feet 6 inches. If four bedrooms are needed this second-floor plan can be easily changed to accommodate that number.

This is the kind of home that is being built in all sections of the country regardless of climate or location. It is ideal for the suburb, the small town, or even the farm. It is surprising how many farm homes of the colonial type are being built.

Another feature of the colonial house that recommends it very strongly is its economy in cost. Because there are no frills or unusual additions, there is no extra expense for millwork. The design is more or less standardized and the construction developed to a high degree. It gains beauty through simplicity, and because of this simplicity can be built at a cost within reason.

If you are planning on building a new home this spring, do not overlook the colonial design. It affords the maximum amount of comfort, charm, and convenience. There is no possibility of its growing old and out of date, for it has survived generations and is more popular today than ever.

"ROOM OF THE LAST SUPPER"

Rightful Possessor of Holy Place in Jerusalem Has Not Been Finally Decided.

The question of the right of Italy to the "Cenacolo," or Room of the Last Supper, in Jerusalem, is still unsettled, reports the Rome correspondent of the London Observer. It may be remembered that after the armistice although other colors can be used very successfully, green shutters, regular windows, well spaced and small panes. An extra decorative touch can very easily be added in the form of lattice work about the entrance or around the house.

There are seven rooms in this house, three on the lower floor and four above. The three first-floor rooms are large and the living room is ideal. The old idea of a large room where the family can lounge and entertain has come back with a vengeance. No more the small ornate parlor, now it is the living room and this room is the center of all home activity. Other rooms such as the dining room and kitchen have been made smaller and the extra space added to the living room. In the colonial house this room is the outstanding feature. It has the old-fashioned open fireplace which is now considered quite modern. In this house the living room is 13 feet 6 inches by 20 feet 6 inches.

At the rear end of the living room is a pair of French doors opening out onto a sun parlor, 14 by 11 feet. The sun parlor is an essential addition to any home and should be provided whenever possible. The comfort it affords easily offsets the extra cost required to build it. An attractive entrance similar to the one in front leads from this porch to the garden. On the other side of the small reception hall which leads the way into

FARM POULTRY

AIM FOR HEALTH AND VIGOR

Appearance and Action Taken Together Are Fairly Reliable Guide for Selection.

Only by continuous selection for health and vigor is it possible to build up a flock that will produce fertile eggs, strong chicks capable of making quick growth, and pullets with sufficient stamina to withstand the strain of heavy egg production. The appearance of a bird is not always a sure indication of its vigor, but appearance and action taken together are a fairly reliable guide for picking out vigorous birds, say poultry specialists of the United States Department of Agriculture.

The comb, face, and wattles should have a good, bright color; the eyes should be bright and fairly prominent, and the head should be comparatively broad and short, having a fairly short, well-curved beak and showing no tendency to be long "snaky," or "crow-headed."

The bird should be alert and have a strong, vigorous carriage; the legs

Government Poultry Farm, Beltsville, Md.

should be set well apart and strongly support the body, giving no indication of weakness or a knock-kneed condition. The bone, as seen in the shank, should be strong and not too fine for the breed, while the toes should be strong, straight, and not too long. The plumage should be clean and smooth, as a lack of condition often accompanies soiled, roughened plumage. The condition of flesh should be good, as a very thin bird is usually in poor health. Sick fowls, or fowls that have apparently recovered from sickness, should never be used for breeding if it can be avoided.

FEEDS FOR GROWING CHICKS

In Addition to Grains Growth of Young Fowl Can Be Hastened by Supplying Milk.

As soon as chickens will eat whole wheat, cracked corn, and other grains, the small-sized chick feed can be eliminated. In addition to the above feeds the chickens' growth can be hastened if they are given sour milk, skim milk, or buttermilk to drink.

Growing chickens kept on a good range may be given all their feed in a hopper, mixing two parts by weight of cracked corn with one part of wheat, or equal parts of cracked corn, wheat and oats in one hopper, and the dry mash, in another. The beef scrap may be left out of the dry mash and fed in a separate hopper, so that the chickens can eat all of this feed they desire. If the beef scrap is to be fed separately it is advisable to wait until the chicks are 10 days old, the poultry division of the United States Department of Agriculture advises, although many poultrymen put the beef scrap before the young chickens at the start without bad results.

Chickens confined to small yards should always be supplied with green feed. Fine charcoal, grit and oyster shell should be kept before the chickens at all times, and cracked or ground bone may be fed where the chickens are kept in small, bare yards, but the latter feed is not necessary for chickens that have a good range.

SUMMER CAPES IN TWO ROLES

TWO summer wraps, with entirely different destinies to fulfill, bear one another company in the picture shown above. One of them is a necessity in the wardrobe, made of a soft wool material and designed to make itself generally useful. It is equal to many demands and much wear, and in addition to these sturdy qualities, it has graceful lines and elegance to recommend it. Like nearly all this season's wraps, it bears a strong resemblance to a cape—in fact, is a cape, having capelike sleeves set on, extended into points at the back that merge into the body of the garment. The collar is really another small cape. The collar and sleeves are decorated with embroidered motifs and the wrap is rich enough in appearance to hold its own in the company of such debonair comrades as the one pictured with it.

Paris presents the lovely wrap for evening wear which appears at the right of the two pictured. It is made of taffeta silk in vivid orange color and trimmed with ostrich tips in a deeper orange. The frock worn with it is of white taffeta, with a wide scalloped hem and it proclaims its kinship to the brilliant wrap by wearing its color in a sash of orange velvet of the same shade as the ostrich feather trimming.

Evening dresses of chiffon taffeta with capes to match are among the alluring new arrivals. They are the last word in beautiful colors, with bouffant skirts in the new length and voluminous capes that nearly cover them. The capes are lined with chiffon, usually in a contrasting color, and there is a gleam of this color through the thin silk, as in a cape of light blue with pale orange for the lining. Very fine plaitings of the silk are used in bands for trimming and in collars that have the appearance of a full ruche about the throat. These gay trappings are worn with hose and slippers to match them in color. They have no responsibilities other than to clothe beauty most beautifully.

For Daylight or Lamplight

SHIMMERING taffetas will rustle their way through this summer, in the broad light of day and under the evening lamps. Nothing in fabrics, however, triumphant in the world of fashion, outshines this old-time favorite in silks which finds itself more alluring than ever in the colors, and tones of colors peculiar to the present season. For generations it has been a medium in which color—of whatever kind—has found its best expression, from the richest and glossiest blacks to the palest tints, and we are inclined to believe that it has reached the zenith of its beauty in this particular summer. Quite likely our grandmothers were convinced of the same thing.

In the two frocks for afternoon wear, pictured above, taffeta silk makes its oft repeated appearance in deep, clear, glossy black, in the dress at the left. This blackest of blacks is accentuated by decorations of white ribbon and white stitching that simulate beads, in the always-admired brilliant black and white dress for midsummer. The narrow panels of white ribbon down the front and on top of the sleeves are novel and are cleverly managed, slipping through slashes made in the silk. The same ribbon makes a border about the skirt at the head of a wide hem adorned with an embroidered design. White beads might be used instead of white silk for the decoration. The girdle is made of a length of taffeta silk.

At the right a light blue and rose changeable taffeta is made with a long tunic shirred to a plain bodice and worn over a narrow underskirt. Lace, dyed the same shade of blue as that in the silk, forms a border about the tunic with a narrow tuck at each side of it. A band of lace is set in the straight, three-quarter length sleeve also. The bodice reaches the nape of the neck in the back and opens in a short "V" at the front.

EAT PLENTY OF FRESH SPINACH

Vegetable Is Exceptionally Rich in Iron and One of Most Important Vitamins.

RARELY COOKED PERFECTLY

Except for Special Reasons Simplest Methods Are Best in Cooking—It Takes Much Patience and Water to Wash Clean.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

One of the first vegetables in the garden or on the market in the early spring is that reliable stand-by—spinach. The shoots should be cut regularly; if not, the old shoots become tough and rank flavored.

Spinach furnishes little body energy, but it is exceptionally rich in iron and is one of the important vitamins, and so is a valuable food, say specialists in the United States Department of Agriculture. It contains little starch and only a suggestion of sugar, and is therefore one of the vegetables that physicians include in the bill of fare of many invalids who require a diet without these carbohydrates.

Cheap in First Cost.

Like most other vegetables, it is rarely cooked to perfection, yet it is not difficult to prepare. Except for special reasons, the simplest methods are the best for this vegetable. No matter how cheap the raw spinach may be, it is always expensive in one thing—labor. It takes a good deal of time, water, and patience to wash it clean.

To clean the spinach cut off the roots, break the leaves apart and drop them into a large pan of water, rinse them well, and lift them into a second pan of water. Do not pour the water off over the spinach or the grit that has been washed off will get back on the leaves. Continue washing in clean waters until there is not a trace of sand on the bottom of the pan. If the spinach is at all wilted, let it stand in cold water until it becomes fresh and crisp. Drain from this water and blanch as follows:

For half a peck of spinach put in a large saucepan 3 quarts of boiling water and 1 tablespoon of salt. Put the drained spinach in the boiling water and let it boil 10 minutes, counting from the time it begins to boil. When it begins to boil, draw the cover of the saucepan a little to one side to allow the steam to escape. At the end of 10 minutes pour the spinach into a colander, and when the hot water has passed off pour cold water over it. Let it drain well and mince coarse or fine, as is suitable for the manner in which it is to be served.

One peck of spinach will make about 1½ pints when blanched and minced.

Spinach With Egg.

½ peck spinach.
3 tablespoons butter or other fat.
½ teaspoon pepper.
2 eggs.
3 teaspoons salt.

Wash and blanch the spinach, using two teaspoons of the salt in the water in which the vegetable is boiled. Drain the blanched spinach and chop rather fine, return it to the saucepan.

Spinach is an Especially Valuable Vegetable.

and add the salt, pepper, and butter or other fat. Place on the fire and cook ten minutes. Heap in a mound on a hot dish and garnish with the hard-boiled eggs, cut in slices.

Spinach Cooked Without Water.

Fresh spinach when washed holds enough water for cooking. Put the spinach into a covered saucepan and cook for ten minutes. Press down and turn the spinach over several times during the cooking. At the end of ten minutes turn the spinach into a chopping bowl, and mince rather fine. Return to the saucepan and add the seasonings, allowing for half a peck of spinach two generous tablespoons of butter or other fat and a teaspoon of salt. Simmer for ten minutes; or if very tender, five minutes will be sufficient.

Spinach cooked in this manner will retain all its salts and the flavor will be stronger than when blanched (boiled in water). In young, tender spinach this is not objectionable, but when the overgrown vegetable is cooked in its own moisture the flavor is strong and somewhat acid.

CANNING ASPARAGUS FOR ANY EMERGENCY

It Is Excellent Served Either Plain or as Salad.

Of Great Importance That Vegetable Be Fresh and Tender—Watch Carefully for Any Leaks and Store in a Dry Place.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

A housekeeper who has plenty of asparagus canned and on her shelves feels prepared for any emergency. It is excellent served either plain or as a salad.

The United States Department of Agriculture gives the following directions for canning this vegetable:

It is of the greatest importance that asparagus for canning be fresh and tender. Cut into right lengths for the Bunch of Asparagus.

Jars, scrape off the tough outer skin and scales, and tie in bundles. Blanch by immersing first the lower ends in boiling water for two minutes, then the entire stem for two minutes longer. Plunge into cold water, drain and pack carefully with the tips up. Fill pint jars with brine (4¼ ounces of salt to one gallon of water) and process 60 minutes in steam-pressure cooker under five pounds pressure. If a hot-water bath is used for processing, boil the jars intermittently one hour on each of three consecutive days. (In cold climates, with young and tender asparagus, boiling continuously for two hours will probably be sufficient.)

Seal the jars and remove from canner, invert while cooling, and watch carefully for leaks. When cool store in a dark, dry, cool place.

COVER CEREALS AND FLOURS

If Kept in Closed Containers They Become Musty and If Left Open Bugs Do Injury.

Cereal supplies and flour should now be purchased in very small quantities. If they are kept in closed containers they grow musty, and if left open, are attacked by wandering bugs. Cover such supplies with a cloth, and a ventilated cover, and store in a cool place.

ARRANGE KITCHEN FURNITURE

With Pedometer Woman Discovers She Saved Half-Mile Walk Daily by Moving Table.

There is a better way that furniture can be arranged in most kitchens. One woman bought a pedometer and discovered that she saved half a mile every day after she moved her kitchen table to a more convenient place.

STICKY DRAWERS AND DOORS

Easy to Open and Close by Rubbing Soap or Soap Powder on the Surfaces Affected.

Cupboard doors and drawers which stick may be induced to open and close by rubbing soap or soap powder on the surfaces that come in contact. Soap will also silence squeaking hinges.

Add half a cup of chopped nuts to hard sauce.

All clothes should be turned inside out in washing.

A pinch of baking powder will hold the omelet from falling.

A little grape juice added to a lemonade gives it a different turn.

Starched clothes should be dried and dampened for ironing at once.

A moth-infested closet should be washed out with turpentine and water.

Sliced ham of any age or quality is improved by soaking in milk for an hour.

Valuable coats or other articles of apparel should be steam-cleaned before being laid away. Steam-cleaning positively kills moths and eggs.

A WRITING-DESK.

Fig. 1 shows the completed desk and Fig. 2 shows a cross-section taken through the center, looking towards one end. The first part to make is the box beneath the top (Fig. 4). Cut the two ends A by the pattern in Fig. 5, and cut front board B and back board C of the widths shown in Fig.

2, by 28 inches long; then nail B and C to the ends of pieces A. The box bottom boards (D) fit between the end, front and back pieces, as shown. Nail through the end, front and back boards into their edges. Bevel the top edge of the front and back pieces to make them slant the same as end pieces A.

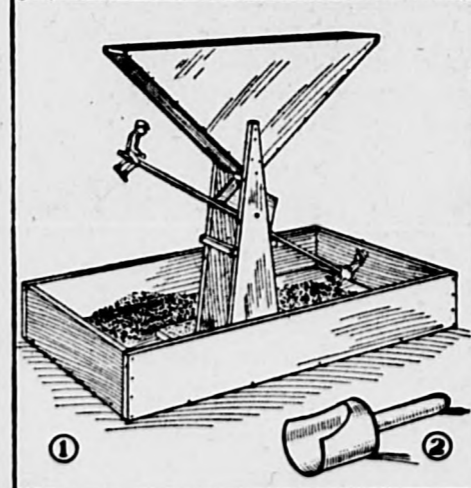

The legs are made of two strips each, nailed together as shown in Fig.

6, the back legs consisting of strips E and F (Fig. 7), the front legs of strips G and H. Nail the legs to the corners of the desk box, and trim

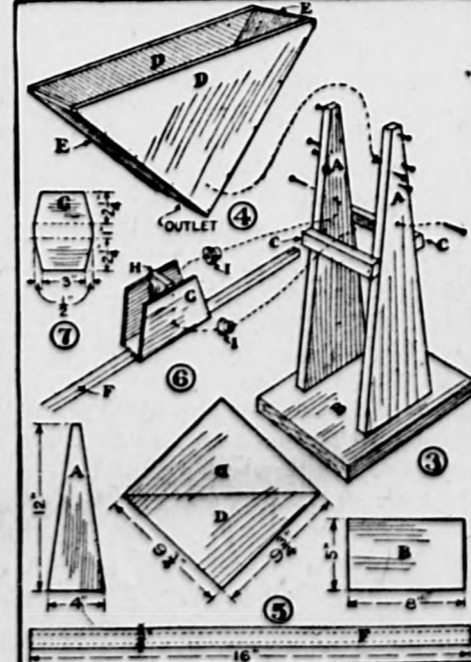

A SAND MOTOR TEETER TOY.

Cut uprights A and base B of the standard (Fig. 3) by the patterns in Fig. 5, and fasten the uprights to the base 3 inches apart. Then make the hopper (Fig. 4). Cut a square piece of board, ½ inch thick, of the size shown in Fig. 5, and saw it in half from corner to corner, for side pieces D, and cut end pieces E 2 inches wide by the length of the short edges of the side pieces. Lap the end pieces end to end, and nail together, then nail sides D to their side edges. Bore a hole through the center of the hopper bottom (Fig. 4), then fasten the hopper between supports A so the bottom is 3 inches below the top.

The teeter must be light in weight, and must be delicately balanced, so it will respond quickly to the overbalancing action of sand dropping into the pockets at the center. In making the first model, I used a stick for the teeter plank, but found later that a strip of cardboard folded into three works better because it is lighter (F, off the tops even with the edges of the ends, front and back of the box.

The desk-top is made in two parts, one hinged (K, Fig. 2), the other (M) nailed in place to form a hinge-strip for the hinged portion. These boards should be long enough to project 1 inch over the ends of the desk, or come nearly flush with the sides of the legs. Fasten together the pieces that are to form the hinged portion, with battens (L, Fig. 3). Set the hinge flaps into the edge of the hinged portion and into the edge of board M, as shown in Fig. 3, cutting notches to receive them (Fig. 8). With the desk top fastened in place, cut the back board N of the width shown in Fig. 2, by the length of board M, and nail it to the rear edge of board M (Fig. 8). The envelope-rack on back N is made of the pair of blocks O, and the horizontal strip P. Cut blocks O 1 inch square and strip P 1 inch wide by the length of board N. The legs are braced by the cross strips I, fastened between strips E and

G of the legs (Fig. 2), and by the board J, fastened between strips I. Board J also forms a foot-rest.

If you want to, you can partition off the desk box with thin wood.

Make one compartment for pens, pen-holders, pencils and erasers, a small compartment for stamps, and several compartments of the right dimensions for paper and envelopes.

The desk should be finished with two or three coats of paint. When the first coat of paint has dried, do whatever puttying is necessary before applying the second coat.

After you have completed the desk, get a large blotter to fit the top, and fasten it to the hinged portion with brass-headed tacks. Make a wooden base for your ink bottles, and screw brass hooks into the front to support pen-holders and pencils.

Fig. 5. Score the strip of cardboard along the dotted lines with a knife, before folding. The center sand pockets are made of the piece of cardboard G (Fig. 7), folded where indicated by dotted lines. Tack this to the sides of a block of wood ¼ inch thick, 1 inch wide, and 2½ inches long (H, Fig. 6), and glue the teeter board strip, at its center, to the under side of the pocket piece.

The teeter must be fastened between the supports so there will be ½ inch space between the top of block H and the outlet in the hopper, and so the outlet will be exactly over the center of the top of block H.

The purpose of strips C (Fig. 3) is to prevent the teeter from tilting too far. In the model illustrated, they are 1½ inches below the nail pivots.

When the hopper has been filled with sand free from pebbles and dirt that might clog the outlet, the sand will pour into whichever sand pocket is tilted uppermost, until the weight is sufficient to overbalance it, when the end of the teeter board on that side of the center will drop as far as bumper C. The sand will then spill out of the pocket. Meanwhile, sand from the hopper will pour into the other sand pocket, and when the weight becomes sufficient, the teeter will tilt.

A doll for each end of the teeter is needed, and in Figs. 8 and 10 I have shown parts of the right size.

Of Ancient Origin.

The Romans were wont to throw a square piece of cloth over their shoulders, or to cover them when in bed, and they called this "pallium." The same word has come down to us in our modern "pall," the covering thrown over a coffin. Quite different was the "palla," a long, sweeping cloak worn by princesses and women of honest fame. The pallium was worn by slaves, freedmen, soldiers and philosophers. The custom of appointing men of mark to act as pall bearers comes down to us from Roman times. Pall Mall, the London street, derives its origin from quite a different source. This was the name of a game in which a pall or iron ball was struck through an iron ring with a mallet. Londoners pronounce the name Pall Mall almost verging on pel met.

"Overland Route"

The term "Overland Route" was applied to the old-time route to California as distinguished from the route via the Isthmus of Panama. The term was first used, however, for the route from Europe to India via Egypt, the desert and Suez. It was in contradistinction to the Cape route (by the Cape of Good Hope), which was by water only. It became more applicable in 1857, when the route was across the European continent by Marseilles; in 1845, when that by Trieste was followed; and in 1872, when that via the Mount Cenis tunnel and Brindisi came into use. The opening of the Suez canal in 1869 having all but superseded the Cape route, the term "overland route" as applied to this route is now obsolete.

Doctor Johnson's Humanity.

Two copies of a rare pamphlet with an introduction by Doctor Johnson, which shows that the great man was always awake to the calls of humanity, as Boswell put it, have come into the market, observes the Christian Science Monitor. The pamphlets bear the title "The Prisoners of War," and were printed in 1790. Charles Wesley had visited the camp of prisoners of war at Knowle, near Bristol, and had been horrified at their ragged and miserable condition, and as a result a committee for their relief was formed. One of the pamphlets with Doctor Johnson's noble and humane introduction is a presentation copy to Laurence Sterne, and the other to Sir Thomas Robinson, who was at one time leader of the house of commons.

Fidelity of a Telegrapher.

One striking example of the early spirit of endurance under great stress of which the telegrapher of the old school was capable was given by John Carnahan, then a young man in his thirties, at the time of the Custer massacre, says an exchange. He was operator and newspaper correspondent at Bismarck, which was the nearest telegraph office to the scene of Custer's last fight, 500 miles west. Attending his regular duties, and gathering here and there from incoming scouts and plains stragglers the thrilling story of Custer to send to the anxiously waiting world, he worked 40 hours without rest, and for several days and nights he only caught a few winks of sleep, yet all the newspaper-reading world was eagerly grasping for the thousands of words of story he was gathering. They never knew how one man was working to satisfy them.

"A young fellow remarked to us not long since that he feared he had been 'stung' in his footwear. When he told us he had paid $18 for them we concluded he had been stung in his headware.—McAlester (Okla.) Guardian.

IN GLOVE STYLES

White Glove Kids Are Ignored by the French Women.

Taste Turns Toward Suede in Pearl Gray and Light Beige in Variety of Tones.

An amusing fact, despite the prevalent belief that America looks to Paris for fashion hints, is the complete absence in the wardrobe of any well-dressed Frenchwoman of the ubiquitous white glove kid glove of America. Glove kid gloves are only worn in Paris when they are black and of gauntlet mousquetaire or 20-button cut, and these as well as evening gloves, of any cut or color, have been sacrificed to the prevailing vogue of enormous cabochon rings.

In place of white gloves, which always increase the apparent size of the hands and are so frequently incongruous with the remainder of the toilette, the Frenchwoman's taste instinctively turns toward the lovely suede gloves in pearl-gray and light beige, in a variety of tones, each one only removed from another in a varying degree.

Practically all the chic gloves developed in color are in suede and have very fine stitching in self-tone, black suede being peculiar to mourning in France. The popular lengths are gauntlet and mousquetaire, the latter sometimes having such intriguing details as scalloped or pointed tops and narrow bands or motifs of cut steel bead embroidery. For an example, black glove kid gloves are embroidered with a fairly open triangle of cut steel beads, quite close to the scalloped edge. Another pair shows the steel bead embroidery in diamond shape on the back of the hand. Worn with these gloves was a small hat of white leather embroidered with the same pattern in jet beads.

The gauntlet glove lends itself more readily to variation in that it can be amazingly lined and edged. When you line a beige suede glove with black moire and edge the same with a very narrow but rich silver galloon you have a chic accessory to the simple black dress, which is the rage of the moment. The color of the lining is by no means limited to black, because you may find beige lined with rose, green and rust; pearl gray lined with peacock blue, and black glove lined with rust, or with gold and white brocade, or with gold cloth.

SWEATER BLOUSE, SHADE HAT

The summer costume of sweater blouse and shade hat is charming when developed in jade. The hat, of jade straw, is trimmed with large daisies.

MANY STYLES OF FOOTWEAR

Gorgeous Brocaded Black Satin and Variety of Other Slippers to Please All Tastes.

Seldom since the Middle Ages when shoes had pointed toes so long that often they were looped up and fastened at the knee has footwear assumed so many and varied modes. It would seem that the designers had ransacked their brains to produce unusual and charming effects in shoes and slippers.

Gorgeous brocaded evening slippers in vivid tangerine fashioned in sandal effect, with high thin French heels, and straps which fasten with tiny jeweled buckles; or metallic brocaded slippers with low heels just like those worn by children, and with straps of the brocade; or slippers of ruby or French blue velvet, for strong colors are for the nonce preferred to black, all may be seen displayed in the footwear section of the various stores and shops.

Black satin slippers with green satin heels and jade green buttons are in vogue while for sports wear red calf is splendid, fringed tongues which pass over the tops of such slippers and down the front being considered very smart. Other sport combinations consist of white buckskin with brown or red calf vamps and straps. Really the new spring shoes rival the new spring millinery in interest.

So, take it all in all, one can readily see that quite as much attention is being paid at present to the pedal extremities as there is to the head.

Varied Hat Styles.

To attempt to describe the prevailing vogue in hats is next to impossible. Crowns and brims are high and low, narrow and wide. Trimmings are made as you desire to make them. Materials cover a wide range.

WOULD FERTILIZE THE AIR

Scientist Sees Immense Possibilities in Scheme Which He Claims is Quite Feasible.

Recently men have undertaken to mine nitrates, or some of the material for nitrates, from the air. There is nitrogen enough in the air, no doubt, to blow civilization off the earth—were that nitrogen concocted into explosives.

Now comes a hopeful German scientist named Riedel, who believes that the air itself may be fertilized to such an extent that plants will bound forth from their seeds like tennis balls. He would fill the air where plants are imbedded with carbon dioxide (carbonic acid gas). Plants love this gas as a fresh-air crank loves the out of doors. They use it ambitiously, but could use more. Man expels it with his breath. Plants take it up and expel oxygen, which man can use. Thus men and plants are mutually helpful. But more carbon dioxide is always a good thing for the vegetable world, and Doctor Riedel proposes to supply more.

He would get his supplies from the blast furnaces, whose great lungs expel this gas. An industry which uses 4,000 tons of coke per day expels 35,000,000 meters of gas, of which about 20 per cent is carbon dioxide. Doctor Riedel has tried fertilizing the air in this way, and his happy plants have flourished amazingly.

PLANET DESTROYED BY HEAT

Possibility That Our Own World May Meet the Same Fate Through the Rays of the Sun.

Worlds, with probably millions of human beings like ourselves, have been destroyed and turned into glowing gas by a stupendous conflagration in the heavens.

The sun to which these worlds belonged must have rushed into a zone of heated gas and have had its atmosphere set on fire.

It was toward the end of last summer that the vast outbreak was first seen, but it was only lately that astronomers realized its awful significance. Now it is known that the star which caught fire had its heat increased by no less an amount than five hundred thousand times in the course of a few days.

Can anyone imagine our own sun filling the sky with its blaze and sending forth a heat hundreds of thousands of times greater than it does at present.

Humanity would be withered as a leaf dropped into a white-hot furnace, and the earth itself would melt with fervent heat.

Yet there are those who predict such a fate as that for our planet.

Glass-Covered Electric Meters.

The use of the glass-covered meter is increasing, and many central station men and manufacturers believe that they will be ordered in greater numbers when deliveries become easier. Companies which are using these meters find that they facilitate the settlement of complaints, especially when a meter is suspected of creeping. Customers prefer a meter that can be seen working. The objections to glass covers have for the most part been overcome. Unevenness of the edge of the cover which might cause a poor fit has been taken care of by a leaf gasket, consequently no trouble from this source has been experienced. Condensation, which sometimes appears on the outside of the glass cover, is present on the inside of metal covers without being noticed upon inspection of the outside.—Electrical World.

Pittsburghers Will Bore.

After having tried, for a number of years, to get over and around the hills surrounding their city, the residents of Pittsburgh have decided to strike at the heart of the difficulty and go through them. Accordingly tunneling operations have been gotten under way which, when completed, will result in a double-tube bore that will accommodate pedestrian, street car and vehicular traffic, says Popular Mechanics Magazine. The estimated cost of the undertaking is between $2,000,000 and $3,000,000, and it is expected that two years will be required for its completion. It establishes no precedent, as another bore, made several years ago, has given satisfactory service, although reserved for the use of street cars only.

Gymnastic Dancing Passing.

The waltz of our grandmother's days—but with a fascinating touch of "hesitation"—has come back to our jazz-weary ballrooms. It became all the rage—after much opposition—when the Czar Alexander danced it at Almack's in 1813; and since the Prince of Wales likes it and dances it today a new vogue for the waltz is assured. Dancing evidently is to be less gymnastic and more sentimental. Anxious mothers will not reprove. The dreamy waltz was a match maker in their day and perhaps it will be in ours.—London Daily Mail.

Burbank Native of Massachusetts.

Luther Burbank, the originator of flowers, fruits and vegetables, was born at Lancaster, Mass., March 7, 1849, and began his first experiments on a farm of twenty acres near Lunenburg, Mass., when he was 22 years old. A warmer climate than that of New England being necessary for continuous research, Mr. Burbank moved in 1878 to Santa Rosa, Cal., where he now lives.

SOME SMILES

Absolutely!
"Hereafter there will be absolutely no smoking in barracks at any time," bellowed a captain in Raritan arsenal, New Jersey, after a fire caused by a forgotten butt had been quelled. "Absolutely! Not at any time!"
Then he paused and added as an afterthought in a louder bellow even than before:
"Especially at night!"—American Legion Weekly.

The Grand Essential.
"What is the plot of your new play?"
"We haven't begun to think about that," replied the producing manager. "But you say you have a sure winner."
"We certainly have. We thought up a risque title that'll bring the people in as soon as they read the billboards."

Spoiling the Show.
"I understand the magician's performance was broken up in disorder."
"Yes. While he was levitating Princess Oomphah, a careless stage hand left a door open and exposed her to a strong draft."
"Well?"
"She began to swing, and a ribald patron in the gallery shouted: 'Rock-a-By, baby!'"—Birmingham Age-Herald.

An Ingenious Thing.
Mrs. Mason, who had just had installed an electric cooking stove, asked her maid, Nora, what she thought of it.
"To me, mum," said Nora, "it seems like a great invention. When you and Mr. Mason were away for over Sunday, mum, I burned it all the time, mum, and there seems to be plenty of electricity still left!"

Light-Headed.
The lights were very low, and stillness reigned in the back parlor. Presently a female voice was heard:
"Freddie, dear!"
"Yes, angel."
"Does my head seem heavy on your shoulder?"
"No, darling. It is very light, indeed!"

AN IMPOSSIBLE UNDERTAKING.

"I hear that you have been laid up with nervous prostration. What's the cause, overwork or worry?"
"Both. I tried to have a photograph taken that suited my wife."

Best Way Out.
When Bracer hints that he is short and starts the same old song, Don't wait to hear how short he is. But just remark, "So long!"

Place to Park Cars.
Styles—I see that pawnbroker on the next block has started an automobile department in connection with his business.
Myles—I understand so. Do you expect to park your car there soon?"

Saw His Mouth.
Belle—Did his face express any emotions while I was singing?
Beulah—Really, I don't know.
"Why, couldn't you see his face from where you sat?"
"No; he was yawning."

Inevitable Leisure.
"Nobody ought to enjoy the bread of idleness."
"And yet you can't expect a man who sells bread these days to avoid getting rich enough to quit work."

This Is Mean.
"Why don't married men kiss their wives oftener?"
"I dunno. I have noticed, however, that the mouse in the trap seems to lose all taste for cheese."

Give Him Fits.
Jones—Clothes don't make the man. Bones—How could they be expected to when even a man's own opinion of himself doesn't fit.—Cartoons Magazine.

A Touch of Authority.
"You claim to be an optimist?"
"I do," replied the photographer. "When I tell a man to smile, he invariably does his best."

A Cynical Woman.
Mrs. Green—My husband seems to enjoy life thoroughly.
Mrs. Wyse—What a lot of bad habits he must have.—Boston Transcript.

Going Alone.

VIEW OF U. S. CAPITOL DURING PAINTING.

The dome of the United States Capitol at Washington is kept in excellent condition by painting it every few years. For this work forty painters are steadily employed for three months' time. Over five thousand gallons of paint are required for one coat. The reason for painting the Capitol dome at regular intervals is to prevent disintegration of metallic surface.

Daddy's Evening Fairy Tale

by MARY GRAHAM BONNER

THE BROWN CREEPERS.

"We're not fashionable like some of the birds," said Mr. Brown Creeper. "The fashionable ones have summer homes and winter homes."

"Well, I don't know whether it is because of fashion or not that the birds have summer homes and winter homes," said Mrs. Brown Creeper. "I believe it is because a great many of them cannot stand a cold climate. Some of our family don't like it so well and travel away a bit. But most of us do not mind."

"You see, it is hard on many birds to stay where it is cold, for they only have their little feathers to keep them warm, and while feathers are nice and warm, it is not always enough to have only feathers."

"Feathers will often blow about in the wind, and then a little bird may become very cold, indeed."

"Birds haven't great fur coats to keep them warm. Yes, Mr. Brown Creeper, the birds who go South in the winter and who travel about to different climates are the ones who can't keep warm when the weather is so cold."

"I do believe you are right, Mrs. Brown Creeper. I do believe you are right. As you say, it is hard for the birds to keep warm all winter. I've often thought about it myself."

"The winter is mighty cold, mighty cold. But we don't have to think of it now that the warm weather has come."

"All the birds are singing songs of the springtime. We can't join in the great chorus because our voices are so low. They have always been low. No one ever hears a brown creeper's voice unless very near to us."

"We give a little low trill and a very low chirp."

"But how we love the woods! How we enjoy climbing up the trunks of trees, looking in the bark for bugs and insects."

"We like people, too, and are very tame. We do not mind any one and are not easily frightened."

"Of course, we like to wear brown suits, as one would guess from our

"We Enjoy Climbing."

names, and I think the white waistcoat we wear is a stylish touch."

"How we jump from the top of one tree to the next tree below. Oh, how we love trees!"

"And our nests are so like the woods," Mrs. Brown Creeper said, "with the moss and twigs and bits of bark, which we use for our wall paper and rugs and furniture."

"We like to nest on old stumps. We don't care about living in a rich, smart neighborhood. We never found that made any one any happier."

"And soon the little white eggs will come out into little birdlings, the dear little white eggs with the reddish brown spots on them!"

"Oh, it is nice to be a Brown Creeper and lead such a happy life in the dear, beautiful woods."

"We have rather long beaks," said Mr. Brown Creeper, "and they help us to get the long grubs and insects which we enjoy for breakfast, dinner and supper."

"I know why we have such low voices," said Mrs. Brown Creeper.

"Why?" asked her mate.

"Because we have always lived in the woods, where it is quiet and where the sounds are all low sounds."

"And we have grown to be quiet, too. We have kept our voices low and soft and the pine trees have whispered to us."

"That is nice, little Brown Creepers; that is nice to make those soft, little sounds. When people hear you they will be so excited and pleased because they will know they are quite near you and are actually becoming friends. For you will become friends with them. Because you are so trusting, surely no one will ever hurt you."

"Yes, the pine trees whispered that to me only the other day. And they told me that always brown creepers have loved the woods and have had their voices low and quiet and peaceful like the woods."

"You don't have to shout to be big," ended Mrs. Brown Creeper, "for the woods are great and mighty and they aren't always shouting about it."

"Right," said Mr. Brown Creeper. "You are perfectly right."

Out of Order.

"The next one in this room that speaks above a whisper will be put out," exclaimed the angry judge. "Hip, hip, hooray!" shouted the prisoner as he ran for the door.—Boys' Life.

DAY OF THE SAIL NOT OVER

Many Years Likely to Elapse Before Steam is Without Rival on the High Seas.

Is the day of sail over? A few years ago many people would have answered that question in the affirmative. Square-riggers, there is no doubt, are decreasing in numbers; but recent years have witnessed a remarkable revival in the building of sailing craft. Most of the new sailing vessels are fitted with internal combustion engines for use in calm or contrary winds, the sails being brought into use in favorable weather. And the sailing ship of the future will most probably be the fore-and-aft type familiar for many years on both coasts of the American continent, especially in the lumber trade.

They have a stark, austere beauty of their own, with their four or five tall masts, their great sails, and their usual carved sheer and low freeboard. They are considered remarkably handy vessels, especially adapted to sailing close-hauled, that is, as near to the wind as possible. And since sail must always remain the cheapest form of propulsion, it would seem likely that—especially since the coming of the internal combustion engine—so adapted for combustion with sail—the threatened disappearance of the sailing ship from the seas will never come to pass.

APPEALED TO HIGHER COURT

Decree From Judge Cupid Enabled German Engineer to Laugh at Government Regulations.

If a government refuses a passport there is a higher authority that may be appealed to in certain cases, as demonstrated by the recent experience of a German engineer. This authority is no less a personage than Dan Cupid himself.

The German engineer was preparing to marry and the wedding day was set, the Paris Journal des Debats states. At the last moment it was discovered that the bride-to-be had not obtained a passport, and as she lived in a neighboring country there was no possible way for her to get into Germany at the hour appointed for the ceremony.

Rather than postpone the happy event, however, the couple devised an ingenious plan. They had the wedding party gather at the frontier, and the marriage service was read while the bridegroom stood on German soil and the bride on the other side of the line. When the ceremony was over the groom reached out his hand, drew his bride over the line into Germany and drove away in a waiting coach.

The authorities were impotent, for the lady was now a German citizen by marriage, and as such had no need of a passport.

Lost Sunday Dinner by Mistake.

Changing cars in midseason ended as disastrously for a real estate dealer as changing horses in midstream. The dealer has ridden for several years in a car of rather ancient vintage. Recently he bought a new car of the same make.

Saturday night he drove his new car to the city market. He parked it beside an old car. He bought a bushel of apples, a big roast and a week's supply of vegetables.

Probably it was force of habit, his friends say in explaining the consequences. He placed his purchases in the old car. Then he returned to the stall to add further to his supply. On returning he discovered his mistake. The old car had been driven away, carrying his Sunday dinner and his week's supply of vegetables.—Kansas City Star.

A 400-Pound Shark on a Rod.

James A. Thomson of Auckland writes: "In February, along with three friends, I had four weeks' sea fishing in the Bay of Islands. We caught a number of good kingfish up to 65 pounds, besides whaupaka up to 80 pounds, and landed one big Moka shark, which piece of luck fell to my rod. He was a great fighter, 9 feet 3 inches long, and weighing a little over 400 pounds. Unlike the brown and other sharks, he comes right out of the water when hooked and jumps sometimes twice his own length perpendicularly—a great fighter."—Correspondence of the Field.

Expected a Feed.

Tampering with signs has long been a favorite amusement with young people. To remove the fourth letter from "manicure," for example so that it reads "man cure," tickles their sense of humor. The latest case we heard of is where a little boy at a public gathering was greatly disappointed because no refreshments were served. He insisted to his mother that a feed was promised, and as they passed the bulletin board he removed the "S" from "Seats free."—Boston Transcript.

Emperor's Dessert Service Sold.

A French dessert dish of gilt plate, double thread and shell pattern, consisting of two sugar sifters, four spoons, a pair of sugar tongs, twenty-four small spoons, twenty-four forks and knives with porcelain handles, formerly the property of the Emperor Napoleon, and bearing the imperial cipher of the bee, was sold in a London auction house not long ago. The service was the property of a nobleman whose name is not revealed.

HOW DO YOU SAY IT?

By C. N. LURIE

Common Errors in English and How to Avoid Them.

"WHERE AM I AT?"

IT IS not correct to use the word "at" or the word "to" after the word "where," as in the sentences, "Where were you at last Sunday?" and "Where were you going to?" Say, instead, "Where were you last Sunday?" and "Where were you going?" This is one example of many in English in which the speaker or writer uses too many words to express his meaning.

The sentence, "Where am I at?" attracted much attention about 20 years ago when it was used by a speaker in the house of representatives. The member was making a long speech, filled with long sentences. Not much attention was being paid to him, and he "lost his place" while uttering one of his long sentences. So he turned to the speaker and asked: "Mr. Speaker, where am I at?" The reporters took advantage of the opportunity to poke fun at him, and the phrase was repeated and laughed at all over the United States.

THE ADDING MACHINE.

THE Babylonians had the first recorded mechanical aid to addition, a "pebble-board" with small stones which were shifted about. The Chinese abacus, with its beads on wires, is also very ancient. Pascal, in 1641, invented the first adding machine with dials. In 1820 C. X. Thomas brought out the first successful all-round calculating machine.

NORTH AND SOUTH.

SEEK out the Southland if you will, Where flowers deck your window-sill, And tuneful birds are singing; Where soft as silk the morning breeze Confides its secrets to the trees, And Springtime's bells are ringing.

I still shall hold to Winter's ways, Despite the roughage of her days, When arctic blasts are blowing, The blasts that, though they thrill with strife, Impart new vigor to my life, And keep my soul a-growing.

On a Secure Basis.

"Dad," said the financier's son, running into his father's office, "lend me $500."

"What for, my boy?"

"I've got a sure tip on the market."

"How much shall we make out of it?" asked the old man cautiously.

"A couple of hundred sure," replied the boy eagerly. "That's a hundred each."

"Here's your hundred," said his father. "Let's consider that we have made this deal and that it has succeeded. You make $100 and I save $500."—Boston Transcript.

NEWSPAPER PATRONAGE

The following is yellow with age and the man who wrote it slumbers in dust, but the article is as good as ever.

"Many long and dreary years in the publishing business has forced the conviction upon us that newspaper patronage is a word of many definitions and that a great majority of mankind are either ignorant of the correct definition or are dishonest in a strict Biblical sense of the word. Newspaper patronage has as many colors as the rainbow and is as changeable as a chameleon.

"One man comes in, subscribes for a paper, pays for it in advance and goes home and reads it with a proud satisfaction that it is his. He hands in his advertisement and advantages thereof. This is patronage.

"Another man asks you to send him the paper and goes off without saying a word about the pay. Time flies on; you are in need of the money and you ask him to pay the sum he owes you. He flies into a passion, perhaps pays, perhaps not and orders his paper stopped. This is called patronage.

One man brings in a 50-cent advertisement with a $2 puff thrown in, and when you decline, he goes away mad. Even this is called patronage.

"One man don't take your paper. It is too high priced, but he borrows and reads it regularly. And that could be called newspaper patronage.

One hands your a marriage or other notice and asks for extra copies containing it; and when you ask him for pay for the papers, he looks surprised: "You surely don't take any pay for such small matters." If an accident occurs in his section he informs the editor? This is newspaper patronage.

One (it is good to see such) comes in and says: "The year for which I paid is about to expire, I want to pay for another." He does so and retires."

It will be seen from the above that while certain kinds of patronage are the very life of the newspaper, there are other kinds more fatal to its health and circulation than the coils of a boa constrictor are to the luckless prey he patronizes.

American and European Moose.

The Alces Machilis or elk, one variety of which with palmed antlers, found in North America, is commonly known as the moose, lives in the northern portions of both the eastern and western hemispheres. There is a difference, many naturalists claim, between the European and American species, although they approach each other in general appearance in certain cases. To be exactly precise, it would not be perfectly correct to say that what we know as the moose is found in Scandinavia, although he has very near relatives there.

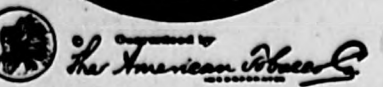

Beautiful "Common Flowers."

We are, surely, rather apt to pass by our wealth of so-called common flowers, just because they are plentiful and need no cultivation. Few things surpass in sweetness and beauty of coloring a bowl of deep crimson and mauve clover or sainfoin; harebells, arranged in perforated glass holders in a pink luster bowl, so that each stem stands out separately, have a grace peculiarly their own, and what cultivated shrub can compare in beauty of coloring with the glorious reddish pink of the spindleberry?—Christian Science Monitor.

Western Canada Land of Prosperity

offers to home seekers opportunities that cannot be secured elsewhere. The thousands of farmers from the United States who have accepted Canada's generous offer to settle on FREE homesteads or buy farm land in her provinces have been well repaid by bountiful crops. There is still available on easy terms Fertile Land at $15 to $30 an Acre—land similar to that which through many years has yielded from 20 to 45 bushels of wheat to the acre—oats, barley and flax also in great abundance, while raising horses, cattle, sheep and hogs is equally profitable. Hundreds of farmers in Western Canada have raised crops in a single season worth more than the whole cost of their land. With such success comes prosperity, independence, good homes and all the comforts and conveniences which make life worth living.

THEIR ESTIMATES TOO LOW

Proof That Engineers Have Erred in Their Figures Concerning the Weight of Crows.

Interesting experiments were made some time ago at Harvard university which seem to demonstrate that engineers usually underestimate the maximum loading caused by dense crowds on bridges, floors and platforms. Forty men averaging 163 pounds in weight placed in a box six feet square caused an average pressure of 181 pounds to the square foot on the floor.

An engineer has estimated the weight per square foot of the densest crowds on the New York elevated railways at only 45 pounds, but since the Harvard experiments the opinion has been expressed that the maximum loading on the elevated cars and platforms may be nearer 181 than 45 pounds. This applies to other close-packed crowds.

Little Too Long. A bishop was making a gramophone record of his most famous sermon for the benefit of posterity.

It ended: "And then we shall all go to heaven."

At its conclusion, oblivious of the still running machine, the prelate turned to the manager with the words: "I don't think that will be too long, do you?"

Result, when the record was put on for a test hearing: "And then we shall all go to heaven. I don't think."

Levying a Tax on Bachelors

By R. RAY BAKER

(© 1921, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

When Cora Haines became a legislator, Alex Carlton gave up. "It's all over," Alex told himself with a sigh as he sat in his business office that night and read of her election triumph. "She's chosen between a career and me—she has passed out of my life, and the irony of it is, I had to help her do it. My conscience wouldn't have let me vote for her opponent, although I realized I was casting a ballot against myself when I marked the cross in front of her name."

In truth, Alex was discouraged. For several years two blazing lights of ambition had been guiding him into the future. He wanted to be general manager of the Dalton House-Furnishing company, and he wanted to be the husband of Cora Haines. The first ambition he had at last realized, as a result of hard work, but in the second he had failed.

Alex at last was financially situated so he could step into matrimony, but he had no more than got squared away for the venture in question when the young lady who had been his ideal for years coldly threw him over for a political career.

Now he was at sea, his cherished plans were shattered, his soul felt crushed. He did not even conceive the idea that he might choose some one else for a marital partner; in fact, he had no other feminine acquaintances who by the wildest stretch of imagination could be considered eligible. Only this one girl had won her way into his heart during the thirty years of his earthly sojourn and he knew there never could be another. He endeavored to reconcile himself to his fate. For the rest of his days he would be a bachelor.

Now, Alex was a wizard when it came to understanding business but in assailing the problems of the feminine he registered zero. Making love is not like selling chairs, and he should have used different tactics. Cora had not thrown him over, and grounds, and finally he went inside and looked at the curio in the museum, and then he ventured into the senate; but there was no excitement in the upper house, so he walked to the other end of the building and peered into the lower legislative chamber. There was some kind of a debate on and it made him curious, so he mounted to the gallery and took a chair. He didn't scan the floor of the house too closely, but his eyes couldn't help picking out the only feminine member of the assemblage. He felt guilty, but eased his conscience by telling himself repeatedly that it was a public session and he had a perfect right—indeed, it was his duty—to be there. Too few citizens interest themselves in their governments.

The debate was hot. The state's funds were running low and some means were being sought to replenish the coffers; and some happy married legislator had hit upon the plan of placing a tax on bachelors. "Huh!" growled Alex, when he learned the cause of the debate. "That's a fine idea! Make a fellow pay for being single. What if he can't find a wife—like me? What they ought to do is tax the girls who turn down men who want to be their husbands."

The negative side of the argument was getting the best of it. It happened there were a number of bachelors who held seats in the house, and they arose to air their grievances over such an unjust, discriminating, liberty-stealing law. As the speaking went on it became apparent the assemblage was waiting to hear from the feminine member, and finally she rose to her feet.

"Mr. Speaker, and my worthy colleagues," she said, "it is my opinion that a tax on bachelors is the proper method to raise funds needed by the state. Not only does the commonwealth require more money, but it needs more marriages. A tax on bachelors would make some of the old grouchies get out and let a little sunshine into their lives by the marriage license route. Such a tax would prompt many to marry, and it would help to make brave a large number who wish to wed but haven't the courage to ask. I have in mind the case of a young lady who loved a man for four years and waited patiently for him to propose to her. But he was a business man, and he kept so busy chasing the dollars that he didn't have time, or the inclination, or the courage to ask her to be his wife. If he loved her he never showed it. Probably he had the old foggy idea that he must wait until he had crowned himself with a bale of dollar signs before he made overtures to her. What he needed was a tax on bachelors. That would have appealed to his business sense, and no doubt the couple would be happily married by this time. I am heartily in favor of the tax on bachelors and will cast my vote for the bill."

The speech seemed to clinch the matter, for the vote was taken and the house expressed itself in favor of the proposal. Immediately afterward the body adjourned for the day.

Alex found Cora in her hotel. He sent up his card and she received him on the mezzanine floor. "Well, I see you've decided to make us poor fellows pay for living alone," he observed after they had shaken hands.

"We certainly have," she said warmly. "It's now up to the senate, of course, but it's coming all right."

"I happened to hear your address this afternoon," he went on, "and that part of it having to do with a fellow's courage struck me as being peculiarly fitted to my case. So I came right here to ask you in plain, unvarnished words whether you'd be willing to give up this career idea and save me from paying a bachelor's tax."

"You heard me!" she exclaimed, apparently startled. "Well, now, Alex, I rather like this career idea, and really I can't think of giving it up."

Alex's heart, which had been thumping violently, seemed to stop.

"But," the lady representative continued, "I see no reason why I should not also save you from the bachelor's tax if you wish it."

To herself she added: "Especially since I made that speech for your especial benefit today, having seen you in the gallery."

Whatever Alex's shortcomings, it could not be said he ever failed to embrace an opportunity, and as the mezzanine floor was all but deserted he lost little time in embracing this particular opportunity.

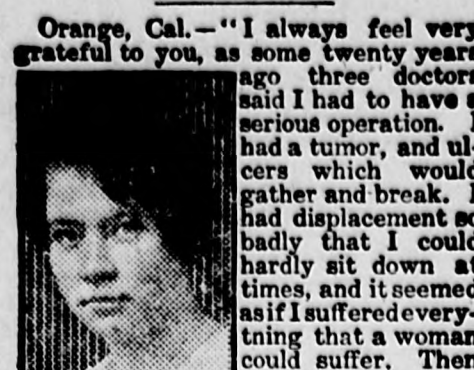

When there are five or six persons in the family and only three keys to the front door some plan must be arranged whereby those who have none can get into the house. The old plan of slipping it under the mat is dangerous, even in the suburbs in these days of robbers.

The newest idea is to vary the location of the key every day. First, it is behind the window ledge, then on top of the door and sometimes underneath a flower pot. Mother fixes the place when it is necessary for her to go out.

The son of the house evolved a code, possessed and carried at all times by members of the family, which tells them where the key is. If the shade in the front window of the living-room is pulled all the way down it means the key is on the ledge; if halfway the key can be found underneath the flower pot, and so on.—New York Sun.

SUFFERED ALL A WOMAN COULD

Mrs. Meyer Finally Found Relief and Health in Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Orange, Cal.—"I always feel very grateful to you, as some twenty years ago three doctors said I had to have a serious operation. I had a tumor, and ulcers which would gather and break. I had displacement so badly that I could hardly sit down at times, and it seemed as if I suffered everything that a woman could suffer. Then someone advised me to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and I took it until I was cured and saved from the operation. I have told women of your wonderful medicine times without number, and I am willing that you should use these facts and my name if you like. I also used your Compound during the Change, and I can do all my own work but the heavy part, and can walk miles every day as I help my husband in the office."

—Mrs. J. H. Meyer, 412 South Orange St., Orange, California.

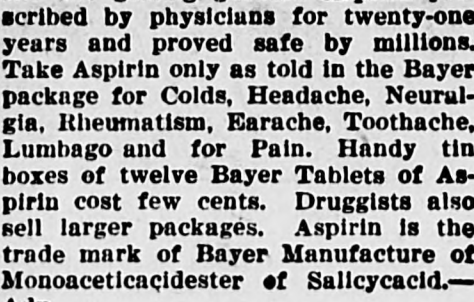

It is quite true that such troubles as Mrs. Meyer had may reach a stage where an operation is the only resource. On the other hand, a great many women have been restored to health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Wonderful Telescope.

The excellence of the big Lick telescope, and the steadiness of the air when the conditions are good on Mount Hamilton, are attested by the statement of one authority that double stars, whose components are nearly equal in brightness, can be measured if the distance between them exceeds one-tenth of a second of arc. What this means in accuracy of definition may be understood by remembering the fact that one-tenth of a second is equal to the apparent diameter of an ordinary pin, viewed by the naked eye at a distance of two miles.

UNLUCKY JIM

By LOTTIE W. SIMMONS.

(© 1921, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

"Jimmie, I do believe you are the unluckiest boy in Greene Centre!" "Wow!" yelled little Jimmie, as Ma poured the liniment over a large cut on a small, fat forefinger.

The four year old dabbed at the tears with a chubby fist. "What did you say I was?" he asked between sobs as he backed toward the door.

"I said you were unlucky," plunging reddened arms into the steaming tub. "You've had more of everything than all the other five put together. Now run along—and do be careful."

"I'm unlucky—I'm unlucky," chanted little Jim a half hour later as he pedaled a worn-out velocipede as fast as his short, fat legs would let him.

Suddenly, off flew the front wheel, and a small, freckled nose ploved a furrow in the dirt. Screams filled the air, and the tired housewife, with hands dripping soapuds, hurried to the scene of disaster.

"Oh, you unlucky Jim!" she sighed, as she picked him up and carried him into the house.

All this happened years before anyone in Greene Centre paid much attention to the law of expectancy. Maybe it didn't make any difference, calling him unlucky from babyhood, expecting ill luck to follow him at every turn, but James at the age of eighteen thought otherwise.

Some New Thought literature had found its way into his hands. James read it and began to think for himself.

He confided his plans to Bob, his chum, and to Sally, his sweetheart. Bob's one ambition in life was to be the village constable, and he couldn't understand anyone wishing to leave Greene Centre. Sally cried a little and swore eternal allegiance to her youthful suitor.

"You'll wait, won't you, Sally?" Jim had said. "I'll surely come back when I have won a fortune."

His mother dried her tears on her apron when Jimmie went away. "If there's any luck in this world for the boy, I hope he finds it," she said to herself as she turned away from the gate. Jimmie got to the station without mishap. As the train steamed away he kept repeating to himself over and over: "I am the luckiest fellow in the world—I am the luckiest fellow in the world."

He was about one hundred miles from Greene Centre when the crash came. Jimmie landed on top, so to speak. It was a terrible wreck, but he had not received a scratch. "You must be lucky, boy," someone said at his elbow.

Jimmie turned to face the speaker. "Yes, I am the luckiest fellow in the world."

The man, who was middle-aged, turned his eyes away, bringing his gaze back presently.

"Where are you bound?" he asked. "Nowhere in particular," replied Jimmie, brisily.

"Want to go along with me—all expenses paid? I need a mascot," with a slow smile.

"Where are you going?" Jimmie's voice was eager.

"To the gold fields."

Jimmie's heart gave a great jump.

"I'll go!" was the quick answer, and the two shook hands.

Ten years later James decided that it was time to go back to Sally. He was rich beyond his wildest dreams; luck had followed him everywhere. He could buy the whole town of Greene Centre if he chose. Yes, it was time to go back. So he bought the most expensive solitaire he could find, and a little plain gold hoop; then rings and things galore. Sally's eyes would have popped out of her head if she could have seen the glittering collection, most of it marked with the letter "S."

Jimmie's motor car was the finest that money could buy, and when he drove into Greene Centre he created a sensation. Stopping abreast the home he got out and walked up the narrow path that led to the front door. A stranger came in response to his knock.

"Does Miss Sally M— live here?" he inquired.

"Oh, no," was the answer. "She married Robert W—, the policeman, years ago, and lives down the road a piece."

Jimmie turned away. So Sally hadn't waited for him after all. Getting into the car he released the brakes and started away, disheartened and chagrined. He had been so sure of Sally.

Robert W— paused on the corner and looked about him leisurely. It was a fine day. Sally had just served him a good dinner of beefsteak and onions and apple pie, and he was at peace with the world. Adjusting his helmet he was about to move on when something attracted his attention. A high-powered motor car, the like of which he had never before beheld in Greene Centre, was coming toward him at a terrific rate of speed. It was now abreast—turning the corner—good heavens! The car had turned turtle!

As Robert reached the wrecked machine a man, apparently unhurt, scrambled out from under it on all fours. Straightening up he looked at the stout policeman and smiled.

"Hello, Bob; great day."

Robert stared for a moment, then a light broke over his face.

"Well, bless my soul! It's Unlucky Jim!"

DEMPSEY'S FAVORITE "RABBIT PUNCH" REGARDED AS ILLEGAL

Is Jack Dempsey a foul fighter? Some say the heavyweight champion is getting a lay with murder when it comes to the technicalities of the game, writes Harry Hochstadter in the Chicago Post.

These certain "some" contend that Jack Dempsey is a great champion, can hit like "sin," and all that, but he would not be half as effective if referees would bar "the rabbit punch." There are many who say that if Dempsey continues to use the rabbit punch he will wake up to find he has been disqualified out of the heavyweight championship of the world.

Infraction of Rules. There is no doubt that the rabbit blow is an infraction of the Marquis of Queensberry rules. Milbourn Saylor used it with great effect for a long while. He scored quite a number of knockouts before his opponents got wise to his trick. Saylor was disqualified for using the rabbit punch in Australia.

For the benefit of those who don't know what the rabbit punch is, we offer the following lucid explanation: "A sock back of the neck with the fist and forearm. Dempsey gets his opponent into position for the rabbit punch with a left hook to the body. This doubles up the victim and then Dempsey steps to the right and lets go back of the neck."

To our own knowledge Jack Dempsey pulled this same stunt against Homer Smith at Racine one night when he won in the first round. He also repeated in his first battle with Bill Brennan at Milwaukee in the second round, when he pulled Bill forward and down, at the same time twisting Bill's ankle.

Punch Not Needed. Dempsey doesn't necessarily have to win all his battles with the rabbit punch. Against Billy Miske the champion just let go blows in any old direction, and they found their mark. Again, when Dempsey won the heavyweight title from Jess Willard at Toledo, Big Jess was so tall and big that Dempsey never had a chance to use the rabbit blow.

PREDICT TRAP SHOOT MARK WILL BE BROKEN

There is every reason to believe that the Grand American Handicap will establish a new trapshooting record for actual number of competitors this year. Interest in the sport is greater than ever before, a fact attested to by the number of shooters that have taken part in the various fixtures that have already been held this season. Last year 714 numrods competed in the Grand American, and it is confidently expected by trapshooting officials that at least 1,000 will bang away at the clay birds this season.

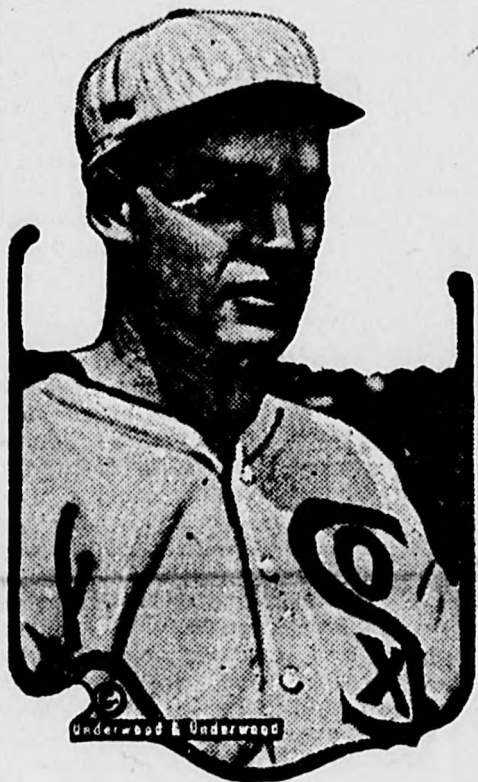

EARL SHEELY CALLED SENSATIONAL PLAYER

Pacific Coast Critic Lauds Big First Sacker.

Never Given Credit While With Salt Lake City for Wonderful Stops Around First Base—Long Legs Makes Him Ideal Target.

Fans in the American league circuit will probably appreciate Earl Sheely, tall first sacker, who is now the property of the White Sox, more than they did on the Pacific coast. Day in and day out, Sheely made stops around first base that bordered on the sensational, but the fans became so accustomed to seeing him in action he seldom received due credit for the stops he was making, writes a critic in the San Francisco Bulletin.

Intercepting throws in the path of the base runner is one of the hardest feats a first baseman is called upon to perform, but in this respect Sheely is without an equal for a right-handed first baseman. His long reach and his ability to switch his feet makes him an ideal target and gives the infielders added confidence. They can cut loose with their throws and rest assured Sheely will stop them if it is within the bounds of possibility.

With a player like Eddie Collins alongside of him, Sheely will not have to cover so much ground, and he can give all of his attention to playing the bag.

Sheely is a good hitter who makes the pitcher put the ball over before he will offer at it, and he ought to hit well enough to insure himself a permanent berth.

INTERESTING SPORT NOTES

Jack Dempsey used to pick peaches. Now he knocks 'em off.

The Montreal Amateur Athletic association has 2,000 members.

Suzanne Lenglen, French woman tennis star, will not compete in this country this summer.

What's in a name? Well, with Zyzsko and Kotsanos there is a beck of a lot of letters.

Fans often ride a boxer for crawling into his shell. But it's expected of a varsity racing crew.

Herb McCracken, star athlete, has been awarded the all-around trophy by the University of Pittsburgh.

Capt. Payne Whitney of the 1898 Yale crew has been in consultation with Coach Nickalls at New Haven.

Mounted police will guard the pari-mutuel betting booths at Canadian race tracks this summer to insure honesty.

One would have more confidence in his whipping Jack Dempsey if he spelled his name "George Carpenter."

Pete Stinchcomb, the Ohio State star halfback, cracked the "Big Six" broad jump record with a leap of 23 feet and 1 inch.

Kotsanos and his championship wrestling ambitions can now sit down—or rather up. Zyzsko put him on his shoulder blades.

BASEBALL STORIES

Many a path that leads to the home plate is paved with bases on balls.

A minor leaguer isn't judged by his association, but by the work he does in it.

Babe Ruth admits he'd rather be a four-ply guy than to hit .700 in mere singles.

St. Louis Americans have released Pitcher Nick Culp to the Louisville A. A. club.

Flagstead is a valuable ball player and can fill in at an infield or outfield position.

Government officials have not yet made any pinches among the millions of baseball dope users.

The Malls arrived in Cleveland this spring. The left-hander has a special delivery stamp on his offerings now.

Chief Poolaw was not good enough for the Southern league, but he is quite a big Indian in the Western association.

Any man who has filled out an income tax blank ought to find the job of figuring a batting average comparatively easy.

Big leaguer scouts will now lie forth to Wilkesbarre, Pa. Harry Williams, high school hurler, pitched a no-hit, no-run game.

Hughie Jennings' size-up of Ty Cobb's Tigers is that they'll finish, one-two-three. Hughie once was considered a good guesser.

The Des Moines club gave Pitcher Glenn Meadows his unconditional release. Pitcher Fred Delbern has been put on the voluntary retired list.

When they hoisted the championship pennant at Cleveland, the first that Cleveland ever had beheld, even the wind paused in curiosity to greet it.

Joplin's rookie outfielder, Gabby Strain, has been going so good that at least one big league scout has made a trip to the Western league to give him a looking over.

Some deep delver into statistics has figured that Eddie Roush this year will draw 25 cents for every step he takes in playing the season out for the Cincinnati club. That means 80,000 steps in 140 or so games.

UNUSUAL BASEBALL RULE

A rule seldom called on was invoked in the game between Giants and Braves on May 2. Burns hit a grounder to Barbare and the Boston man booted it. In his anger he threw his glove at the ball and hit it. Umpire Barry McCormick gave Burns three bases on the hit, which had landed him at first base originally. That scored Barnes from first and gave the batter a triple on what should have been an easy out.

WINTERS IS TEMPERAMENTAL

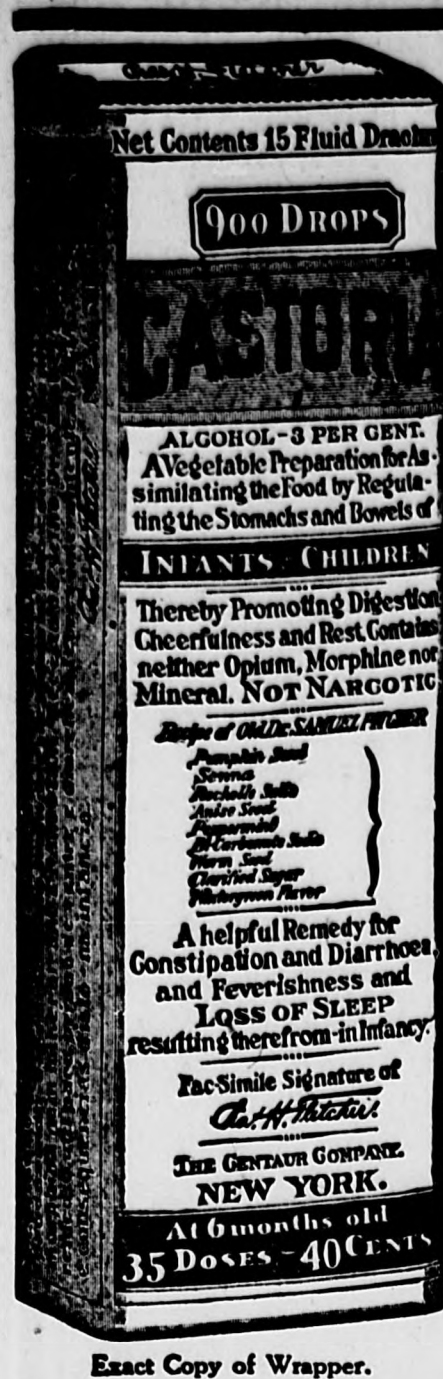

Pitcher Released to Toronto by Giants Must Make Good in International League.

Jesse Winters, released by the Giants to the Toronto club of the International league under an optional agreement, must make good this year or John McGraw will lose interest in him. This fellow has all the stuff necessary to make him a first-class hurler, but for some reason or other, probably because he is very high-strung, he has failed to make good in fast company after an extended trial.

Pitcher Jesse Winters.

Perhaps a year in the minors will steady him and teach him to get the most out of his natural skill in manipulating a ball. Fortunately, Winters has been sent to a club managed by a man who knows his capabilities and his faults thoroughly. Larry Doyle will know how to handle the temperamental Texan, and will aid him more than any other minor league leader could.

Children Cry For Fletcher's CASTORIA

Special Care of Baby.

That Baby should have a bed of its own all are agreed. Yet it is more reasonable for an infant to sleep with grown-ups than to use a man's medicine in an attempt to regulate the delicate organism of that same infant. Either practice is to be shunned. Neither would be tolerated by specialists in children's diseases.

Your Physician will tell you that Baby's medicine must be prepared with even greater care than Baby's food.

A Baby's stomach when in good health is too often disarranged by improper food. Could you for a moment, then, think of giving to your ailing child anything but a medicine especially prepared for Infants and Children? Don't be deceived.

Make a mental note of this:—It is important, Mothers, that you should remember that to function well, the digestive organs of your Baby must receive special care. No Baby is so abnormal that the desired results may be had from the use of medicines primarily prepared for grown-ups.

A clean kitchen lightens each day's work

WHAT a joy it is to work in a kitchen that is easy to keep spick-and-span all of the time! The average housekeeper spends a goodly part of every day in the kitchen. Cleanliness and contentment go hand in hand.

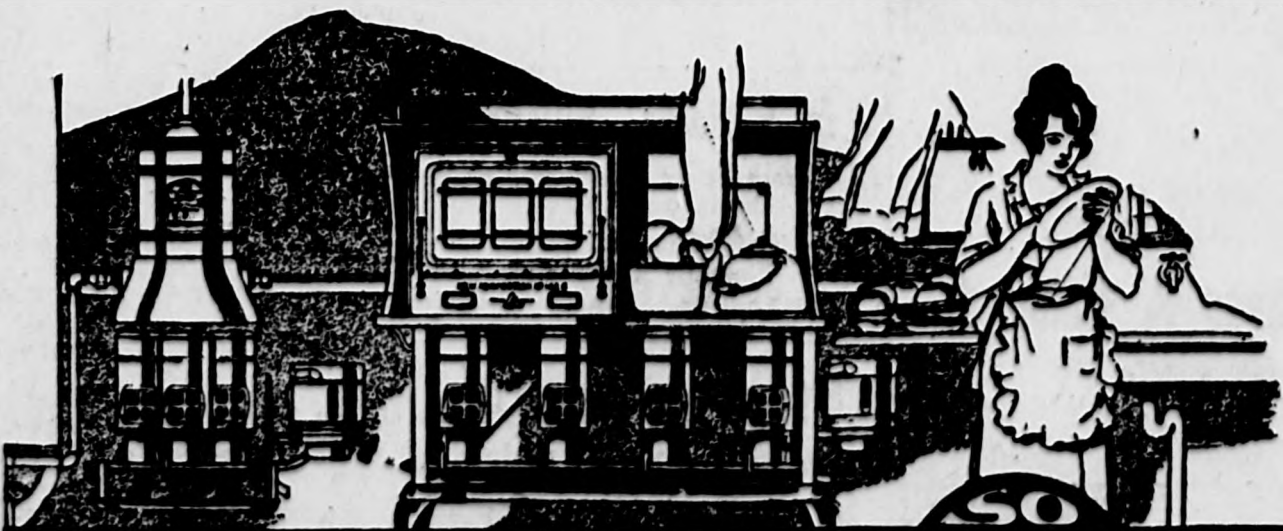

Because of its simple construction, the New Perfection Oil Cook Stove never becomes a collecting corner for dirt. There is no coal or wood to clutter things up, no ashes to take care of. Every part of it can be reached easily with a duster. It stands well up from the floor, you can sweep under it and behind it.

The long, blue chimney conducts all the clean heat from the white-tipped flame directly to the utensils or oven. By using all of its heat to cook with, instead of radiating it about the whole room, the New Perfection makes possible a cool, comfortable kitchen.

You use the New Perfection Oil Cook Stove only when you need it. It is so easy to light and regulate that when you're through cooking, you simply put it out, thus saving much fuel besides keeping the kitchen cool. Over three million are in use today.

The New Perfection Water Heater is another convenience for the housekeeper. Supplies hot water abundantly at a very slight cost. The oil cook stoves are made in two, three and four-burner sizes, with or without warming cabinet; also one-burner stove with no cabinet. Leading dealers everywhere.

WEYMOUTH, JUNE 17, 1921

THE POSTAL ZONE LAW

A bill has been introduced in Congress by Representative Mondell to repeal the postal zone law on second-class mail. The repeal on this law will create a severe deficit in the postoffice department, unless other charges are exacted that will supply the deficiency.

The postal zone law distributes the cost of carrying second-class mail equitably. It stands to reason that it should cost more to transport second-class mail from New York to San Francisco than it does from New York to Chicago. Previous to the passage of this law, one cent per pound carried second-class matter regardless of the distance, enabling publishers of the big periodicals to place their publications in any part of the country at a positive loss to the Postoffice Department. These publishing interests, representing the big national weeklies and monthlies of national circulation and the trade press, would naturally like to see a return of the old flat-rate postage charge.

Nothing has ever been proposed that is so fair to the general public, and to all the various elements of the publishing interests of the nation as the present postal zone law. It divides the burden of cost among those who make the cost, in proportion to the value received. The advertisement that is carried for long distances, pays for long distances; the periodical that carries an unusual percentage of advertising, pays a larger postage cost than the one that carries a small volume of advertising. Each publication pays its part in proportion to what it receives from the Postoffice Department. It is a law that does not favor one class against another class, it treats all alike.

Repeal of the law means the rankiest of discrimination.—Burlington (Iowa) Gazette.

SMITH COLLEGE COMMENCEMENT

The commencement at Smith College began Wednesday, June 8, with the last step sing and ended Tuesday, June 14, with the commencement exercises and the class supper. The commencement speaker was Dr. Roscoe Pound, LL.D., Ph.D., Dean of the Law-school at Harvard.

Among the students from this vicinity to receive the B. A. degree is Katherine Kempl of East Braintree, who has taken an active part in the athletic side of college life. In her freshman year she was a member of the baseball team. She has also been interested in the work of the People's Institute, doing work there as a teacher. At the 1920 Commencement she was a junior usher.

THE POPS

In 1885, when the Boston Symphony Orchestra was four years old, the project was started of a post-winter series of concerts in lighter vein, to suit the time of year. They were called the "Promenade" concerts, after the cafe concerts of Europe, where the audience would stroll up and down in the corridors during the intermissions. But the public soon christened them "The Pops", and the title became so popular that it was officially adopted. This institution of many summers, which other cities have tried to imitate many times without success, is young as well as old, for the musical tastes of 1921 are carefully consulted by Agide Jacchia, the conductor of the Pops, in making his programmes.

PROHIBITION A SUCCESS

Is prohibition a success? Figures they say, will not lie, so we will let figures answer the question. The police records of Boston show that arrests for drunkenness have fallen from 52,692 in 1919 to 16,487 in 1920, a decrease of 32,205; for non-support of wives and families from 862 to 584, a decrease of 278; for larceny from 3117 to 2699, a decrease of 418; for offences against property without violence from 4310 to 3486, a decrease of 824; for offences against property with violence from 716 to 565, a decrease of 151; for manslaughter from 83 to 66, a decrease of 17, and for murder from 24 to 22, a decrease of 2. In every department of crime a decrease is shown. Is prohibition a success? Well, it sure is—Dedham Transcript.

Superstitions Concerning the Kiss

The kiss is a part of numberless superstitions. The Germans believe a charm against lightning is effected by making three crosses before you and kissing the ground. The French kiss the cards before the game begins to bring luck in gambling. Pliny seriously advised a man suffering with toothache to kiss a mule to stop the pain. The Danes believe bad luck is turned away if you kiss the piece of bread you drop on the floor. They also believe it bad luck if the first person you meet in the morning is an old woman; nevertheless you can ward off the consequences by giving her a kiss.

Success is Earned.

There is no easy way to success. The men who get there earn their passage. One who would arrive must pay the price. Truths? Platitudes? Granted. But the fact remains. Success means long hours of labor and little sleep while one is on the way. It means tired eyes and the ache of muscles, struggle to the point of utter exhaustion, patience and unflinching zeal, and a determination that never wavers. It means a perennial refusal to be satisfied with the achievement of today, and a determination to generate a little more steam tomorrow.—Country Gentleman.

Banish Gossip.

The "I have heard," "I have been told," "It has been said to me," "I have been told as a fact" contingent are the main factors of the machinery which keeps the pessimistic report factory in full operation. Let gossip be forced to produce facts, figures and authorities for its assertions, and vague, mischievous assertions will cease.—Exchange.

Arrested for Burglary

A North Weymouth man and East Braintree man were arrested early this morning for alleged burglary at Quincy. Men giving the names of a house E. Godin of 32 Pratt ave., North Weymouth and George C. Russell, of 51 Arborway, East Braintree, were discovered at midnight in the residence of Henry L. Kincaide, of Whitney road, Quincy, by patrolman John J. Casey. The family were away and the officer found the front door unlocked. Upon entering he saw by the aid of a flashlight, several valuables tied up in bundles and upon search discovered the men in a closet on the top floor. With the assistance of Ex-mayor Joseph L. Whitton and other neighbors, he arrested both men; and were arraigned in the Quincy Court today.

A Jumping Horse

Those in vicinity of Washington square, Thursday noon, were interested and surprised spectators as a horse jumping down a flight of stairs between Bloom's Boston Market and H. N. Clark's store, without injury to the animal itself who started on the run and was not caught until it had reached Jonas Perkins school.

The horse hitched to a buggy, standing in the rear of the market, suddenly started, probably by a fall, made a leap up the bank between the stores became detached from the buggy before reaching the top of the stairs then jumped to the sidewalk, the only harm to the stairs was hoof marks near the top, another about half way down and the lowest step that was broken off.

Luckily no one was in the path of this exploit, or it would have caused serious injury to that person.

Sociologists spend a good deal of time discussing delinquent children that should be spent upon delinquent parents.

NEWS REVIEW OF CURRENT EVENTS

Conditions in Upper Silesia and Turkey Discouraging to the Peace Makers.

GREEKS READY FOR DRIVE

France and Germany Negotiating for an Economic Entente—United States and Japan Approaching a Friendly Settlement of All Their Disputes.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD.

Premier Lloyd George, talking to the Welsh Presbyterian general assembly, admits that he is disappointed because, despite the formation of the League of Nations, some of the peoples of the world insist on fighting, and because the spirit of national hatred, greed and pride is as dominant as ever, notwithstanding the lessons of the late war. He says he is still all for the league, but fears that, unless public opinion in all civilized nations is better instructed, the league will become a breeding ground of intrigues and feuds which might lead to the greatest conflict yet witnessed.

Some small nations that have been liberated, says the prime minister, seem to have been rendered fiercer by being chained so long, and they apparently do not fear the interference of the league nor have they any respect for its decisions. In this Lloyd George undoubtedly was alluding to the Poles, and the situation in Upper Silesia justifies his feeling. The German defense forces there decline to let go of the ground they hold and reject the plan for a neutral zone unless it be created in territory which the Poles control. The insurgent Poles, though they have been retiring before the advance of the British troops, are said to be leaving a well armed force of civilians in their wake. Great Britain is blaming France for "continued failure to co-operate" in the restoration of order in Silesia. It is admitted in London that the work of clearing up the plebiscite zone is at a standstill, and Berlin learns that the interallied commission at Oppeln has decided to cease all military operations until the German defense organizations withdraw from the territory east of the Oder, which they recently occupied. Is it any wonder the usually optimistic Lloyd George feels rather despondent?

Moving further east on the world map, one finds equally unpleasant conditions and prospects, both on the Russian border and in Turkey. With the coming of summer soviet Russia has regained its cockiness. In the councils of the leaders, it is reported, Lenin and others who were inclined to relative conservatism were outvoted and Trotsky and his fellow radicals were given their way. If dispatches from that part of the world are to be believed, their way will lead to another great attempt to invade and sovietize the countries on Russia's western borders, and already huge armies are being massed for the enterprise. These troops are well drilled, often by former German officers, and have ample supplies of arms, ammunition and food. Their morale is said to be fair, owing to the care given them and their families by the government.

In what used to be the Turkish empire, both the Turkish nationalists and the Bolsheviks are so active that the allies are becoming alarmed. This is evidenced by the change of their attitude toward the warfare which the Greeks are carrying on against the Turks. King Constantine, who was being left to do the best he could alone, now is receiving some encouragement and indirect aid. The British, for instance, have taken over the Ismid defenses, thus releasing a considerable body of Greek troops to take part in the new offensive which will be launched by the Greeks before long. Also the allies have given the Greeks permission to operate their Brusar front from Gallipoli and to blockade the whole of Asia Minor on the Black sea as far east as Batum. The latter measure has been adopted because of the expectation that the Russians will try to send troops and supplies to the Turks by water. The Bolsheviks have considerable naval forces on the Black sea, and a naval conflict is not unlikely.

The British have notified the Turkish nationalists that if they attempt to capture Constantinople Great Britain will declare war on them.

In the Caucasus region General Budennoy and some of his hard-fighting cavalry units are advancing to the assistance of the Turks, passing through Armenia. King Constantine himself has been in Smyrna and made preparations to go into the battle zone.

Kemal Pasha must defeat the Greeks again in order to retain his leadership of the nationalists, according to stories from Turkey. Enver Pasha is his rival and if he can supplant Kemal he will be given full support by the Russian Bolsheviks, since he has promised to set up a soviet state in Turkey, a thing which Kemal has refused to do.

Over in Siberia matters are still rather confused. The anti-Bolsheviks retain control of Vladivostok, and the soviet Russians are threatening Japan because, they assert, the Japanese troops disarmed the Bolsheviks in the city. This Japan explains by asserting that both parties were disarmed because the Japanese commander would tolerate no fighting in the zone of occupation. The Far East republic of Siberia, with headquarters at Chita, has decided to adhere to the soviet government of Russia.

So much for the warlike aspects. Now for the other side. Two nations that have been deadly enemies, and two that many have feared might become such, are moving toward a friendly adjustment of their differences. The first case is that of France and Germany, and though it may be too much to expect that they soon will love each other, at least it appears they are likely soon to resume amicable business relations. This is the result of a conference at Wiesbaden between M. Loucheur, French minister of liberated regions, and Dr. Walter Rathenau, German minister of reconstruction. Both these men are exceedingly wealthy industrial magnates and they debated for three days over an economic entente between their countries. They finally reached an agreement, for submission to their respective governments, the main points of which are that Germany undertakes, and France permits, the rebuilding of the destroyed areas in France; and that France undertakes to provide the German industrial system with adequate supplies of iron from the Briey basin now occupied by French troops.

Nearly nine-tenths of the iron deposits of the old German empire are in the Briey basin, and the Germans expect, if they can get the ore from there, that their now idle factories in the Ruhr and elsewhere will be reopened and that they will soon be able to fill the markets of the world with goods of German make offered at low prices. This of course would be most painful to British trade, and it is said the prospect of a rapprochement between France and Germany on the terms stated is viewed with alarm in Great Britain.

Diplomatic settlement of the various questions pending between the United States and Japan, without the necessity of submitting any of them to the council of the League of Nations or any other international body, is near at hand, according to Washington dispatches. Secretary of State Hughes and Ambassador Shidehara have been negotiating to this end, treating the disputes as an integral problem. If an agreement is reached, it is understood, the cable privileges on Yap will be internationalized, though Japan may still control the island under her mandate. The basis for settlement of the immigration issue probably will be that of a strict exclusion of the Japanese laboring class and adequate protection for Japanese property rights already acquired in the United States. It is believed Japan will promise to get out of the province of Shantung, China, as soon as practicable. What her attitude may be concerning Siberia and the northern half of Saghalien is not yet known.

The British imperial conference, which is in session in London this week, planned to take up almost the first thing the matter of renewing the Anglo-Japanese treaty. Prime Ministers Smuts of South Africa, Hughes of Australia and Massey of New Zealand all have declared publicly that the pact must not be renewed unless it is agreeable to the United States. Premier Meighan of Canada, if he is in accord with public opinion in the Dominion, will oppose any renewal of the treaty. It is believed in London diplomatic circles that the question may be finally solved by the formation of a Pacific triple entente—Great Britain, the United States and Japan.

The house of representatives, as was expected, adopted the Porter resolution declaring war with Germany and Austria terminated. The vote was 305 to 61, 49 Democrats joining the Republicans on the final roll call. The senate absolutely refused to accept this substitute for the Knox resolution, and the prospects were excellent for a long deadlock in conference. It may well be that such a delay would quite suit the plans of the administration, but President Harding is taking no part in the dispute. The objection of the house to the senate resolution is that to repeat the declaration of war might be taken to mean that congress repudiated the action of the government in entering the war. The senators take the position that the constitutionality of the Porter resolution may be questioned and that this might open the way to ceaseless litigation. They assert that the power of congress to assume the functions of a treaty-making body and declare the war at an end may be open to attack in the courts.

Despite charges that the house bill for regulation of the packing industry was drafted by attorneys for the packers, the senate, by a vote of 37 to 34, substituted that measure for the more drastic bill recommended by the senate committee on agriculture. The house bill vests the secretary of agriculture with authority to administer the measure, while the senate bill creates under the department of agriculture a federal live stock commissioner, appointed by the president and subject to confirmation by the senate, to regulate the packers.

Of more than local interest and importance was the arrest in Chicago of "Big Tim" Murphy, powerful labor leader, and some of his proteges, for implication in a number of big postal robberies there and elsewhere. Confessions of some of the minor figures in the band were followed by recovery of part of the loot. The postal authorities and Department of Justice officers believe the gang which Murphy is accused of directing committed the million-dollar robbery in Toledo last February as well as those in Pullman and at the Polk street station in Chicago.

Roy A. Haynes, the new "mop"—in other words, national prohibition commissioner—is now in office. Though he is rotund and genial to the point of jollity, he declares he will enforce the dry law to the full extent of his power, and he appeals to all good Americans to help him. He has not yet made up his mind concerning the dispensing of real beer for medicinal purposes.

The death roll of the week includes the name of William E. Mason of Chicago, congressman-at-large for Illinois. He had been prominent in political life for many years, and his personal friends were numerous, though he alienated many by his course just before our entry into the war and by his bitter attacks on the draft.

The American Legion elected Maj. John G. Emery of Michigan its national commander to succeed the late Colonel Galbraith. Like his predecessor, he has an excellent war record. He saw much of the fighting in which the American troops participated and was wounded during the Meuse-Argonne drive.

Honey Mentioned in Bible.

There are references to honey in the Bible, in the sacred books of the Hindus and in the Koran. In the Far East new honey has for ages been esteemed as a laxative and old honey as an astringent. Honey was one of the materials which the Egyptians used in embalming, and others of the ancients used it as a food preservative. There was a considerable traffic in bird's eggs and eggs packed in honey were shipped long journeys.

Names Traced to Chinese.

Many names of cities, mountains and rivers in the West, and along the Pacific coast, which have generally been regarded as Indian names, are really of Chinese origin, according to a writer in the New York Herald. Even the names of the state of Utah and Nevada are of Chinese origin, he says. "Pe" or "Pie" means north in Chinese; therefore the Pieute Indians were merely the North Ute Indians.

Ancient Gold Mines.

The oldest gold mines for which we possess literary evidence are the auriferous of Hyperborea (Tibet) in Herodotus; the oldest by inference are the alluvial of India; the oldest by inscriptions and modern survey are the Bisharee alluvial of Egypt, nineteenth century before Christ.

Fire of unknown origin, June 17, destroyed a 560-foot section of the Sauquoit river bridge at the Point of Pines, separating Revere and Lynn, Mass., and only prompt work in opening the draw prevented the entire structure from being burned. The destruction of the bridge in the middle of the summer season and on the morning of a holiday is a severe blow to motorists.

"The farmer's greatest need now is to provide his own marketing system and credit institutions," said Senator E. F. Ladd of North Dakota in a warning to the 89 graduates of the two-year course at the Massachusetts Agricultural College, Amherst, against the danger to agriculture from landlords and financiers. It would be a sad condition, he said, for farms to be controlled by landlords "who will sink lower and lower in the scale of intelligence."

Mrs. Frank A. Lohmann Wrentham, Mass., had an experience recently which she is not likely to forget for some time. Mrs. Lohmann was startled at the suddenness of the attack, but managed to seize the bird by the leg. In the meantime receiving several sharp thrusts from the hawk on her arm and hand. The vote at the conclusion was 50 for the motion and 253 against it.

BOSTON PRODUCE MARKET

Week Ending June 18, 1921

(Prepared by the United States Bureau of Markets.)

Fruits and Vegetables

Green vegetables of all kinds were in abundant supply this week. With the exception of spinach, practically no leading line advanced in price, while cantaloupes, lettuce, new potatoes and tomatoes were among the commodities which were distinctly lower.

Native asparagus declined $1.00 to a range of $4.00-$6.00 a bushel box. Native bunched beets were 50c-75c lower at $1.00-$1.25 a bushel, while bunched carrots were steady at $2.00-$2.50.

Arrivals of more than 35 cars of string beans were reported, mostly from Maryland and Virginia, and prices lost more than half. Baltimore wax beans in bushel hampers closing at $1.75-$2.00 and green at $1.50-$1.75, while Norfolk green beans in 5 peck hampers, which sold last week for $3.50-$5.00, closed this week at $1.25-$1.75.

Native hothouse cucumbers were $2.00 lower at $2.50-$3.50 a bushel. Lettuce prices dropped one-half, closing at 10c-25c a bushel.

California Bermuda onions were slightly lower at $1.50-$1.85 a bushel crate. New potatoes from Virginia were 1.00-$1.25 lower at $3.00-$3.75 a barrel, while old potatoes from Maine held steady at 75c-90c per 100 pound bag.

Tomatoes were considerably lower, Florida stock selling $2.00-$3.50 a crate, while Mississippi in 4 basket crates sold $1.25-$1.75. New spinach was in good demand and slightly higher at 40c-55c a bushel. Florida watermelons were lower, selling 40c-75c each for melons averaging 22 to 30 pounds.

Dairy and Poultry Products

The Boston market is generally considered as following the lead of other large centers such as New York and Chicago, but this week it has gone its own way, and prices for many products are out of line with those in other distributing centers, a condition which may result in some sharp changes in the future.

The local butter market has led the country the past week, prices here staying a full cent over the others, and over last week's prices. Supplies have been light, many have been storing fine grades for contracts and next winter's needs.

But buyers have had hard work to find fancy quality for use. The fine 90-92 score has sold up to 33c-34c, and is fairly steady at the close. Undergrades have also sold better. Jobbers anticipating wants for cooking butter during the summer season. Dry butter which has sold hard all year, has at last shown improvement, and is also higher at 18c-25c.

Egg producing sections have been through considerable hot weather recently, and this has shown in the quality of eggs arriving. Buyers have had difficulty in securing really fine eggs, and the increased demand for them has forced prices up 1c to 2c. Nearby henry eggs have been diverted to local use, and the few on the market have readily brought 28c-40c. Western eggmen have sold up, 33c to 40c being about the usual range. Ordinary western eggs selling better, and these showing 14-2c higher, as well.

Country cheese markets have been irregular this week, but no marked change has occurred. Local prices have shown increased firmness on fancy New York state Twins to store for next winter, these about 4c higher at 16c-18c. Small styles, American and Leaf cheese, easier with heavy supplies, prices generally 17c-19c.

The lower prices for poultry that dealers have been expecting have shown up lately, and with increased arrivals, all kinds have had to go lower. A few fancy large broilers for summer hotel trade have held steady around 50c, but small sizes have dropped to 45c. Fowl have sold off daily, large birds going from 35c to 40c, and small from 25c-34c at the close. While the four pound size has dropped to 28c-31c. Live fowl have held steady over the Jewish holiday, but are now declining with most of the sales at 30c-33c. Broilers also easy at 40c-45c and roosters weak at 15c-20c.

Boston health department inspectors, raided nine meat markets and a delivery wagon in the Grove Hall section of Roxbury and seized 1819 1-2 pounds of poultry that, contrary to health regulations, had not been properly plucked. In eight of the nine stores they found alleged unsanitary conditions that included floors littered with feathers, blood and dirty sawdust.

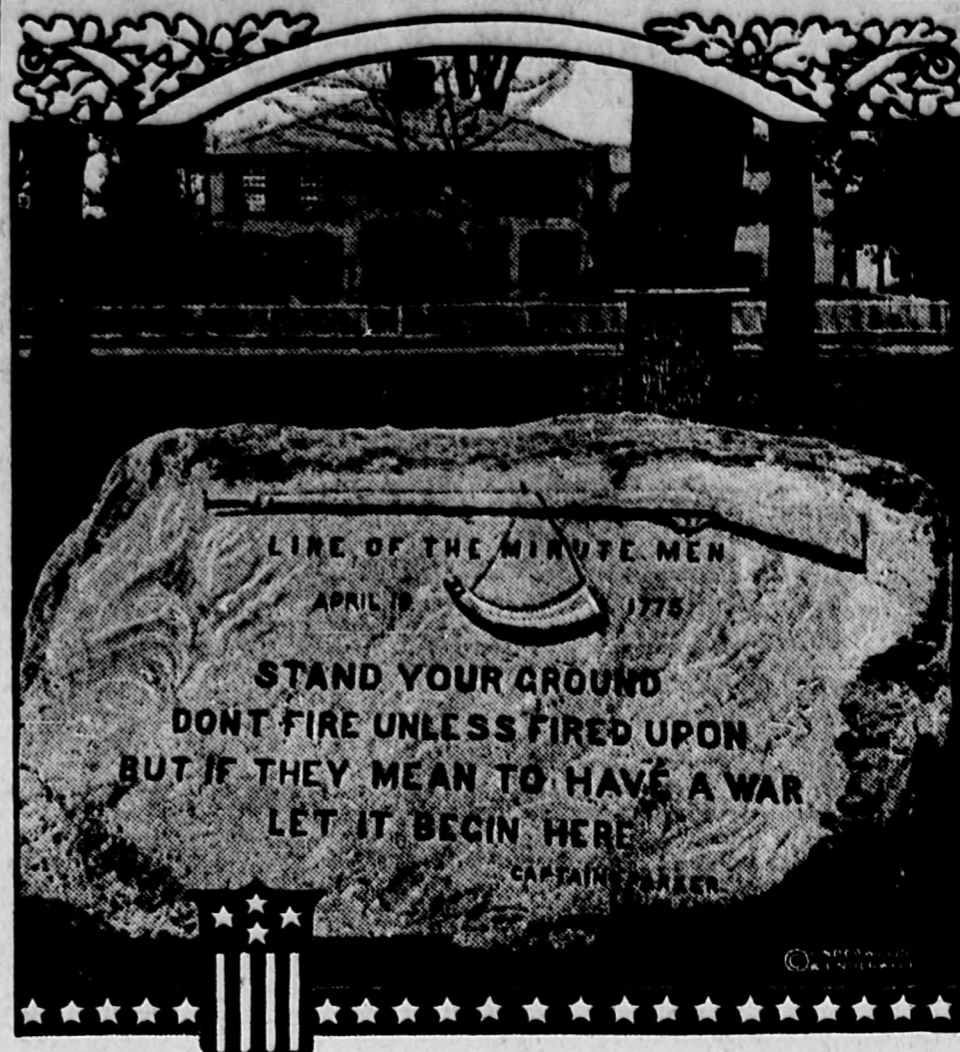

The first regular meeting of the Massachusetts Disabled Veterans of the World War was held in Boston last week. Officers were elected as follows: President, William H. Burns, vice-president, John J. McGowan; treasurer, Michael F. Hourihan; financial secretary, J. J. Sheehan; recording secretary, Joseph F. Spillivan; executive committee, John J. Finnerty, and William R. Flynn.

Polled in the attempt to reach the jewel room of the Morgan Memorial, Hartford, Conn., burglars stole two chests of antique lace valued at about $4000. The building, which is one of the most beautiful in New England, was erected by J. P. Morgan to honor the memory of his father, Junius Spencer Morgan, and in addition to U. S. Steel preferred stock, given for its maintenance, stocked it richly with valuable art treasures.

Officers and delegates of the Maine State Federation of Labor, were reminded by President Joseph O. Poulis at the opening of their annual convention in Portland that it is one of the most important ever held by that organization. "The antagonism directed at the trade union movement," he said in his annual address, "must be met by the organized workers of our state in a manner that will reflect credit to us. Many propositions will be presented to us during the sessions of this convention that should receive our closest attention."

"Death by suicide" was the verdict on the body of a collie dog, owned by Albert Rhodes of South Williamstown, Mass., which was found swinging from the hay mow in his barn. The selectmen had suspected the animal of being one of the pack which has been harassing the sheep in that vicinity, and its owner had been told to keep it tied. The dog died by jumping from the second floor where it had been kept with a rope around its neck.

LIBERTY'S DEADLINE

In the spring of 1775 General Gage was informed that the Colonists had deposited a large quantity of munitions of war at Concord, a village some 16 miles outside of Boston, and he planned a secret expedition to seize them. The alert and wary Colonists heard of his plan, however, and through the immortal ride of Paul Revere the whole countryside was alarmed. When Major Pitcairn, with some 800 men, (the advance guard of the British) arrived at Lexington on their way to Concord, they were met on the village green by about seventy determined men under Capt. Jonas Parker. The British ordered them to disperse, and when they refused to do so, fired upon them, killing eight and wounding a number of others. This began the Revolutionary war.

British Officers Corrupt

A valuable contribution to the New York records of the Revolutionary war appears in the latest volume of the collections of the New York Historical society. It contains the hitherto unpublished records of an investigation into the great increase in war expenditures incurred by the British army in New York city from May, 1778, when Sir Henry Clinton succeeded Gen. William Howe in command. The vouchers of the quartermaster's, commissary's, and other departments showed that from May 26, 1778, to December 31, 1780, the expense of maintaining the army had exceeded by over $2,000,000 the expense under General Howe's command from December 31, 1775, to May 16, 1778, a period of two months' shorter duration.

The expense under General Howe was $1,079,412; under General Clinton $3,278,429. Rating the pound at $2.50, which was then its currency value, the increase represents about $5,500,000.

The original volume is in manuscript, in one handwriting, containing copies of all the papers and letters submitted to the board of general officers appointed by General Clinton on August 7, 1781, to inquire into the expense accounts. It is evidently the copy prepared for Clinton himself. The original letters, if in existence, are probably buried in the British army records. The volume was discovered in London by an old book dealer several years ago, and was purchased by a former president of the New York Historical society for presentation to its library.

The documents cover the period from August to December, 1781. In contrast to the miserable results that the British army could show to the home office, this great expenditure had alarmed the commissioners of his majesty's treasury, and Clinton's commissioner of accounts, Major Drummond, admits in one of his letters having been requested from London to curtail all improper charges, as an examination into the extraordinary expenditures for the American war was under consideration.

For the British the period covered by the investigation in New York was the most depressing of the war. Andre had been executed in the fall of the preceding year. The Carolinas, through the brilliant campaigns of General Greene, had been recovered to the American cause. Cornwallis had succeeded in getting himself trapped at Yorktown, and on October 19, 1781, his army surrendered to Washington.

No mention of this event, which took place during the investigation, is made, but among the list of British officers in New York appears the name of Brig. Gen. Benedict Arnold. He is mentioned two or three times in the list enumerating the number of horses and wagons detailed to the officers and regiments of the army. These detailed lists enhance the local interests of the volume, as they give an accurate record of the number of men, women and children in the British and Hessian regiments, the muster roll of all the assistants, drivers, carpenters, artificers, and other workmen employed in the different departments, in addition to a complete list of all the vessels used by the army, with their masters' names, tonnage, and the use to which each was put.

These shipping lists do not include the regular ships of the line in the navy, but the boats actively contributing to the maintenance of the army include over 60 craft, from small horse and provision boats to several armed brigs and sloops and the prison ship Falmouth.

That those in charge of the government pursestrings had manipulated the expenditures for personal gain is a matter of history, and grafting, to use no harsher term, in the quartermaster's, commissary's and barrack master's departments, had been prevalent from the very day that the British set foot upon Manhattan island.

Thomas Jones, who was judge of the New York Supreme court before the Revolution, and who suffered from both sides during the war, although an ardent loyalist, criticizes the financial management of the British army severely in his "History of New York During the Revolution." He does not mince matters in describing the peculations of the quartermaster generals in New York under Howe and Clinton and the wealth they carried back to England.

TELLS OF HISTORIC OCCASION

Christopher Marshall's Account of Reading of the Declaration of Independence in Philadelphia.

There are three or four contemporary accounts of the first public reading of the Declaration of Independence, none of them very full of particulars and all of them lacking in agreement on some points. One of the best accounts is that of Christopher Marshall, who was a member of the committee on safety and who was in an official position in Philadelphia. This brief record of that historic occasion will be found in his "Remembrancer." He writes: "Warm sunshiny morning. At eleven went and met the committee of inspection at the Philosophical hall; went there in a body to the lodge; joined the committee of safety (as called); went in a body to the state house yard, where in the presence of a great concourse of people the Declaration of Independence was read by John Nixon. The company declared their approbation by three repeated huzzas. The king's arms were taken down in the courtroom, state house, at the same time. . . . This day the eight members for this county to serve in convention were elected very quietly at the state house. Fine, starlight, ringing bells, with other great demonstrations of joy upon the unanimity and agreement of the Declaration."

The Nation's Day.

'Tis the day when the grandest proclaiming was made
Which ever this world did awaken
To the right and the might of humanity's self.
That fate from long years
had forsaken.
Then on this day, Liberty's birthday, resolve
That no'er from its birthright we'll sever,
But stand by the nation, the freest on earth,
And its star-spangled banner forever!

Wednesday evening Mr. and Mrs. James A. Melville were given a surprise party at their home, 55 Evans road, North Weymouth, when 50 relatives and friends took possession of the home and tendered the couple a reception in honor of their 15th wedding anniversary. The affair was arranged and managed by their daughter, Miss Orelly C. Melville. Mr. and Mrs. Melville were attending a band concert when they received word that they were needed at home immediately. It was a genuine surprise when they reached home to find the house in possession of friends, who had come bringing best wishes and tokens of regard. There was an entertainment consisting of soprano solos by Miss Anna Austin, baritone songs by Arnold Rothwell, readings by Miss Greta Garfield, piano selections by Miss Gertrude Colley and cello solos by Miss Orelly Melville. Refreshments were served.

Miss Helen Louise Prescott and Miss Edith A. Arnold of Braintree received degrees of bachelor of science at Jackson college this week.

Miss Elizabeth C. Hall of North Weymouth was graduated from Radcliffe college this week with the degree of bachelor of arts.

S. OF V. AUXILIARY It was pleasing to know that the caterers, Day & Co., had sufficient food for the comrades of the G. A. R. and others.

The Auxiliary appreciate the kindness of the Universalist church people for the settees, and the Pilgrim church for the privilege of using water.

Comrades "Bill" Moran and "Bill" Litchfield tried hitting "Mr. Black" in the canvas. Comrade Litchfield was the winner, amid loud applause.

Comrade Litchfield won 10 pounds of sugar from the auxiliary table.

The above was cut up and sold in lots of 5000 feet. A large crowd attended the sale. Prizes were given to the best looking babies in a baby beauty contest. William A. TO MOTOR TO PACIFIC Good luck to Parker T. Pearson and Prescott Brown, who left yesterday by automobile for the Pacific coast.

Their friends say they little realize what they are up against, but they have courage and others have made the trip why not Messrs. Pearson and Brown? Mr. Pearson has for several years been superintendent of schools in Weymouth, and Mr. Brown is teacher of English history at Weymouth High school. The route includes Niagara Falls, Buffalo, Cleveland, Toledo, Chicago, Omaha, Des Moines, Cheyenne, Pikes Peak, Denver, Salt Lake City, Lake Tahoe, Yosemite National Park, Portland, Ore., and on the return, a trip up the Columbia river, thence to Yellowstone National Park and home.

However, Supt. Pearson says that wherever he may be about July 25 he will turn homeward, as he intends to reach Weymouth about Aug. 25. He has figured out that he must average 100 miles per day. The trip is made in Mr. Pearson's Ford, which has already done him good service.

LOVELL'S CORNER Mr. and Mrs. Charles White were the guests Sunday of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Buckley of Milton.

The Ever-Progressive class will be entertained next Tuesday evening at the home of Miss Nellie Brewster.

Mr. and Mrs. James Rabelano are the parents of a son, Joseph, born June 18.

Mrs. Rhoda Jennings of Lynn is the guest of her sister, Mrs. Charles Leach.

The Lo-Co-Yo-fo club will meet in the Community Building for their business meeting Friday evening, June 24.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter Fish and children of Attleboro were the weekend guests at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Turner.

Mrs. Tobey and daughter Mabel of South Braintree have been guests at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Maynard.

Mrs. Arthur S. Emig of Epping, New Hampshire, was the guest Monday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. James B. Smith.

Master Edward Martin left last week for Cape Britain, Nova Scotia, where he will spend the summer at the home of his uncle, John MacDonaid.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Rea, Mr. and Mrs. Bowdoin Smith, Mr. and Mrs. David Hughes and Roland Smith motored to Amherst last Saturday to attend the wedding of Rev. Julian Rea and Miss Mary Porter, returning home Sunday.

At the regular meeting of the Improvement Association on Tuesday evening it was voted to suspend the meetings for July and August and a committee was appointed to plan an "outing" in place of them.

LAKE SHORE PARK The Lake Shore Park Improvement Association will hold a meeting on the tennis court on Friday evening July 1, at 8 o'clock. All members and those residing in the Park, who are not members, are cordially invited.

One of the pretty sights at present in the park is the beautiful bed of roses about the Swift's cottage.

The association is planning to hold a minstrel show on the tennis court on the evening of the Fourth of July.

Miss Anna McCusker has returned to the park for the summer and is enjoying a much needed rest.

Mrs. Helen Hutton has joined the army of Rebekahs, being now a member of Steadfast lodge of East Weymouth.

Mrs. J. W. Phillips is visiting her sister, Mrs. Hiltz for ten days and returns to New York on Monday next.

Lake Shore Park has received in the Boston papers some unwelcome publicity this week, but the events recorded are not general and will not be encouraged.

Three young men from this town were graduated this week from the Northeastern College of the Boston Y. M. C. A.—Norman E. Dizer of East Weymouth, who completed the school of commerce and finance in three years; Edward White Fearing of South Weymouth and Walter C. Richards of Weymouth, who were in the school of engineering.

JUST A WORD

Editor Gazette-Transcript: The undersigned would like to say a word in relation to Article 12 in the Town Warrant to be acted upon at town meeting this evening.

This article is designed to prevent the use or occupancy of camps or bungalow for any purpose except their use as housing private families. Weymouth folks are undoubtedly acquainted with the conditions that have prevailed on or about Seaver road and the State road abutting Whitman's pond.

This act is to be framed and drawn in such a way to give the town a supervision more directly over these various summer communities, and it must be drawn in such a way as not to preclude the use of dwellings for any legitimate and proper use that they may be and must be just and it must be distinctly understood it is not desired to prevent a good and proper occupancy by the various clubs, lodges, associations as now may be found in various parts of the town.

The police protection has not properly cared for this nuisance. One bungalow occupied as a club has driven away family after family until the only purpose that these camps were suitable for was the further occupancy of more clubs. This is the condition we desire to cure by this act and we want it distinctly understood that we do not want to prevent proper occupancy of any other house in Weymouth.

The act can be framed I believe to be entirely constitutional and it will have a tendency to keep these communities about Whitman's pond desirable and nice. The townspeople probably do not realize the extent of the building that has been going on around this pond in the last four or five years.

There now is undoubtedly a quarter of a million dollars' worth of property all occupied by desirable private families. For the last two years the writer has placed restrictions in agreements and deeds precluding the use of the camps, buildings, etc., for clubs, but this is not sufficient because on the sale of the premises I cannot entirely control the same, so this act is bound to be a big help in keeping the sections desirable.

BACK TO THE K. P. DUTIES

Louisville, Ky., Legion Men Respond to Appeal From Housekeepers for Housecleaning Helpers.

An alarming shortage of domestics faced the housewives of Louisville, Ky., when they began their spring housecleaning recently. Unable to do all the scrubbing, window washing, carpet beating and sweeping themselves, with the maids of ante-bellum days continuing their work in mills and factories, the Louisville women feared that their city would not be spick and span for Derby day. Then the American Legion posts of the city came to their rescue.

"All you former kitchen police; here's a chance to ply your honorable calling, with pay and with a housewife in charge of the detail," read the Legion's announcement to unemployed ex-service men. They responded in platoons and squads, doughboys, gobs and gyrenes, each reciting his record with the broom and mop. The housewives made a rush for them. The plan is being adopted in several cities nearby with entire satisfaction to the employers and employed.

HOPES TO SERVE UNCLE SAM

Captain Griffith, Late of His Majesty's Air Forces, Seeks Further Thrills.

It will take an act of congress to get him into the air service of the United States navy, but Capt. John S. Griffith, Seattle, Wash., late of his majesty's air forces and wearer of five decorations, is hopeful that Uncle Sam will accept him. Too young to enter the American army, Captain Griffith left a high school in Seattle to enlist in the royal flying corps at Toronto, Canada. He served through four years of fighting and is officially credited with having shot down nine German airplanes and two balloons. He received the British Distinguished Flying Cross and four Russian decorations.

In the Archangel sector, Captain Griffith, flying for the British, fought the Bolsheviks with such success that they set a price of 15,000 rubles on his head. All the wars having ceased, he was sent to Egypt. Seattle post of the American Legion, which Captain Griffith joined immediately upon his return to his native land, are helping him in his effort to have congress so legislate that he may find an occasional thrill in the naval flying squadrons of America.

GATHERS IN THE RECRUITS

Captain of Wives' and Sisters' Team Obtains Many Kansas Auxiliary Members.

Wives and sisters defeated mothers of American Legion members in obtaining recruits for the Legion's Women's auxiliary in Pratt, Kan. Mrs. Myron Glaser, captain of the wives and sisters, unassisted, persuaded 28 women to sign on the dotted line. Mrs. Glaser is a charter member of Pratt unit of the auxiliary which was founded last January. It has a membership of 67 and promises to be one of the most active in the state of Kansas.

LEGION MAN OBTAINS PATENT

Twice Wounded, Engineer While Confined to Hospital, Works Out Bronze Tablet.

Wounded by the explosion of a high explosive shell in the Vosges mountains, Private R. G. Quehl, 318th Engineers, lay on a hard cot in a hospital and wondered about his chances of getting home. He recovered, however, went into action, and on November 2, was again wounded.

Brought back to America and placed in the base hospital at Camp Lewis, Wash., Quehl worked out the details for a bronze memorial tablet. While awaiting his discharge he drew up the plans, and in civilian life again, he has obtained a patent on an invention which he calls the individual war memorial.

It is a plaque of bronze with the figure of a private in war uniform. Around the plaque in raised letters are the names of the allied countries. A plate to be engraved with the service record is in the center. Orders are pouring in so rapidly that he has been forced to enlarge his working force.

SHOULD FILE CLAIM AT ONCE

Disability Demands Required on War Risk Insurance Forms to Gain Attention.

"If you have a disability which you feel is due to your military or naval service during the war, you should as a matter of duty to yourself and your country immediately file a claim for disability," reads an article in the American Legion Weekly.

"To make the claim, obtain from your local post, the National Service Division of the Legion, or the Bureau of War Risk Insurance the following forms: Numbers 528, 539 and 545. In addition, make a detailed statement of your condition and occupation prior to service, injury or sickness during service, where treated, and physical condition since discharge. Obtain a like statement from one or more persons who were with you and knew of your disability during service. Get a statement also from one or two persons who have known you since discharge, particularly your employers and other disinterested persons.

"Last and most important, get statements from all the doctors who treated your case and from the hospitals where you were confined. These must all be sworn to before a notary public and forwarded to the Bureau of War Risk Insurance, where, after consideration of your health record, your military record and your present condition, an award should either be made or disallowed.

"If you are among the 100,000 whose claims are hanging fire, the National Service Division of the American Legion will make it its personal business to get a decision on your claim."

THE U. S. USCO TREAD

Here is the U. S. Usco Tread, with a long-established standard of service among motorists who have an eye to value, as well as to price. While selling for less than the other tires in the U. S. Fabric line, the Usco has earned a reputation for quality and dependable economy which is not exceeded by any tire in its class.

"Fresh, live U. S. Tires come direct to the dealer from his neighboring Factory Branch."

Which one of your neighbors gets the best mileage out of his tires?

EVERY once in a while you hear a motorist say as he kicks a rear tire with an admiring foot, "there's a lucky tire!" Give him a chance and he'll tell you all about it. And then you'll find that what he calls "luck" is simply his first experience with a quality standard tire.

It all comes to this—buy a U. S. Tire anywhere in this country and you get definite, predictable value for your money no matter what weight car you drive.

The man who has been guessing his way through "overstocks," "discontinued lines," "job lots" and the like, will find it refreshing to talk with the local U. S. Tire dealer who is concentrating on a full, completely sized line of U. S. Tires.

For the first time he will hear some straight quality tire facts—and get the difference between chance and certainty in tire buying.

The U. S. Tires he sees in stock are fresh, live tires. They come direct to the dealer from his neighboring Factory Branch.

There are 92 of these Branches established and maintained by the U. S. Tire makers.

TOWN BUILT ON GREAT ROCK

Anconia, in Mexico, Surely Has Site Such as No Other Place on Earth Can Boast.

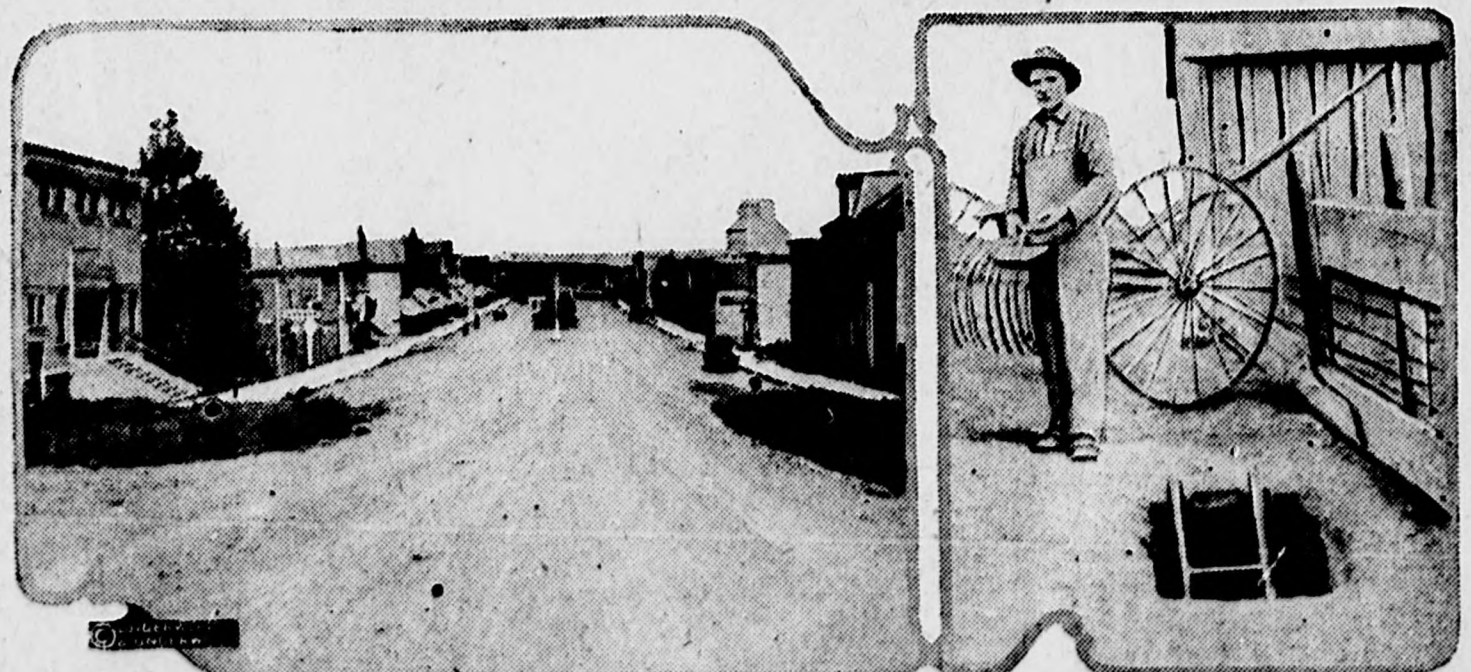

To live on top of a mushroom would be a peculiar sensation. If the mushroom were of gigantic proportions and were planted so as to overhang the sea, the experience would be very similar to that of living in the town of Anconia, which is three miles south of the Mesa Escalada in Mexico, says the Christian Science Monitor. The strange mushroom-like rock on which the town stands is a splendid specimen of fantastic erosion, having overhanging sides nearly 400 feet high. The top of the rock is comparatively level, and is about 70 acres in extent. It is notched with dizzy chasms. The greater portion of it overhangs the sea like an immense mushroom, and the oddest thing is that it should have a town at the top.

Now, this town pertains to a past civilization. It is one of the most perfect specimens of the pre-historic Puebloan architecture. With inconceivable labor this town in the air was built and fortified for the safety of its inhabitants. It was reached by a mere trail of toe-holes up the stem of the mushroom. The age of the town is not known, but it was already old in 1540, when the first explorers visited it.

Royal Speech in Second Place.

It is popularly supposed that a new session of the British parliament begins with the king's speech, but in reality this is not so. Preceding the speech from the throne a "dummy" bill is always presented for first reading—a little fiction carefully preserved in order to assert the independence of parliament, in the belief that to turn at once to the speech might suggest a too-eager preoccupation with his majesty's words.

Iowa Town May Become Another Klondike

A few weeks ago Bernard Smith, a farmer living one mile southeast of Graettinger, Ia., was digging a hole to set a guy wire through a layer of from 6 to 8 inches of dark-colored gravel. He could see the glistening of mica and was positive the layer contained gold. He rushed some of the gravel to Des Moines and Chicago, and the assay report showed that the gravel will run $26.92 per ton, $21.50 being in gold. Since then there has been a great rush of gold hunters to Graettinger, and the place promises to become another Klondike. The illustration shows the main street of the town and, at the right, Mr. Smith at the hole where he found the gold.

I was teaching a class of senior boys and girls in high school. One boy annoyed me a great deal by putting his arm around the boy next to him and lopping over in a spineless fashion. Filmy Frocks for Graduates

DESIGNERS have succeeded in writing "youth" into all the lovely frocks designed for this year's graduates. They have chosen filmy fabrics and made them up in styles that are as dainty as the flowers of spring, and these same flowers are made much of in their decoration. In fabrics of organdy is a long way in the lead of a list that includes net (plain and dotted) in silk or cotton, fine voile, lace, swiss, crepe-de-chine and other crepes. One reason for the success of organdy is that it provides its own trimmings. Frills, ruchings, flowers, petals and other decorations made of it are not outlived by any other kind of ornament. Tucks and hemstitching are suited to it and it makes the most buoyant and youthful of sashes. The graduation frock pictured is an example of its translation into just the right character of dress for the young maid. In this frock narrow tucks and val lace edging make a setting for embroidered daisies dones in mercerized floss, with white petals and yellow centers. Daisies made of white organdy are set about the girdle of another pretty frock and on a model having a long tunic made up of several panels, they appear, embroidered in white and yellow, at the bottom of each panel. Strips of organdy picoté on the edges are gathered along the center to four ruchings that edge the panels.

Organdy frocks have wide hems often cut in shallow scallops at the top and headed with frills. These frills, with picot edges, are used alone for decorating many frocks and often placed in festoons running in parallel rows on the skirt and bodice. Wide, hemstitched tucks or narrower ones edged with narrow lace are perhaps the best liked of all decorative features. Nearly all net dresses are tucked and the tucks bordered with narrow satin ribbon stitched to their edges, or with narrow lace.

Frolic Frocks Are Afield

BEGINNING at two years old, to wear amusing little bloomers, the modern maid progresses through her frolicsome years, up to her fifteenth birthday, in clothes that invite her to vie with her brothers in strenuous play. Until she is five at least waists, with peg top or other bloomers buttoned to them, made of strong materials, give her all the freedom she needs. Frocks to be worn over the bloomers need not be reckoned with before her sixth year, unless they are a matter of personal preference on the part of her mother.

Frolic suits are made of plain chambray, satin and of heavier cottons, of small plaid and checked ginghams and of sturdy white cottons. Medium and dark blues—including navy—medium and dark greens, light purple, browns and yellows in the plain weaves, and the popular colors. In checked ginghams a color with white are favored and in small plaids several light colors are combined. The bloomers are plain, full and knee-length, the frocks usually cut with kimono sleeves. Nothing is so popular for the sparingly-used decorations

Mushrooms and some other fungous growths are highly prized as articles of food by many people. The nutritive value of mushrooms is low, but they may be prepared in various ways which render them delicious. More people doubtless would seek wild mushrooms and other fungi if they were sufficiently informed to distinguish between the edible and the deadly poisonous growths. Some very erratic and dangerous ideas concerning ways of telling the edible from the poisonous growths are altogether too commonly believed. Mushrooms are frequently thought of as edible and toadstools as poisonous. As a matter of fact, the United States Department of Agriculture states, the words "mushroom" and "toadstool" are used indiscriminately and do not indicate whether the plants are edible or poisonous.

Silver Coin Test Is Valueless.

A test for poisonous mushrooms often recommended is based on the belief that if a silver coin placed in the utensil in which mushrooms are cooked tarnishes, the mushrooms are poisonous. Absolutely no reliance can be placed on this test, as both poisonous and edible kinds may turn silver dark. Equally baseless is the belief that a mushroom is shown to be edible if the skin can be peeled from the cap readily, because peeling is possible with many poisonous species.

The notion that soaking or boiling poisonous mushrooms in salt water will render them harmless has no foundation, in fact. Some people have thought that the presence of insects on mushrooms is a proof of their edibility. This is a dangerous supposition, because insects infest the most poisonous as well as the best edible species of fungi.

The collector of mushrooms cannot depend upon any simple test. If he intends to use them for food, he must know what he is gathering. It is a comparatively simple matter to learn to recognize a few kinds of deadly mushrooms and certain edible ones. If he will gather only the kinds that are well known to him, a careful collector need not be afraid to gather wild fungi for food. He should not be misled by attractive colors or pleasant odors. In Farmer's Bulletin 796, Some Common and Poisonous Mushrooms, directions for identifying the poisonous and edible kinds are given.

Recipes for Cooking Mushrooms.

According to the views of many persons, mushrooms are best cooked simply, with no seasoning but butter, pepper, and salt. The addition of various other seasonings impairs the delicate mushroom flavor. However, tastes differ, and the opportunity of choice or experiment is afforded by the recipes which follow:

The caps should be carefully washed, gill side down, but peeling is not always necessary and involves a considerable waste of time and loss of flavor. Unless the stems are extremely tough they can be used after being cut into small bits and stewed, or, even if tough, after long boiling they can be run through a sieve and made into a soup or sauce.

Wild mushrooms should be cooked soon after collecting, as they are then preserved much better than if kept uncooked, even in a refrigerator.

Fried Mushrooms.

Beat the yolk of an egg with a tablespoonful of water and season with pepper and salt. Dip each cap in this and then dip into fine cracker crumbs or corn meal. Have butter or cooking oil very hot in a frying pan. Fry slowly on each side for five minutes. A sauce can be made by thickening with flour and adding milk or cream. If desired, serve on toast. A smooth tomato sauce is also excellent.

Mushrooms Baked With Tomatoes.

In a baking dish arrange small round slices of buttered toast; upon each place a rather thin slice of peeled tomato, salted and peppered; upon each slice of tomato place a fine, thick mushroom, gill side up; in the center of each mushroom put a generous piece of butter; season with pepper and salt. Cover the dish and bake in a hot oven for ten minutes; then uncover and bake for an additional 5 to 10 minutes, as the mushrooms appear to require.

Creamed Mushrooms.

Cut the mushrooms into small pieces, stew slowly in butter until tender, add cream or milk, pepper, and salt, and thicken with flour.

Peppers Stuffed With Mushrooms.

Cut the stem end of the peppers and carefully remove all seeds and the white membrane; chop or break the mushrooms into small pieces, season with pepper and salt, press firmly into the peppers, and put a good-sized lump of butter on top of each. The water adhering to the mushrooms after washing will furnish sufficient moisture for their cooking.

Arrange the peppers on end in a baking dish, having water with salt, pepper, and butter poured in to the depth of about one inch. Place the dish in a hot oven, cook covered for 15 minutes; then uncover and baste and cook for 10 or 15 minutes longer, or until the peppers are perfectly tender. An addition to the mushrooms of chopped cooked chicken or veal is a pleasing variation.

Mushrooms With Bacon.

Fry the bacon, and on removing it from the frying pan keep it hot; cook the mushrooms on each side in the "fryings" and serve on a platter with the strips of bacon arranged as a border.

Several species are good prepared in this manner, but it is especially well suited to the common cultivated mushroom.

RENEW YOUR WAR ON COMMON HOUSE FLY

Presence of Pests Indicates Insanitary Conditions.

They Are Menace to Health Because They Carry Disease Germs to Exposed Foods—Of Importance to Prevent Breeding.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

The presence of flies is an indication of uncleanness, insanitary conditions, and improper disposal of substances in which they breed. They are not only annoying; they are actually dangerous to health, because they may carry disease germs to exposed foods.

It is therefore important to know where and how they breed, and to apply such knowledge in combating them. A bulletin issued by the United States Department of Agriculture gives information on this subject. Besides giving directions for ridding the house of flies by the use of screens, fly papers, poisons and flytraps, it lays especial emphasis on the explanation of methods of eliminating breeding places and preventing the breeding of flies. Address the United States Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C., and a copy of this publication will be sent you free.

Armchairs are being made lower in the back.

Never leave brushes lying or standing on their bristles.

Celery and almonds are often used together for a dainty salad.

Radishes may be cooked until tender and then served au gratin.

Lard may be freshened by cooking fresh sliced potatoes in it.

Bring olive oil to a boil or boil a minute. It will take away the rancid taste.

The day-bed is considered an essential piece of furniture in small apartments.

Macaroni and spaghetti will not boil over when cooking if a bit of fat is put into the water.

Clothes placed in the clothes basket any old way become wrinkled and take much longer to iron than those folded with some care.

A teaspoon of camphor added to a quart of soft water will kill worms in house plants. The plants should be quite dry when it is applied.

WARD FOUR BUSINESS

An open meeting for the voters of Ward 4 was held at the Engine House, Nash's Corner, Wednesday evening to discuss the articles appearing in the warrant to be voted on at the special town meeting.

The 18 Town Meeting Members voted to organize. John F. Robinson was elected chairman, and Mrs. G. C. Andrews clerk. It was further moved that the chairman and clerk have the power to call together any meeting on the recommendation of four of the Town Meeting Members for discussion of business to come before the Town Meeting—also for filling any vacancies that might occur among their members.

Article 3 of the warrant in regard to the disposal of the Hose House property at Nash's Corner was discussed in general. The vote was unanimous to retain the building. A committee was appointed to draw up a motion covering its disposition, to be presented at the town meeting. Thomas V. Nash, chairman, Bradford Hawes, John F. Robinson and Sanford Hollis. They reported as follows:

The delegates of Ward 4 at a meeting held in the Hose House, Nash's Corner, on Wednesday evening, June 22, voted that we recommend to the town that it sell and convey the lot to the town where the Hose House of Ward 4 is now situated to the Stetson Shoe Company, retaining the building as the property of the town, the said building to be placed on a site satisfactory to the Selectmen, site to be procured by the Stetson Shoe Co., who shall bear all expense of moving and placing building thereon as a whole or partial consideration for the transfer of above said land."

It was moved and seconded that this report of the Committee be accepted and presented at the Town Meeting Friday evening, the 24th, by Bradford Hawes.

A further motion was put for a committee to confer with the Selectmen in choosing a favorable location for the Hose House when the time comes to act on this question. It was moved and seconded that the chairman select this committee. He recommended Thomas V. Nash, chairman, Bradford Hawes and Sanford Hollis, all of whom accepted.

A general expression of opinion on all other articles included in the warrant was solicited and given, but no particular action taken or deemed necessary at this meeting.

Meeting adjourned at 10.30 P. M.

The chairman of the Quincy Welfare Committee visited the East Norfolk hospital on Sunday and entertained the shell-shocked boys with a very fine concert. Among the entertainers from Weymouth were Hazel Clark Leonard, violin, and Russell S. Reilly, piano.

Crescent lodge of East Weymouth and Wildey lodge of South Weymouth met on Saturday for the opening game in the South Shore Odd Fellows league, and it was a walkover for the former. It was not until the third inning that the scoring began, but Crescent annexed 9 before Wildey got started in the seventh. Rix and Roulston were the battery for Crescent, and Wildey had two pitchers on the mound—Howe and Holbrook. The full summary tells the story:

UP IN AN AIRSHIP

The fifth annual gypsy tour of New England motorcyclists, that is held every year in some part of the country, was held this year at Old Orchard beach, Maine.

Some 65 motorcyclists left Quincy Square at 9 o'clock, June 17, going to Boston and there joining the big tour to Old Orchard beach. The party consisted of several hundred motorcyclists when they reached their destination, as other small towns joined the main tour along the route, reaching Old Orchard at 3:30 P. M.

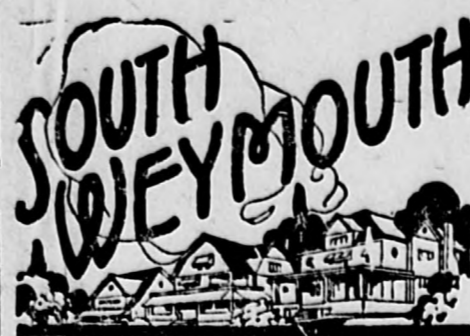

The rest of the afternoon and evening was spent in seeing the sights and going to amusement places around the beach. The evening wound up with some wonderful singing around the fireplace of Hotel Vesper, where the party stopped.

Saturday was given over to racing, and the different events were very exciting and fast. Two miles straight away over the sands of Old Orchard beach were made by an Indian motorcycle in 67 seconds, which was the fastest time of the day and was enjoyed by everybody.

Saturday night was another live night at the seashore, automobilists coming in from the surrounding country to see the races, who stayed the evening out, and Old Orchard was a scene of action that night.

Sunday morning there were airship rides, and on account of the gypsy tour and personal acquaintance with Mr. Jones, special rates were enjoyed. Among the Weymouth people who enjoyed the ocean and landscape from the air were: Mr. and Mrs. Fred Beal, Miss Blanche Crout, Miss Ruth Crout, William Hersey and Charles Jackson.

After the airplane rides were over and a wonderful dinner enjoyed, the machines were brought from their resting places, motors started, and the trip home was on, arriving in Weymouth in the evening. Everyone says: "Count me in on the next one."

Children's Day was observed by the Sunday school connected with the Second Universalist church Sunday morning with a program directed by Mrs. George Sargent, followed by a baptismal service and an address delivered by the pastor, Dr. Charles H. Murel. The program consisted of vocal selections and recitations by the children and vocal numbers by the vested choir, directed by Miss Deane with Mrs. Mildred Fish organist. The church was prettily decorated with flowers for the occasion.

Mr. and Mrs. Granville Gay of Lynn are the guests of their niece, Mrs. Ernest G. Caswell of Main street.

Mrs. Albert Bennett of Taunton, who has been visiting her husband's parents, Mr. and Mrs. B. A. Bennett of Union street, was called to the home of her parents in New York by the death of her father, resulting from an automobile accident.

Miss E. Frances Paine of Pond street is spending the week in Braintree visiting her cousin, Mrs. George Wright.

Mrs. Frank Guernsey of Boston is spending a few days visiting her sister, Mrs. John Vinson of Main street.

Abigail Adams Sewing Circle met with Miss Susie Carrell of Randolph street Wednesday last week. At noon a luncheon was served out of doors to the members. Saturday, June 19, the organization held a field day on the playgrounds at Lovell's Corner.

Daniel Webster council, A. A. R. I. R., held a meeting in the New Orpheum Sunday evening with the president, J. P. Santry, in the chair. During the evening addresses were delivered by Prof. Daniel Foley on the "A. A. R. I. R. and what it has accomplished," and Professor Das of Calcutta, India, who spoke on the "Freedom of India." The next meeting of the council will be held in the New Orpheum Sunday evening, June 26, at 8 o'clock.

Mrs. Harold Fay and children have returned to their home on West street, having been the guests of Mrs. Fay's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Wakemar of Laconia, N. H.

Mrs. Grace Andrews of Curtis avenue had as guests over Sunday her father, Dr. Carlton and Miss Florence Pierce of Chelsea.

Mrs. William Allen of Front street has returned from the Deaconess hospital, where she has been receiving medical treatment the past three weeks.

Mrs. John Kohler observed her 60th anniversary at her home, 815 Main street Wednesday, June 15, by entertaining a number of relatives and friends at a lobster supper.

The wedding has been announced of Miss Madeline Bourbon of Holbrook and Mr. Herman Jesse, a former resident of this town. The ceremony was performed at the parochial residence of Rev. Fr. Wood, pastor of St. Joseph's church, Holbrook, on Wednesday evening, June 15.

The estate at 189 Central street owned by Richard Madden has been purchased by Philip Flynn, who buys for occupancy.

Funeral services for Henry Healey of Rockland, who passed away at the Garney hospital Monday afternoon, June 13, were held in the church of the Holy Family, Rockland, at 9 o'clock Thursday morning. Mr. Healey was a former resident of South Weymouth and a son of the late Peter Healey for many years a resident of Central avenue. He is survived by his wife and several brothers and sisters.

The wedding of Miss Susie Burns and Nelson Varney of Rockland took place Saturday afternoon at 4 o'clock, Rev. L. W. Atwood of the Universalist church, Abington, performing the ceremony at his home. The couple were attended by Miss Susie Trainor and Arthur Chubbuck of Rockland. After the ceremony the couple left for a wedding trip and upon their return are to reside in Quincy.

It is reported that the building at the junction of Pond and Main streets, Independence Square, in which Burke's store is located has been sold to Boston parties, who are to erect a $12,000 garage on the site.

Miss Marie Sullivan of Boston was the week-end guest of Miss Blanche Howe of Main street.

All France honored the memory of Joan of Arc recently. Herring Packing Plants Are Busy

At Hyannis, Mass., the herring run is now on and great quantities are being brought to the packing plants where they are prepared for market. In the spring of each year the herring run from the ocean up streams to fresh water ponds where they spawn. On their return they are caught in large basins where they are dipped out with nets. The photograph shows the interior of one of the packing plants.

FOIBLES OF ANIMALS

"PETERSHAW has an extremely gentle driving horse," said the veterinary surgeon. "He has made the animal a member of his family for several years, and it was so gentle anybody could drive it. The other day Petershaw made up his mind he would sell Dobbin, as he couldn't afford to buy breakfast food for him any longer. A man who wanted a horse dropped around, and Petershaw hitched Dobbin up, and that fool horse just naturally ran away and the two men are going around on crutches. It's hard to understand such a thing, for there never was a gentler horse."

"There are several explanations," remarked the village pariah. "It is possible, even probable, that the horse understands everything Petershaw says, and when it heard him talking about selling, the noble animal put up a job to spoil the deal. Perhaps Dobbin has a strongly developed sense of humor, and thought such an escapade would be highly amusing, and we must admit that it was. I cannot imagine anything more humorous than to hitch up a perfectly gentle horse, and then have it act like a funnel-shaped cloud."

"There is no doubt that animals have a sense of humor. Unless we admit that, it is impossible to explain many things they do. I think the mule is a great jester. When a mule looks most innocent, he is most dangerous. You can tell when a horse is going to hand you a few sample heels as a testimonial of its esteem; it lays back its ears and switches its tail, and looks as vindictive as a rattlesnake. A reasonably active man can get out of the way when he sees a horse unlimbering its heavy artillery. But it's different with a mule. This highly sagacious animal will stand munching its fodder, every motion and every glance expressing peace on earth, good will toward men. The innocent bystander is saying to himself that he never did see such an amiable expression on an animal's face, and just then the gentle critter hands him a holiday assortment of feet, and when he recovers consciousness he can't find words that properly express his sentiments."

"The cow is another humorist. I have milked cows more or less all my days, and they all were addicted to harmless mirth. The cow I have now thoroughly enjoys batting me over the head with her tail. Of course there is some excuse in the summer for a cow that keeps her tail going; but there isn't any sense in such exercise in the winter, when the flies are dead. At this season my cow never brandishes her tail except at milking time. Then she keeps it going as though the flies were around her in clouds, and she has become so expert with her old tail that she patted me on the left ear about ten times a minute, and then I had an earworm made, and wore it whenever I milked. So she hits me on the nose every time, and it's simply wonderful how accurate her aim is."

"I had a cow once that I milked for four years and during that time she never lifted a foot or acted ornery in any way. I considered her the safest cow I ever saw. One evening there were some visitors from the city at our house, and they went to the barn lot with me to see me milk the cow. There were two or three ladies in the party, and as I milked I explained to them that the animal was a marvel when it came to docility. I said I didn't believe she would kick if a charge of powder went off under her. Of course the cow heard every word I said, and she simply couldn't resist the temptation to make me look like thirty cents, so, just when I was most enthusiastic in her praise, she landed a left hook on my chin and put me down for the count. Those city folks said that if she was a gentle cow they'd give fifty cents to see an unruly one, and I suppose they're talking about the event yet."

A FEW LITTLE SMILES

OLD MEN'S YARD STICK.

Irene and Helen, two little sisters, went to visit their grandmother in the country. It was their first visit away from the city and they were surprised and delighted at everything. They were especially interested in the chickens and loved to hunt for the newly-laid eggs.

Their grandmother cautioned the children never to take away the nest egg. Their strife to see which could find the most eggs was great. One morning Irene reached a nest first. Seizing the forbidden egg, she started for the house.

"Oh, grandmother!" shouted Helen, hurrying after her sister. "Irene's got the egg the old hen measures by!"

HOMEMADE FLAGSTAFF SUP-PORTS.

The flagstaff holder which is shown in Figs. 1 and 2 is built up of the two blocks A and B (Fig. 3) and a pair of iron or tin straps bent into the shape of C (Fig. 5). Cut blocks A and B of the dimensions given in Fig. 4. Block B is notched to fit over block A, and is fastened to block A with nails driven through both its top and front edges. Bore a pair of holes through block A, one near each end, through which to drive screws into the window frame. To make the back edge of block A fit squarely against the window frame, it must be planed off on a bevel (Fig. 1). The straps C (Fig. 5) can be made out of strips of sheet iron, or out of doubled pieces of tin from a tin can. Make the loop of the right diameter to fit your flagstaff. Punch holes through the ends of the straps, and fasten the straps to the sides of block B with nails.

Because the flagstaff holder will be left on the window-sill permanently, it is a good idea to paint it the same color as the window trim.

With the flagstaff holder placed as shown in Fig. 1, it is out of the way of the window screen. The screen will keep the end of the staff from pushing in too far. Fasten wire or rope stays to the outer end of the staff, and run these to screw eyes screwed into the window frame (Fig. 1).

For the staffs of small flags, a pair of screw eyes screwed into the head of the door frame (Fig. 2), or into a wooden window-sill, makes as satisfactory a holder as can be had. Use screw eyes of a diameter that will make the staff fit snugly.

FOR MOTHER'S PANTRY.

Possibly you share mother's interest in the pantry. If you do, you can appreciate the value of the two conveniences illustrated.

The pantry-needs board in Fig. 1 keeps tab on pantry supplies.

Get a cardboard shoebox, and along each side cut a slot 1 1/2 inches wide, extending it to within 1/4 inch of one end and 1 inch of the other end (Fig. 2). Then cut a piece of board of the right length to fit between the ends of the cover, and of the right width to fit between the slots (Fig. 3), and fasten this between the ends with tacks.

Along the side edges of the cover mark off points 1/4 inch apart, the full length of the slots, and at these points pierce holes large enough for toothpicks to stick through. Then get some glass beads and toothpicks (Fig. 4), stick the toothpicks through the holes in the side edges of the cover, slip a bead over each, and run a quire of envelopes. If you can get long envelopes, 9 or 9 1/4 inches in length, they will be best. Prepare a pair of covers, using two pieces of cardboard 1/4 inch wider and longer than the envelopes, for front and back covers, and a strip of the same length by 1 1/4 inches wide for the backbone. Place the narrow strip between the wide pieces, and hinge the three together with a linen strip lapped as shown in Figs. 6 and 7. Attach tape or ribbon to the narrow strip, and cut it to the right length to pass around the covers, and tie in a bow (Fig. 6).

Each envelope should bear a recipe classification, Breads, Cake, Candies, Desserts, etc., lettered upon the flap (Fig. 8). The envelopes may be placed loosely between the covers, as shown in Fig. 5, but it is a better plan to punch holes through each (Fig. 8), and holes in corresponding positions through the covers (Fig. 7), and bind all together with cord (Fig. 6).

As a finishing touch, cover the cardboard upon which the pantry-needs board upon nails on the wall, slide the

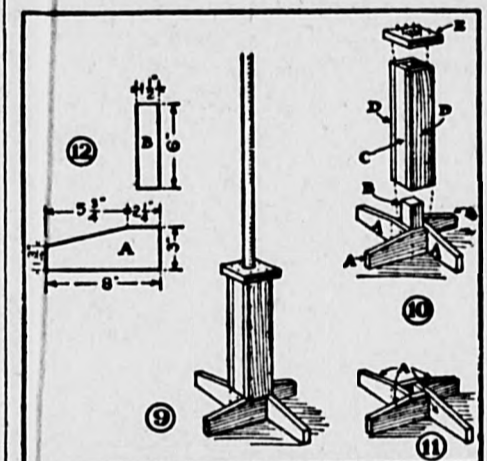

Fig. 7 shows a good holder for a flagstaff to be supported in a vertical position. Cut blocks A and B of the size shown in Fig. 8, and bore a hole a trifle larger than the diameter of the staff, through the center of each block, and a screw hole near each end of block A. Nail the blocks together. Holder can be screwed to a porch-rail.

Fig. 9 shows a standard that can be used indoors or out. If you haven't a place for it at home, it is just the thing for a school or Sunday school class flag or banner, or to hold the colors in a boy scout's club room.

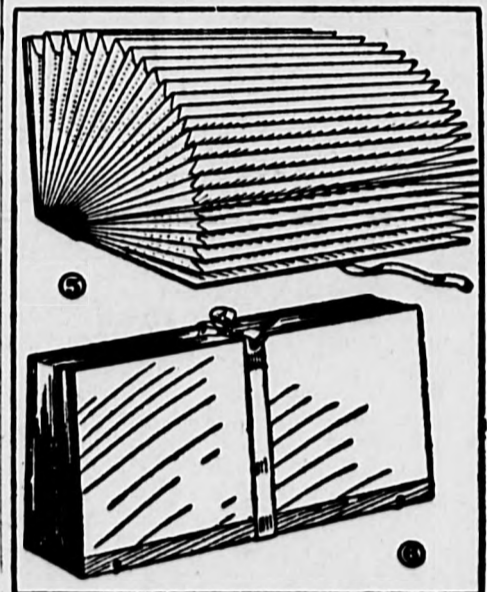

Fig. 10 shows how the standard is built up, and Fig. 11 shows a detail of the base. Cut the four feet A by the pattern given in Fig. 12. Fig. 11 shows how these pieces lap one another. Do not nail them together, however, until after you have prepared the center block B (Figs. 10 and 12). You can nail them then directly to block B, and nail through them into the piece adjacent. Cut the boards for the sides of the standard of the right width to fit around block B of the base. Make the length 16 inches. Cut cap E to project one-half inch. Bore the hole a trifle larger than the staff.

The envelopes may be placed loosely between the covers, as shown in Fig. 5, but it is a better plan to punch holes through each (Fig. 8), and holes in corresponding positions through the covers (Fig. 7), and bind all together with cord (Fig. 6).

The Rider.

"In speaking of this bill before congress you mention a rider. What is a rider?"

"A rider," replied Senator Sorghum, "is usually like the postscript to a woman's letter—apparently an afterthought, but in reality the most important part of the communication."

Her Loving Notes.

"Your wife must be awfully in love with you! She has written to you every day since she has been away."

"They are only little notes to tell me to send her something she forgot to put in her trunks."

Disappointed.

"So you went into the country to get 'atmosphere'? How did you like it?"

"Disappointed. Couldn't find a farmer who had a horse named Dobbin, and never heard one of them say 'By heck!'"

Very Rich.

The Governess—I'm afraid your little daughter will never learn to spell.

Mrs. Newrich—It won't make any difference. When she grows up she'll have money enough to employ a secretary.

ONE BURST AT A TIME

She—How about that present of a sunburst you were going to give me?
He—How can I give you a sunburst when the bank's burst?

Of Course!

That politician
Should be fought
Who dares to boast he Can't be bought.

Misunderstanding.

Mrs. Wiggs—Ain't it goin' to be awful when the soldiers get back?
Mrs. Figs—Whatever do you mean?
Mrs. Wigs—Why, they say the boys will all come home demoralized.

How Mean!

Mr. Cholly Shallowpate—They say that a little learning is a dangerous thing.

Miss Kutting Hintz—Fear not. You're a long ways from the danger signal.

Appropriate Affliction.

"That pork dealer has a trouble which is strictly business."

"How do you mean?"
"He has a sty in his eye."

Unusual Sign.

"That man's not normal."
"What's the matter with him?"
"Told me the other day his kid never said anything worth repeating."

A Back Number.

Myrt—Did you see the outfit Mabel wore to the dance last night? It must take a lot of nerve to appear like that.
Gert—Well, she did display a good deal of backbone.

Don't Blame Her.

Mabel—Gert is dreadfully superstitious, isn't she?
Myrt—Oh, indeed, she is. She won't even let a man propose to her in a hammock for fear they will fall out.

A Decided Conservatist.

"Father, said the small boy, 'what is an anarchist?'"

"An anarchist, my son, is a socialist who has gone from bad to worse."

Unromantic.

Miss Romance—Don't you love the long fringed and widespread beauty of the chrysanthemums?

Miss Desport—Sure. It reminds me of the heads of the football team.

Getting in the Last Word.

The Bride's Mother—What's Henry been doing to you now?

The Bride—The worst yet. Every time he calls me up on the telephone he says what he wants to and then hangs up the receiver so I can't talk back to him.

Daddy's Evening Fairy Tale

by MARY GRAHAM BONNER

WITTY WITCH'S TALK.

"I'm glad to see you all today," said Witty Witch to the fairies and elves and brownies who came to call on her.

"Mr. Giant said that I was to give an afternoon lecture before we had tea. I don't know that anyone wants to hear a lecture, but he thought it would be a good idea. And I mean to take my own lecture to heart just as much as I mean to tell it to you."

"And anyway, at the end of the lecture, we'll all have tea!"

Everyone laughed and Witty Witch continued: "You must all be proud of your country and wave your flag and rejoice that you belong to your own beloved country—but you mustn't judge every other country in the world by one or two people you may know belonging to such countries."

"Be proud of your parents and your grandparents and your ancestors, but don't spend your whole time showing their pictures in the family albums to the callers. Amount to something yourselves, too!"

"Be friendly with your neighbors, but don't think that means that you can borrow their toys or their fresh eggs without returning them, for that isn't real friendliness."

"And don't feel that when you've borrowed their matches to light your bonfires that you can keep the matches that are left in your pockets!"

"When you have snapshots of your sisters and brothers, don't take up everyone's time by showing them all. They may have sisters or brothers of their own!"

"Don't ask people questions which you wouldn't want asked of you."

"Don't ask how much others pay for their toys if you're not going to tell what you pay."

"Don't imagine that by saying a hurried good-morning to someone, you're being friendly."

"Be independent but don't be proud and haughty."

"That is all the lecture I will give," said Witty Witch, "and that is quite enough. But Mr. Giant said it was well to go over the things we must not do, every once in awhile, as well as the things we must do.

"All Sorts of Good Things."

"Of course he agreed with me that the word DO was much more important than the word DON'T."

"But now we must be having tea." As Witty Witch said this, six little elves who had promised to help her with the tea came forth carrying trays with all sorts of good things to eat.

There were cookies and pastries and sandwiches and tea and little hard candies of different colors.

"Even if I did give you a lecture," said Witty Witch, "I'm going to make up for it by giving a fine tea."

"And then after tea time we're going to hear a story."

They all had a most delicious and splendid tea party, and after it was over Witty Witch told this story:

"Mr. and Mrs. Dove were very devoted and happy."

"Every day Mrs. Dove used to ask Mr. Dove if he loved her and every day Mr. Dove said that he did."

"One day though Mr. Dove said, 'You silly Mrs. Dove, of course I love you. I should think you would know that by this time.' Of course Mrs. Dove did know it, but she wanted to be told it just the same."

"But she decided she wouldn't ask him that question any more. A few days went by and she didn't ask that question. Mr. Dove became very much worried that Mrs. Dove no longer cared for him."

"Finally he could stand it no longer. 'You don't care whether I care for you or not,' he said, 'you haven't asked me in days now whether I love you or not.'"

"But you said you did," Mrs. Dove answered. "You do, don't you?"

"Mr. Dove stuck out his little feathered chest and said,

"Of course I do, you silly little dove. How often do I have to tell you the same thing? And Mrs. Dove laughed to herself for Mr. Dove liked to say that to her, but he missed answering her question as much as she missed asking it in truth!"

Something Missing.

The lady of good family was showing her ancestral home to her small son. She pointed with special pride to a bust of her father.

"And that, Bobbie," she said, "is your grandfather."

"Is that all there was of him?" he asked.—New York Times.

Do you have a dull, steady ache in the small of the back—sharp, stabbing twinges when stooping or lifting—distressing urinary disorders? For bad back and weakened kidneys
Weymouth residents recommend Doan's Kidney Pills. Read this Weymouth statement.
Mrs. Nellie Condric, 177 Broad street, says: "Doan's Kidney Pills are certainly a fine medicine and I can highly recommend them. I used them some time ago when suffering from an attack of kidney complaint. My back was lame and sore and I seemed to have a constant, nagging pain in the small of my back. My kidneys felt sore and heavy and they didn't act right. I was advised of Doan's Kidney Pills and got a few boxes. In a short time they completely rid me of the attack."

RESIGNATION OF PASTOR
Rev. Ora A. Price, for six years pastor of the Old South Union church at South Weymouth, read his resignation as pastor on Sunday, having received a call to the Pilgrim Congregational church at Leominster. He expressed a desire that the resignation take effect September 1.

The letter was a lengthy one, and reviewed his pastorate and rejoiced that because of the spirit of cooperation, good will and faith shown by the people, some results have been achieved.

The Leominster Enterprise says Mr.
Price made a favorable impression
both times he preached at Leominster, because of his earnestness, his genial manner, and his unquestioned qualities of leadership. His sermons show logic and force, and augur well for constructive work ahead. The constituency of the church look forward with anticipation to the coming of their minister, and to fruitful labors which are expected in days to come.

Mr. Price came to South Weymouth in 1915, first as pastor of the Union church, and later as pastor of the United churches. He is 35 years of age. All three of his children were born here. In his letter of resignation he says South Weymouth will always be dear to us, and the people dearer still. Something of your own life will go with us and be always a part of us and our children. Mrs.
Price and I will dwell in spirit many times with you. We want your sympathy and prayers to follow us to our new home and new work. We wish to thank you, one and all sincerely, for the kindness you have shown, the love you have given, the good things you have done for Mrs. Price and myself.

As requested, a council will soon be called to take action on the resignation.

ROBERT EMMET COUNCIL
A few hundred people gathered on the "Common" in Jackson Square, East Weymouth, last Friday evening and listened to an impassioned address by Peter Golden of Cork, Ireland.
He emphasized the fact that the fight his people in Ireland were making was not at all a religious issue, but that his people wanted their own government and country—the principles for which 70,000 American soldiers laid down their lives on the battlefields in Flanders.

Prof. Daniel Foley of Boston University also gave a scholarly address pointing out that America by delaying recognition of the Irish Republic was not living up to her traditions.

William J. Whelan of Tipperary, Ire., and William J. Larkin of Boston, who were originally scheduled to speak, were unable to keep their engagement.

Joseph Lambie has been appointed a member of the publicity committee.
Miss Helen Lyons of Summit street, Weymouth, is chairman of a committee that will canvas for members at the Landing. Mrs. John O'Rourke is in charge of the drive at North Weymouth.

TREMONT THEATRE

With the summer in full swing the popularity of George M. Cohan's comedians in the musical comedy, "The O'Brien Girl" continues undiminished.
at the Tremont Theatre, Boston.
In fact the tremendous vogue of this really wonderful musical entertainment is one of the most remarkable testaments of the cleverness of this genius of American producers. No other producer in the country could accomplish so great an achievement as to draw theatregoers in capacity audiences at this season of the year.
The reasons for the popularity of this attraction are manifold. It is clean and wholesome in line, story and situation, always interesting and intriguing in plot, its music is of the happy and joyously tingling variety, the dancing is varied and always lively, the production is beautiful and lavish, the chorus is youthfully charming and sprightly, and the cast is of the all-star class with so many prominent players of first rank as no other attraction holding the stage can boast.

FIELD DAY AND MUSTER
On Saturday, July 2, East Braintree will come into its own. On that day there will be a celebration under the auspices of the Braintree Point Welfare Club, Inc.

Not only will the occasion be one that will emphasize the prominence of that part of the town, but it will also demonstrate to the rest of Brain-tree and Weymouth as well, what cooperation can do when shaped along the line of constructive endeavor. In three years' time the Braintree Point Welfare Club has expanded from a gathering of a few men to an influential and progressive organization of over 200.

Now, on July 2 the members of this club are going to treat the staid old town of Braintree to one of the best entertainments that time, effort and money can produce. It will be the annual field day and carnival of the Braintree Point Welfare Club and it will, in reality, also be a town jubilation day. The affair will be held at Watson Park in East Braintree on the banks of Fore River, a beautiful tract of land that the club helped secure for a public park and playground for the town of Braintree.

For weeks past various committees have been busy planning features and innovations to make this field day a red letter event in the calendar of good times of the town of Braintree.
A varied program drawn up to suit old and young of both sexes has been systematically arranged and no detail that would add to the comfort and enjoyment of everybody who attends has been overlooked.

For those who are inclined toward sporting events, the committee has mapped out an ambitious program.
There will be baseball games, soccer football games, track and field sports and aquatic sports. The club has been prominent in the soccer football world during the past season, putting forward a team that established a most enviable reputation in the league for the State cup.

The baseball team of the club has gone through the season so far without a defeat. The general athletic events and the prizes offered are as follows: Five-mile road race, three prizes; mile track race, three prizes;
half-mile track race, three prizes;
quarter-mile track race, three prizes;
220-yard dash, three prizes; 100-yard

JENNIE MAY TRAINOR

dash, three prizes; egg race for women, one prize; girls' race, two prizes;
boys' race, two prizes.

A feature of the day will be a firemen's muster which will be attended by all the crack tubs of the state.
Previous to the muster there will be a parade of the red-jacketed veterans and their "tubs" through the various streets of East Braintree. Already assurances have been received from the captains of the Gen. Edwards engine of West Quincy, the Bay Beese of West Quincy, the Campello Vets of Brockton, the Cochato of Braintree, the Konohasset of Cohasset and the Hancock, the crack tub of the Old Colony District, which comes from Brockton.

Tentative acceptances have been received from the following Massachusetts tubs: Monaquot, Union, Hingham, Alabama Coon, Protector, Enterprise, Red Jackets, Live Oaks, Germania, the East Somerville Engine, the Winnisimmet and Protection and also the following Rhode Island engines: Defender of Bristol, Washington of Wickford and Narragansett of Riverside.

Throughout the day there will be in operation a well-equipped midway, and for the entertainment of the children, there will be a pleasing program by the pupils of Miss Jennie May Trainor, wherein talented little girls will appear in costume in a series of fancy tableaux, solo dances, folk dances and pretty interpretations of beautiful features of the terpsichorean world.
These children drew crowded houses in Jordan Hall and other Boston places last winter and the performances for the field day will be given with all the superb setting of countryside in the full bloom of summer follage.

The chairman of the general committee is James Furse, the secretary is R. C. Wylie, and the treasurer, H.
E. Allen. The chairman of the various committees are as follows: Buying and supply committee, Carl Steiford; ticket distribution, Ben Bodell; ticket drawing, J. A. Fuglestad; publicity,
P. A. Gibson; muster, Larz Lowell;
sports, H. R. Williams; midway, John C. Richardson; refreshments, George W. Pratt; field arrangements and construction, Thomas Arnold; entertainment, Joseph Smith; reception committee, James Furse and P. A. Gibson.
The Braintree Point Welfare Club,
Inc., recently joined the Braintree Board of Trade after a record of local accomplishments in the way of civic improvements that was unusual for a practically new organization. Owing to the efforts of the club East Brain-tree was given a temporary school house for the newly built portion of that village along Fore River and also obtained many other improvements of a public nature. Many other projects along the line of civic upbuilding are contemplated by this organization.

EVERYBODY SEES A CHANGE IN FATHER

Grateful Son Says His Father Looks Like Different Man Since Taking Tanlac.

"My father has suffered from chronic stomach trouble for over twenty years and has paid out thousands of dollars for medicines and doctors," said G. W. Clayton, a well-known Cobb County farmer, living a short distance out of Atlanta, Ga.

"We tried nearly everything trying to cure him and he went off to the Springs, thinking maybe the water might help him, but it just looked like nothing would reach his trouble. Then he tried dieting and lived on liquid food until he almost starved, but even that failed to do him any good and he just kept going from bad to worse.

"I don't guess there ever was a case as stubborn as his, and if there ever was a confirmed dyspeptic he was one of them, and I guess he would have been one yet if it hadn't been for this Tanlac.

"The first we heard of this medicine was when my father saw an advertisement in the papers from parties he knew in Tennessee, who were friends of his and he knew what they said about it was the truth, so he got it right away and began taking it. Well, sir, it acted just like magic—everybody notices the change in father. Why, he is just like a different man and sits down to the table and eats like a farmhand. Only yesterday he ate pork and turnips for his dinner and ate so much we were actually afraid he was going to overdo the thing, but he laughed and said nothing hurt him now and that he was hungry and expected to eat and make up for lost time.

"Now, when a medicine will do things like that I think people ought to know about it, and I want to say right now that I would not give one bottle of Tanlac for all the other medicines and health resorts in the country put together."

Tanlac is sold by leading druggists everywhere.—Advertisement.

The One Busy Man.

"How's business with you?" "Great," replied the young man. "I'm rushed to death. I haven't had so much to do since long before the war."

"For Heaven's sake," replied the other, expecting every man he met to wall about the dull times, "what line of business are you in?"

"I'm a bill collector," was the answer. "I'm dunning people for money that never were dunned before."

If You Need a Medicine You Should Have the Best

Have you ever stopped to reason why it is that so many products that are extensively advertised, all at once drop out of sight and are soon forgotten? The reason is plain—the article did not fulfill the promises of the manufacturer. This applies more particularly to a medicine. A medicinal preparation that has real curative value almost sells itself, as like an endless chain system the remedy is recommended by those who have been benefited, to those who are in need of it.

A prominent druggist says "Take for example Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, a preparation I have sold for many years and never hesitate to recommend, for in almost every case it shows excellent results, as many of my customers testify. No other kidney remedy has so large a sale."

According to sworn statements and verified testimony of thousands who have used the preparation, the success of Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root is due to the fact, so many people claim, that it fulfills almost every wish in overcoming kidney, liver and bladder ailments; corrects urinary troubles and neutralizes the uric acid which causes rheumatism.

You may receive a sample bottle of Swamp-Root by Parcel Post. Address Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., and enclose ten cents; also mention this paper. Large and medium size bottles for sale at all drug stores.

Quite in Order.

W. B. Trites, who has been living in southern Spain for the last year or two, said the other day:

"Life is very abundant and prolific over there, especially insect life. There was a typographical error in one of my stories recently but this error would have escaped notice in Andalusia, though it excited a lot of disgust here at home.

"The error was in the quotation of a hymn, my heroine being made to sing:

"Just as I am without one den," "A hymn worded like that would be quite in order in Spain."

Kenneth sat in the back seat with his aunt one Sunday evening while the choir, in which his father and mother sang, gave a musical program. Whenever the choir sang Kenneth also sang loudly, much to his aunt's distress. "Kenneth," she whispered at last, "I'll give you anything you want if you'll stop singing."

"But I don't want anything," he answered calmly and went on singing.

The Galloping Dominoes

By WILL T. AMES

(©, 1921, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

Dearly did Jimmy Halpin love the rattle of the dice. When the galloping dominoes, as Jimmy called them, cavorted down the clubroom table, sped by his deft fingers, and came to rest with a six and an ace showing in a "natural," then was the cup of Jimmy's happiness full. And he was lucky—very lucky. Jimmy held the "Young America club" record for naturals; seven in succession. That was a night indeed! Not only had those seven naturals cleaned out the pockets of the rest of the club membership, but they had accomplished that result so early in the evening that the game was out and over and Jimmy taking the air on the sidewalk, with his hat very much on one side of his head, when Mamie Hall came home from her stenography lesson over at the "Union" at a quarter after nine.

Jimmy had had a fancy for Mamie for some time. Mamie, knowing Jimmy's reputation better than she knew Jimmy, had not, however, been responsive to his tentative advances. Mamie had no notion of becoming involved with a young man who had earned the neighborhood sobriquet of "Click-finger Jimmy" in recognition of a well-known attribute of the habitual crap shooter.

But Jimmy, generously expansive under the influence of his winning streak, had plumped at Mamie, in the first half minute of their conversation, an invitation to go to the Hippodrome next evening—and sit in a two-dollar seat!

"Geet!" exclaimed Mamie. She did some quick thinking and then she said she'd go. What she thought was that just going to a show with a fellow once doesn't mean anything serious, and how often does she get a chance at a $2 seat?

Now, it is one thing for a girl like Mamie to take up with a lad like Jimmy—just for once; and it is another thing to get rid of him. Mamie had been six weeks, now, doing this and leading herself into the belief that she was trying to do it; and she was no nearer to it than at the beginning. Meantime she had been to five more shows and twice more had sat in a $2 seat—when Jimmy had made a good winning at the clubroom.

Wherefore Mamie had no right to be surprised when Jimmy, bidding her good-by at the bottom of the hall stairs, didn't let go of her hand, but instead, after swallowing hard and with a shade of nervous tremble in his usually good baritone voice, said:

"Hey, kiddo, whatya say—do we make it a go, you and me—for good?" If this seems a crass and flippant manner of proposal, remember, please, that over on the East side there is a word so sacred that it is taboo. That word is "love." It is to be intimated, suggested, proved—but never spoken.

Right then and there Mamie would have given much to be able to say, with a clear conscience, "Oh, I dunno—mebbe." But Mamie couldn't. What she said was:

"Not so you can notice it, Jimmy Halpin. I ain't marrying any fellow that spends most the time crap-shooting. I've saw too much of it. Two-dollar seats for a show this week, and two cents' worth of cat meat to eat all next week. You're a sport, and I won't tie up to a man that's going to let a pair of dice decide whether I live in a flat or out in the park!"

The worst of this answer, from Jimmy's point of view, was that he knew the girl meant it. His soul struggle was violent but brief.

"Listen, Mamie," he said solemnly, "I got two hundred and a quarter in the bank and forty bucks in my clothes—and a job. Go to church with me and I give you my solemn I'll never take a chance with a nickel of my money on the ivories or any other

Mamie looked at him for a long ten seconds. "D'you mean that?" she asked breathlessly.

"Sure," said Jimmy. And Mamie knew he did.

Now, reader, meet Miss Gertie Shane, who lives across the corridor from the Hall family, third floor back, south. Miss Shane is but little pleased at the news of the Halpin-Hall engagement. Consequently she is more intimately sweet to Mamie than heretofore.

Meet also Father Hall, given name Edward, who carries a life insurance, and Mother Hall, name of Caroline, an indifferent person. George, one year junior to Mamie, completes the Hall family.

For a month Mamie Hall was the happiest girl on the East side. Every evening was Jimmy's evening now, except the stenography evenings, and those were partly his, for he met her at the union and walked home with her. Then came an evening when Jimmy didn't appear at the union and Mamie walked home alone. It seemed very strange and lonesome. Mamie was in no mood for frivolous converse with mere girls when she found Gertie Shane standing at the street door of the tenement house, and would have passed on with perfunctory "Hello, Gert," if Gert had permitted it. But Gertie, effusively friendly, put her arm around Mamie's waist and climbed the first flight of stairs by her side. At the head of the stairs she suddenly—oh, very suddenly—be-thought herself of something.

"Oh, Mamie," she said, "come along to the back window and see what's doing!" And willy-nilly Mamie had to go along.

From just that one window, out of all the windows in the big barnacle of a tenement, one could look squarely into the Young America clubroom, which was at the rear of the cigar-store downstairs. That is, one could, if the curtain were up; and tonight the curtain had been forgotten.

There was a long table, and half a dozen of the sporty boys of the club were gathered about it. And in the very middle of the picture stood Jimmy Halpin, with a broad grin on his broad face, rolling 'em and snapping his fingers, and gathering up the dimes and quarters as enthusiastically as if there were no such thing as a girl or a promise in the world. Mamie watched the spectacle for the space of three long breaths while Gertie Shane watched her with an evil joy.

"Pooh!" remarked Mamie. "I'm going along up. Good night!" And in her own tiny coop of a room she cried herself to sleep.

It was the very next night that Jimmy got his. He called with a proposition having to do with the movie theatre around the corner. Mamie, a bit pale and quite scornful, spoke plainly. "I'm off you for good, Jimmy," she said. "There ain't any use talking. You been telling me you just dropped in down there in the clubroom and looked on now and then. But I seen you myself—seen you shooting and seen you taking in the coin. You and me is all through." Mamie's grammar might have grown even worse if she had talked any longer. But she didn't. She shut the door in Jimmy's face.

Ensued four wretched days—four empty, dreary days for Mamie: four gloomy, somber days for Jimmy; four days in which young George Hall looked askance many times at the pale, stricken face of his sister. Then George lay for Mamie down at the front door after supper.

"Lookit, sis," he said, "you got Jimmy wrong."

"Shut up!" exclaimed Mamie, whose nerves were at the breaking point. "Ain't I got eyes?"

"Yes—and you've got ears, too, and you're going to listen. Here's what happens. I get to rolling 'em and Jimmy looking on. I lose my couple of bucks and then I—well, I begins to dig into the twenty-two that the old gent give me to hand to Saunders, the insurance man, to pay for his insurance. And the first thing I know it's all gone but a single bone. He grabs the dollar and he shoves me out and he says, 'Lemme shoot 'em for you!' and he shoots a natural, and from that he goes on up till he's got the old man's twenty-two back and he hands it to me and tells me he'll break my jaw if he finds me rolling 'em again. He saved my neck, that's what he did—and you're a bum sport, Mamie, if you can him for that!"

"Gosh!" exclaimed Mamie. "Why didn't he tell me so?"

"Aw, can't you see anything? How could he?"

"That's so," agreed Mamie. "Say, you hustle on in there and tell him I want to see him. And hurry up about it."

Easily Follow Child's Trail.

In the Australian bush directly the news of lost child is brought every man in the vicinity gives up what he is doing to join in a search, which is started immediately, as in the summer a child can die of exhaustion in a little while.

In the meantime the black trackers are sent for. These are Australian aborigines kept by the police and used by them as human bloodhounds. It is an extraordinary sight to see these trackers creeping along the ground, grunting like animals and following tracks that a white man cannot see. They will practically always find the child in the end.

A Sporting Streak.

"Hiram," said Mrs. Cornstossel, "our boy Josh seems determined to live without workin'."

"Humor him along, Jerusha, and let's take a chance. That kind of a feller always turns out to be either terribly poor or wonderfully rich."

MEANS BIG CROP

Wheat in Western Canada Has Excellent Start.

Germination, in the Rich Soil of That Country, is Speedy—Farmers on Road to Wealth.

It was on the 18th of May that the writer received a letter from a friend in Western Canada dated the 15th of the same month. Information was conveyed in the letter that its author had traveled over a considerable portion of Western Canada. He had covered most of the settled portions, and from those he had not covered he had secured information that amplified his own observations of conditions throughout all the vast area of that country. He found seeding of wheat practically completed, and placed in a bed of earth that was in a condition that warranted speedy and healthy germination. This was borne out by evidence that he was a witness of wheat that had been in the ground four days that was already breaking through, and that which had been seeded for a week was well above the ground, the field being as green as a new pasture plot. Everywhere this condition existed. It will be pleasing information for those who have friends in Western Canada—in any part of it, no matter where they may be—to learn that conditions have opened up in such a splendid way, and to be advised that the prospects were never brighter than now. When it becomes known that conditions are so satisfactory, many who were waiting, uncertain what to do in the matter of moving, will doubtless now come to a decision. With the opening of thousands of homesteads, which took place on the 1st of May, there was a rush to take advantage of the opportunity to secure 160 acres of excellent land free, within speaking distance of a railroad. The low railway rates granted by means of a certificate issued by Canadian government agents, located at different points in the States, make it possible to make a trip of inspection at small cost.

Oat and barley farming are branches that add considerable to the wealth of the farmer who desires to make money quickly. That these grains can be grown so successfully, and easily, makes it possible to go into other branches of farming industry, that give stability to it, wherever they are carried on. They are dairying and cattle-raising. There is an excellent market for the product, and the climate aids materially in assisting it, while the native grasses, as well as cultivated varieties, bring the cost of production to a much lower figure than is possible on lands that are much higher in price, with no better yielding qualities. Then, again, it is simply shown that fodder corn can be grown with great success, and that sunflowers, which it has been fully proven are little behind, if any, in food quality, thrive wonderfully. In fact, these two fodders, in addition to which may be added that of alfalfa and sweet clover, in which Western Canada farmers are well apace with growers elsewhere, have brought about a period of silo-building which promises to eclipse any effort in this line made anywhere on the continent. In Manitoba alone, one firm is building two hundred this year. In Saskatchewan, many orders have been placed; in one small district in Alberta, where fifty were erected last year, another fifty will be built this summer. That there will be a thousand silos erected in the three provinces this year seems to be a conservative estimate. To the farmer in the States, who knows the advantage of the silos, who is interested in the fodder to be grown to fill them, what does this mean?—Advertisement.

Sad.

Little Julian had completed his first day at school and had climbed upon his father's lap to give dad his impressions thereof.

"Well," said dad, "how do you think you will like school?"

Whereupon the countenance of Julian took on a most serious expression.

"To tell you the honest truth, dad," he answered, "I believe I've started something I can't finish."

Automatic Reformation.

"Do you have any trouble enforcing the prohibition law in Crimson Gulch?"

"No," replied Cactus Joe, "most of the boys here was pretty fastidious about their licker in the old days. After one of 'em has saturated up a little with bootleg bitters he's that sorrowing and remorseful that there ain't any excuse for giving him even a harsh word."

SAVE SHOES AND STOCKINGS

They will last twice as long if you shake into your shoes ALLEN'S FOOT-PAWE, the powder for the feet. It takes the friction from the shoe and gives quick relief to Corns, Bunions, Callouses, sore, aching, swollen, tender feet. Shake Allen's Foot-Powder into your shoes and enjoy the bliss of feet without an ache.

Old Penalties Inadequate.

"Why don't you Crimson Gulch men hang an automobile thief the same as you used to do with a horse thief?"

"We've discussed it," said Cactus Joe; "but we came to the conclusion that hangin' is too good for him."

BLUE SHOES.

By MOLLIE MATHER.

(©, 1921, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

The Reverend Walter Wainright paused in the midst of his sermon, while unmistakable annoyance crossed his face. There was the girl again; the carefree creature, who seemed to have a faculty of bringing to naught his finest efforts.

Now, when he was preaching with telling earnestness upon the beauty of humility, she fitted like some dainty butterfly into his gloomy church edifice, attracting not only the attention of the women of his congregation, but the sneaking admiring attention of the men as well.

The serious gaze of her clear blue eyes atoned penitently, for the irrepressible smile of her lips. Since his arrival in the decidedly rustic township, Walter Wainright had been both taunted and angered by the girl's distracting power.

When Miss Isabelle Ogden favored the church with her presence, attention was drawn from him and his subject inevitably.

She was an illustrator, he had heard, growing steadily into assured success, and she rented the Browlee house furnished for the summer; living there with an old woman for housekeeper. To the exasperation of the village women, Miss Isabelle appeared to spend her time with the irresponsibility of a child, seeking only holiday pleasure, making tea parties in her beautiful old garden, for children about who rebelliously adored her, or tramping idly through the woods, a great box of candy and a magazine under each arm. "Ought to go in an talk to her," Hilltown advised, "it might do her good."

Walter Wainright's first visit was not encouraging. The illustrator served tea on the lawn, and they were waited upon by the housekeeper who familiarly called her mistress "Izzie." The artist wore a diaphanous dress that enveloped her like a rose colored cloud, and she asked him ingeniously if she might use his face for a magazine illustration at which she was working. The following offense of the Sunday morning entry which caused him to pause, and lose for a moment the thread of his sermon, was Isabelle's crowning fault of all. For she was wearing a pair of pale blue boots, as she came down the staid aisle. Blue kid shoes, suitable surroundings may be very pretty, but, pale blue shoes among the plain serviceably shod folk of Hilltown, were an eccentricity and a foolishness.

The pastor greeted her coldly upon her departure. His disapproval with himself was greater, that as days followed, he allowed the girl's image to haunt him.

"She'll have you eating out of her hand yet too," his own privileged housekeeper remarked. Walter Wainright turned uncomfortably away.

"Blue shoes," the women now dubbed her sarcastically.

"Little blue shoes," Walter Wainright tenderly thought of her—and sighed. Why was she so perverse, this unconcerned stranger?

"Reckon," his housekeeper went on, "you know that the artist woman has been sick. Dock Walton stops there two or three times a day, which ain't no more however," she added, "than he's been stoppin' ever since she came. You'd think a man of his sense would look other where's for a wife—but you never can tell, looks, get 'em." Walter Wainright hurriedly went to call. He felt it his imperative duty. A girl of fifteen or so sat propped in an invalid chair, her dark eyes gleamed beneath short black hair. The crippled girl pointed invitingly to a chair.

"I am Izzie's protegee," she exclaimed, "that's what she calls me. I live with her and she does everything for me and keeps me happy. All the time, Izzie loves to make people happy—sometimes—" the girl's eyes shone, "I try to make her happy too. Surprises, you know. Gabby—that's what I call the housekeeper, buys pretty tulle and net for me—quite secretly—and I sew them into dresses for Izzie. She's so little, it's no trouble at all—and Gabby helps. I can just sing—I feel so happy when Izzie wears them. You see, that's the only way I'll ever be able to enjoy pretty things. Last week—I'd embroidered linen for the doctor's table and he paid me for it, and I sent away and bought a pair of blue shoes for Izzie. All my life I'd wanted to wear blue shoes—isn't that funny? More than ever I think after father pushed me down the tenement stairs and broke my hip. Father was drunk. Then—I couldn't use my feet to walk any more. When Izzie saw the blue shoes she cried. But I just begged and begged her to put them on and wear them to church, for me. I'd been suffering a lot that morning, and Izzie's like that. She was late, but she put on the shoes. There's a cripple boy in the hospital that she's going to bring out here to make strong too, as soon as doctor will let him come. I think,"—broke off the girl abruptly, "that you can go in to Izzie now. That's her door across where all the flowers are."

Walter Wainright stood, for a moment diffidently, among the flowers. "Little blue shoes," he asked very softly, penitently, "May I come in."

Isabelle Ogden looked back at him, and suddenly understood.

"Yes," she invited, her quick smile welcomed him—"Please!"

CONNIE MACK VISITS HIS SON

Connie Mack of the Athletics saw the opening game of the Three-I season at Moline, where the club is managed by his son, Earl Mack.

BASEBALL STORIES

The Dodgers have two infielders for every position.

Ty Cobb is a boxer in Philadelphia. Sounds like a hitter!

Nap Lajoie is the name of a youthful New England boxer.

Loaded bases remind one of "Ba, Ba, Blacksheep"—three sacks full.

It takes something more than "Booh!" to whip the Athletics this season.

The ball star who lives to bat in an emergency might be termed a pinching bug.

Often a pitcher doesn't ride easy because he cannot get his baseball bearings.

The main difference between a has-been ball player and a real prospect is a contract.

Howard Burkett, son of Jesse, has joined the New Haven team to play third base.

Maybe "kids will be kids" is Connie Mack's explanation for his crew being in the cellar.

Walter Johnson never has played with any other American league club than Washington.

The American league pitchers never discovered Joe Jackson's weakness, but Ban Johnson did.

The Ruth-Kelly-Meusel home-run feud is causing heavy casualties among big league pitchers.

Since Hurler Eller has been restored to good standing the Cincy Reds will now carry the Hod.

Everett Scott, Red Sox shortstop, has played in more than 700 consecutive games. Great Scott!

Yam Yaryan, second-string White Sox catcher, has caught four years in professional baseball.

Benny Kauff has been acquitted of stealing automobiles and can now get back to stealing bases.

The St. Louis Cardinals and Browns are using the Browns' park for their games at home this season.

Skiff, the Pittsburgh catcher, ought to get a leave of absence to participate in the Interlake regatta.

Claude Satterfield, former University of Georgia pitcher and outfielder, has been signed by the Atlanta club.

The Pittsburgh club finally has located Pitcher Frank Herbert by placing him with the London club of the Mint league.

Babe Ruth likes to keep baseballs that he slaps for home runs. Some, however, never return from the next county.

The pitcher who is a consistent loser is like a man building castles in the air—doing a lot of work and getting no results.

The first triple play in either major league this season was made on May 18 by Young and Donie Bush of the Tigers, in a game with the Boston Red Sox.

This Speaker is making pretty good on his threat to stand pat with his 1920 team. The only additions he has left are Odenwald, Petty, Jeanes and Stephenson.

The Chicago White Sox have returned Joe Morris (Bennett) to the Tulsa Western league club. Manager Gleason kept him until the time Hunt was up, then made up his mind Joe would not do.

SIX-DAY RACE PLEASES FRENCH SPORTING FANS

The six-day "push-bike" race has made a tremendous hit in Paris. A French writer says: "This sporting trial comes to us from America. The match, uninterrupted for six days and six nights, would be monotonous enough if the public did not give it a touch of the picturesque. After the theaters a different public arrives. Men and women in evening dress took their seats beside the track, on what would be the lawn of a race course, where supper tables were arranged and champagne flowed."

BUDDY ENSOR RANKS AT TOP

Not as Great as Some of Old-Time Jockeys, but Outwits Riders of Present Day.

Is Buddy Ensor as great today as Tod Sloan, Danny Maher, Snapper Garrison and a few other great riders? Maybe not. Old-timers will stoutly deny Ensor's claim to sit with the immortals, but none of the present-day turf clan will question the statement that he ranks with the top rank jockeys of today. Perhaps he is a little beyond all of them.

Ensor's merits: Ensor sits upon a horse, delicately balanced as a feather and as light. He has the delicate hands of a master violinist, or watchmaker, or surgeon. Some say he is not strong enough to pull a heart-tearing Garrison finish. If Ensor keeps on outwitting other jockeys he won't have to make a rousing finish.

MILJUS CUSSES BILL KLEM

Brooklyn Pitcher Resents Being Called "Promising Pole From Pittsburgh"—Is Serbian.

Thomas S. Rice, the baseball expert of the Brooklyn Eagle, tells this one on a Robin pitcher: "John Miljus used to be called the 'promising Pole from Pittsburgh,' but he rose on his hind legs and told all and sundry that he was a Serbian by extraction, although born in this country."

"To prove he was a Serbian he began to cuss Bill Klem in a language which he said was the Serbian lingo. Bill thought John had swallowed a drink of water the wrong way and never knew that the pitcher was putting something over on him."

BASEBALL APPEALS TO JAPS

Proletariat Is Keen for American Game—Tennis and Golf Also Making Headway.

Progress moves with sure steps in Japan. The proletariat is keen for baseball and will stop a political meeting any time to go to see American ball players play their game. Tennis has got hold of the youths who are in college and golf is making such headway that the crown prince has become an excellent player. In athletic diplomacy Japan is equipped for both sides.

HAMP'S TIME SURE TO COME

Gap Johnson Has It Mapped Out, and It Will Be a Sore Day for the Bluffer.

"Hamp Slaughter has an interesting sort of fad," related Gap Johnson of Rumpus Ridge. "About once in so often he gets a few drams of bone-dry licker and a high fever, and shows up in the middle of the big road out yur. He flings his hat down in the dust and stomps on it, and yells that he's a man eater, and such as that, and can whip a certain black-hearted son-of-a-bitch-and-tuther living not more than a mile from yur. When I go out to inquire 'Which spectral black-hearted thus-and-so he means he says Zach Flatt, three-quarters of a mile up the road. So there ain't much to do but to excuse him. Then he goes fric-seeling off to Zach's place and repeats the performance. When Zach wants to know who he is referring to he says it's me. After that he rambles around norating that he's got us both bluffed. 'One of these days he's going to ketch me and Zach together, and find out 'is—yaw-w-w-n!—mistake.'—Kansas City Star.

Recalled Fond Memories.

The director, who has a reputation for being rather harsh and overbearing in his methods, was giving his leading man a tongue lashing that fairly turned the atmosphere blue. Through it all, however, the victim laughed gracefully against the wall and smiled happily.

"What the deuce are you grinning about?" barked the director. "Do you like to be cursed?"

"Why, yes, I rather enjoy it," chuckled the actor. "It recalls the good old days, you know, when I played Uncle Tom and was beaten to death every night by Simon Legree."—Film Fun.

The Test.

"How do you get along with Mr. Grumpson?"

"Well, I've been acquainted with him for some time, but I don't know yet whether he is a superficial grouch or a confirmed misanthrope."

"How do you propose to find out?"

"I've invited him to join me in a game of golf with nothing in my locker."—Birmingham Age-Herald.

ROUGH, BUT EFFECTIVE CURE

Why Alice Gollightly No Longer Bore People With Long Recital of Her Physical Ailments.

Pollie Dear and Mollie Love met out shopping one morning and immediately forgot all about shopping, time, hungry husbands at home, etc., in a "few minutes' chat.

Just then Alice Gollightly passed by. Each smiled sweetly at the other, and murmured:

"Good morning."

As soon as Alice had passed on, Pollie turned to Mollie and said:

"I notice Alice doesn't go round boring other people with her ailments as she used to."

"No," smiled Mollie; "she met a man who cured her completely."

"Oooh!" purred Pollie. "Who was he? Was he a doctor?"

"Oh, no!" answered Mollie. "She was telling this man some of her symptoms, when he remarked, 'It's strange how many of these things afflict people as they begin to grow old.' Since then she has held her tongue about them."

Workings of Life Detector.

When your husband comes home rather late and tells you he had an important business engagement all you have to do is to try it on the sphygmanometer. The sphygmanometer is an invention by William H. Marston of Harvard, by which he asserts a lie can be detected. Professor Marston says that when a person tells a lie, especially if he is under oath, there is an emotional reaction, affecting the breathing and the blood pressure. . . . The breathing of married men is seldom affected by a mechanical lie.—Syracuse Herald.

Definition of Flatterer.

Young Miss Betty, like all youngsters, had found a new word and it had to be put into service immediately.

"Daddy," she said. "What does the word flatterer mean?"

"Flatterer? You want to know what flatterer means?"

"Yes."

"Well, Betty, let's see—if I told your brother he was good looking, what would that be?"

"Foolin' him," Betty flashed back.

OPPORTUNITY FOR YOUNG MEN

President Harding urges every young man who possibly can, arrange to do so to attend one of the citizens' military training camps to be conducted by the War Department this summer.

In a statement made public this week, he expressed the hope that during his administration arrangements would be completed for giving military training to at least 100,000 young men each year.

"I hope every young man who can arrange it will attend one of the citizens' military training camps to be conducted this summer by the War Department in each of the nine army corps areas. In this way he will increase his worth to the nation and obtain individual benefits of priceless value to himself and to the community in which he lives.

"I hope to see established during my administration a comprehensive system of voluntary military training, for at least 100,000 men each year. Every young man who is willing to prepare himself for the defence of his country should be given an opportunity to do so.

"Our present national defence law established an economical and democratic military policy thoroughly consistent with our national traditions. It provides for a small regular army to be augmented by great citizen forces in the event of national emergency. This is our traditional military policy.

"But whereas in the past these larger war forces have been emphasized after the occurrence of an emergency, the new law wisely provides that the framework of these organizations shall be established and developed in time of peace, in so far as this is practicable through the voluntary service of our patriotic young men. The army of the United States as defined in the new law, comprises the regular army, the national guard and the organized reserves. Every patriotic citizen should encourage the development of these forces, each within its proper sphere."

THE FOURTH AT QUINCY

The historic city of Quincy, city of presidents, on July Fourth will hold the biggest celebration in its history. A short time ago the city council, with the approval of Mayor Bradford, made an appropriation for the erection of a memorial building in memory of its soldiers and sailors of all wars, to cost $250,000. Paul Rever post, G. A. R., and Boyd camp, U. S. W. V., working together, have planned a grand field day and are assured the support of all the other veteran, civic and fraternal organizations of the city. It is a forerunner of the erection of the building, and the proceeds of the entire affair will be used toward furnishing it when ready to be occupied.

At midnight of July 3 the festivities will be ushered in by the Military Order of the Serpent, familiarly known as the "Snax", which will hold a "crawl" through the principal streets to Faxon hall, Revere road.

The program on the holiday will include a grand military and civic parade, in which the Grand Army, Spanish War Veterans, the American Legion, Veterans of Foreign Wars, and marines from the battleship North Dakota and other organizations will take part. The battleship North Dakota will be here, and many nobles have been invited including Gov. Cox, Gen. Miles, and Gen. Edwards.

After the parade there will be a field day at the Fore River field with sports, music, midway, fireworks, etc.

"THE FOUR HORSEMEN"

The photoplay visualization of Vicente Blasco Ibañez' immortal story, "The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse", which is now in its second month at the Tremont Temple, Boston, is proving the greatest cinema sensation this country has ever known. This is indeed a broad statement when considering the mighty film productions that have worn this claim hitherto. But its verity remains unquestioned through the reception accorded it not only in Boston, but in the great cities of the country.

When it is said that the photoplay adaptation preserves intact the spiritual theme, character and drama of the original it is an estimate that stamps it as the greatest photoplay in the world. Nay, more, when it can truthfully be said that this screen translation magnifies these properties through the magic of the camera, then there can be no doubt in the most carping mind that here is the supreme achievement in photoplays. New Englanders have been realizing this as is testified through the fact that its presentations at Tremont Temple have met with a response in attendance exceeding that of any photoplay ever presented.

The showings are given twice daily at 2 and 8 P. M. Seats are reserved and may be procured in advance.

FARM LETTER

FARM HINTS FOR JUNE

By Edward Lukeman

This is the month when your garden and fruit trees will require close attention. Keep the sprayer going and this will clear your trees of gypsy and brown tail moths. I know many of you think spraying trees is unnecessary, and it is only useless work, and I imagine I can hear you saying that your father grew good apples and he did not have to resort to this method. Yes, this may be so. It is well however, to remember that the gypsy and brown tail moths are of recent introduction and this accounts for it.

You could say the same thing about potatoes, but it would be foolish to try to grow them now withish to try to grow them now without thorough spraying.

Have you made a second planting of sweet corn yet. If you have not you ought to, and it would be better to make about three more and then you will be able to enjoy green corn until Nov. 1. That surely is worth a little extra effort. If you want a yellow variety, try Golden Bantam, and if you like a white variety, try Stowell's Evergreen.

About this time your potatoes should be sprayed, or sooner if the bugs are active. This is something that should be taken seriously, otherwise you won't have much of a crop at the time of harvest.

With a very few exceptions, everything should now be planted and as soon as any crop is through bearing, gather it up at once and plant something else. You ought to try and grow two crops this year where other years you have grown but one. In this way, you double the capacity of your garden. Most anyone can grow one crop of anything planted. It takes some ability, and you have to be some hustler to grow two.

If you have a breathing spell from your garden work don't neglect your poultry. Keep the young chickens growing. These are the ones that are going to fill the egg basket next winter. Of course, in stating this, I assume they are from a good egg-laying strain. Of course if they are only mongrels, then you can't expect a great deal, because mongrels are at the very bottom rung in the ladder, and it's impossible to go lower. So no matter what you do in trying to improve them will surely be a gain and a gain with each bird even if only a small one, will amount to a good deal in the aggregate.

Give your pigs plenty of water these hot days. They will enjoy it, and make all the better growth for it. Feed them regular. While they don't have a wrist watch about them, you can't fool them when it is feeding time. Regularity is a great factor when it comes to pork making.

One of the most encouraging signs lately is the number of places in New York city where milk can be purchased for 10 cents per quart if you bring your own milk bottle and carry it away. This is something like a fair price, and will mean a greater demand than ever for one of the most nourishing foods known. It is more than a fair price for the women and children and incidentally longer lives for the city people.

Among the farm organizations, one of the foremost questions is, how to get the products of the farm to the consumer without passing through so many hands, and each one adding to the cost. The most successful method so far discovered is the co-operative market. It reduces the price to the consumer nearly one half, and gives a better price to the farmer than he could obtain from the middlemen. And it will make a better feeling toward the farmer, once city people get over the idea that the farmers are the ones who are robbing them.

Are you aware that the East is making a much better showing now in regard to farming according to the latest census. Texas leads in the value of farm products, while only a few thousand dollars separate California, Iowa, Illinois and Kansas, while New York, which is always looked upon as a money state, holds sixth place. This is a great gain, from ten years ago. More registered Holstein cattle are kept in this state than any other, while the fruit trees for the world's supply are almost entirely grown in the northern part, both the soil and climate being ideal for this business.

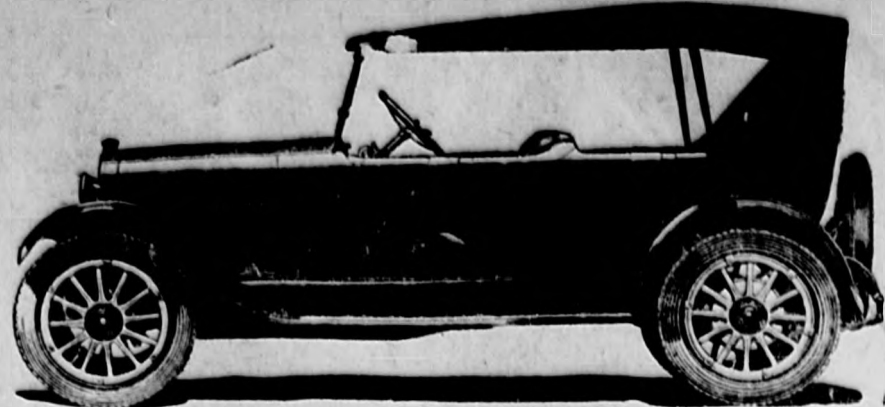

Regarding the fruit outlook for this year, I would state that the trees went through the winter in great shape. March was so warm that it forced the trees into blossoming early, while April was cold and wet, and the severe frosts of May 14 and 15 have greatly lessened the prospect of a big crop. With me, some peach trees look as if they will have a good crop, while others will have none at all. Strawberries are reduced in some places to about one third of a crop. Those who set tomato plants out before May 20 in the vicinity have lost them. It's always better to wait until all danger of frost is over before setting out any tender plants, and this is usually about May 20 in the vicinity of Boston. Better be sure than sorry. E. L.

WEBB RETIRES FROM RING

Freddie Webb has quit the boxing game and has settled down to married life and his trade in the shoe shop. Charlie Cotter, his former manager, made the announcement to friends in conversation this week.

Charlie, by the way, picks Dempsey to win over the French champion in about four rounds in their coming bout for the championship of the world in New Jersey next month. He also thinks the bout will be on the level.

An exchange remarks that the real talking machine was made out of a rib. Later inventors, however, improved on it and made one that can be shut off.—Earlville (Ill.) Leader.
